Arc The Lad—Walkthrough

It's time to get down to the nitty-gritty of this Strategy Guide, the reason you laid down your hard-stolen cash, risked your momma's ire, and gave trial and error the finger. In the following pages, you'll be enlightened and coached on every aspect of Arc the Lad I that you'll need to make you a success, thus impressing your weak-minded friends. While your synapses are reaching optimum speed, soak up the description below of how the monster charts scattered throughout the walkthrough work:

When two of these monsters "MORPH" into one, the result of that combination will be displayed as "COMBO". For example, when two Fire Elementals morph, the result of that combination is one Soul Flame. Likewise, when two Soul Flames morph, the result will be one Funeral Pyre.

See, that was easy enough, wasn't it? You're ready now...go ahead and jump right in!

Arc The Lad

In ancient times, people understood the delicate balance that existed between the physical world and the five Guardians—Earth, Fire, Water, Wind, and Light—who watched over humanity. In time, the Romalians, bent on global conquest, began to shatter the balance that existed between the two worlds. Now, the world is teetering on the edge of destruction. Only by using the power of the Ancient Ark to stem the dark tide will humanity have any hope of life.

The only one that possesses the power to use the Ark is a young lad—named, oddly enough—Arc. Ten years ago, Arc's father mysteriously disappeared during a ferocious blizzard. Since that time, Arc has been consumed with learning the fate of his beloved father. Now, Arc shall embark on a quest to discover what really happened that fateful night ten years ago. Along the way, he'll meet many new friends who shall become powerful allies. But does this slight lad really have the strength to find the power stones, rally the Guardians, and wield the power of the Ark?

Only time will tell...

BABY DID A BAD BAD THING

Kukuru's beginning to have her doubts that this relationship is gonna work.

Things start out simple enough. Too simple, in fact. A young girl named Kukuru and her creepy late-winter companion, the Mayor, are at the base of Guardian Peak on their way to the Flame Cion. According to legend, only one member of the Sacred Clan is allowed to enter the Cion Shrine located high atop the mountain. Fortunately for the not-so-trim Mayor, Kukuru is a member of the mile-high club (no, not THAT mile-high club, what kind of game do you think this is?), and is anxious to hit the mountain again.

Once she's voiced her apprehension for future events and her utter distaste for tradition, Kukuru begins the long trek up Guardian Peak, while the Mayor rubs his hands in glee and decides that is enough exercise to warrant a dumpty-cake break.

Inside the Cion Shrine sits the Holy Flame, a fire that is said to have been burning for three thousand years. It is here that Kukuru ponders her future. A future forged in ancient tradition. A future in which she'll be called to Palencia Castle to marry the prince when the new year begins. A future that she does not want! With this thought in her head, Kukuru takes out her frustration on the Flame Cion. The result? The slightly distasteful aroma of singed hair in the air, and the very unsettling absence of one very important three-thousand-year-old flame. Not a good thing.

Me. Me. Me. Geez, you'd think Kukuru was born in the 70s.

Kukuru returns and runs some lines from Rosemary's Baby with the Mayor.

With the flame out, a hideous voice booms through the chilled mountain air, screaming that the seal has been broken and that after three millennia it is now free!

After a brilliant observation by Kukuru, she makes her way back down the mountain to where the Mayor is waiting for her. As Kukuru walks on ahead, the Mayor mutters to himself things that can only be construed as traitorous... and who is this—Andel?

That night, the first blizzard in ten years descends upon the village.

PROPHECY

ARC'S HOUSE

Inside a house not too far from where Kukurū stood with the Mayor, a young lad tries in vain to open a locked chest to get to his father's armor and sword.

It was a night like this one, ten years ago to the day, when a blizzard raged and the lad's father disappeared atop Guardian Peak. This particular lad is known as Arc, and he is determined to return to the spot where his father was last seen all those years ago and unravel the mystery of his disappearance.

Unknowingly, Arc utters the exact same lines his father did years earlier when confounded by Polta's chastity belt.

Arc's mother attempts to convince him that his father is dead, but Arc steadfastly points out the fact that she's lied before, embarrassing her into silence by telling her that he KNOWS that babies don't come from heaven, and the stork doesn't drop them into chimneys. Okay, so that first part was left out of the game you got, but this next part IS in the game—really!

Arc refuses to believe that someone of his father's stature could be slain so easily. He tells his mother that if that was the case, then he must now avenge his father. With that, Arc's mother opens the locked chest, then begins to reminisce about the night her husband left for Guardian Peak, when he prophesied that Arc would one day leave for the mountain as well.

Mother: Not! This can't be happening! Why must you torture me so? I didn't mean to wed a martyr!

Sadly, mood-stabilizing drugs would not be invented for many hundreds of years, leaving Polta to suffer...

A GUILTY CONSCIENCE

Arc offers to fix the mess Kuku created. If he only knew the journey this little encounter would begin...

With the day's events wearing heavy on her mind, Kuku returns to Guardian Peak in an effort to set things right. It's here that she first meets our hero, Arc. The two discuss what's happening and what may have caused it. When Arc (who at this point is brimming with testosterone) hears that Kuku is planning on going to the Cion Shrine to relight the Flame, he snatches the torch from her hand and declares that he will be the one to do it—and that's FINAL!

It's on Guardian Peak that Arc meets his match in the Ark Ghoul, an evil creature who was released from three thousand years of imprisonment when the Flame was snuffed out. This baddie mistakenly thinks it was Arc who set him free. With Arc's defeat comes the realization that this was not the case. Oops!

Upon the Ghoul's departure, the blizzard ends and a circle of light (not to be confused with the poppy confection "Circle of Life") shines down on our little hot-headed hero, causing his strength to return. A voice from above, belonging to the Guardian of the Mountain, speaks to Arc, telling him to rise up and relight the Flame in order to vanquish the Ark Ghoul. The voice then tells Arc of his destiny, and bestows upon him the power he will need to defeat the monsters and help keep a promise made by his father ten years earlier.

"But...uh, I died and everything."

PREPARE TO FIGHT (CONTINUED)

Since Arc is alone in this battle, try to draw the Acid Slimes to him one at a time so he doesn't get surrounded, thereby taking too much damage all at once. Arc and the Acid Slimes have a higher chance of counterattacking if either's foe is faced during the attack, so have Arc attack from either the rear or the sides of the enemies to avoid getting hit in retaliation. This will be true in all future battles as well.

Tossing your rocks (no, not THOSE—yikes!), er. Stones is possible in this battle, but not necessary as the Acid Slimes have such a low Hit Point level and do so little damage to Arc that his normal attacks are perfectly adequate.

Moving up to the next level of the cliffs is accomplished by jumping up the face of each level. Also, to open a Treasure Chest on this or any other battlefield, you must attack it. Every action... attacking, defending, countering—even opening Treasure Chests—will gain you experience.

In defeating the Acid Slimes you should easily earn your first level up, after which you will be able to choose "Burn Ground" from Arc's Ability Ring. If you take too long during this battle, the Acid Slimes may split, forming more enemies for you to defeat (as an aside, the Hit Points of each slime is then halved, but the Experience Points you earn from their defeat is not). Then again, if you like fighting slimes, this is an easy place to gain some experience.

The "Results" of the battle are given upon its completion. The categories include how many enemies were defeated, items found or earned, and experience gained.

Whack the slimes before they split a bunch of times and hog all the welfare checks in Palencia.

Yes, burnt slime smells a LOT worse than singed hair.

THE START OF SOMETHING BIG

ure, Kukurū. We know your secret squat-prince-to-be fantasies are running wild right about now.

Back at the base of Guardian Peak, the Ark Ghoul confronts Kukurū as Arc makes his way up the mountain to relight the Flame Cion. Just as it seems that all is lost, Arc completes his task, and Kukurū is saved.

Within a few days, word of Arc's bravery has spread throughout all of Palencia. Thusly (sounds like an important word, doesn't it?), Arc is called to Palencia Castle by the King. He will have to leave his mother and home for a second time. Arc mumbles about sending money home and splits before another guilt trip from mom.

Along the way Kukurū appears. The two then travel together, with Kukurū telling him of her role in what may unfold as they walk through the woods on their way to Palencia Castle. At the Village Gate, just before they reach their destination, Kukurū expresses her desire to follow Arc in the fulfillment of his destiny.

STORYCHECK

Right after this sprint, Poco had to make an unscheduled stop at Krispy Kreme that may have just saved his life.

The first thing Arc encounters upon his arrival at the castle is a brigade of troops leaving, followed shortly thereafter by one who seems to have missed his morning wake-up call, but not enough evening snacks.

With the mere mention of his name (and without giving the knights at the gate so much as a shrubbery), Arc is admitted entrance to the castle.

While addressing the King, Arc notices his groovy alterna-lifestyle setup and reveals that his life's ambition is to be a deadhead, too. The King gives a thumbs-up and rambles for a while before mentioning that he's bummed that Garcia bit it, and that Acapulco gold is more like bronze these days. Okay...that wasn't in the game, either, but it DID happen.

Anyway, the part you no doubt saw picked up right after, when Arc talked about being bestowed with a gift of power from the Guardian of the Mountain, and about humanity's possible extinction. Though the royal Minister warns that Arc's words may be flights of fancy, the King exclaims that just before his brother, the Crown Prince, disappeared, he too spoke the same words. With things now seeming more than just coincidence, the King asks Arc to perform a task to prove whether or not he has been genuinely blessed with the power of the Guardian.

North of Palencia Castle is Colbo Plain, and it is there, with the help of the Palencia Army, that Arc must now travel and cleanse the monsters that have overrun it. If Arc truly has the power of the Guardian, the army will see and tell the King of it.

NEW ORDERS FROM THE KING

Of course this was long before the advent of man-delay, so Andel is pretty touchy about his "problem".

As the legend goes, humankind once angered the gods, and because of this they were nearly eradicated. The only thing that saved them was that the King pleaded with the gods for humankind to be spared. While the King was "distracting" the gods, two others, who were warned by the Spirits, made their way to Seiryu and sealed the inheritance of humankind in the Ark. It is said that the Ark is the only way to save humankind when it once again falls into peril—by an unknown hero breaking its seal.

"And, don't tell me this is another bad trip, man!"

Kukuru explains to the King that it has been written in the ancient manuscripts that she must travel with the hero and help him shape the future. Hearing this, the King grants Kukuru permission to go, despite the tauntings of the Minister, and even gives them use of his personal airship, docked at the Seiryu Skyport to aid in their long trek.

Once Arc and company leave, the Minister retreats to his chamber and contacts the master he truly serves. Arc may not have as easy of a time as he thinks with what the Minister is setting up for him in Millmana.

Inside the Audience Chamber, the King is understandably impressed with your fighting skills. When the Minister chastises you for speaking rudely to the King, we find out just who the mysterious Andel is. After the King is finished reprimanding the Minister, he asks for your help in finding the legendary "Ark", and begins to explain a legend from the ancient texts and how his missing brother ties into all this.

It seems the legend of the "Ark" is passed down from generation to generation within the royal family of Palencia.

Well, knowing that is better than nothing, but not much. What does it MEAN?

The King then goes on to say that his brother, the missing Crown Prince, was the only one who still believed in the legend—and that he hasn't been seen for twenty years. He disappeared shortly after entering the Toyoke Forest on his journey to Millmana in an effort to stop the war between it and Seiryu.

With the legend told, the King asks that you travel with Poco to Toyoke Forest and try to unravel the mystery of his brother and learn the location of the Ark and how to reach it.

Continue to select Seirya Skyport, and answering Not yet... four more times, for a total of five—yes, FIVE—times. If you've done everything correctly, Kuku will say something new. From here you'll be taken to the World Map. Now, select Palencia, and a special event with Tosh's adopted dad will begin.

Tosh's seriously loaded adopted dad (later, in Arc II, we find out his name was Monji) is standing at the castle gate arguing with the guards about the mistreatment of the people of Palencia. Once he realizes his words are falling on deaf ears, he quickly notices Kuku. After being propositioned, Kuku backhands the ol' drunk, and he leaves the scene.

You'll notice that the character sprite for Tosh's dad is actually that of a Doll Master. Since he was still in the process of being created, and it was time for the game to ship (in Japan that is), his sprite here is quite different from the one that comes later. Of course, in Arc II, Monji can be seen—for better or worse.

Head to the exit at the south and speak to the warrior who's to escort you on your way when you're finished in town. After telling him that you're ready, Kukuru gives him a little surprise and then you're off to the World Map.

Kukuru says this with a LITTLE too much relish, doesn't she?

At this point you have three new locations from which to choose: Nicarus Forest, Ruvag Woods or Sembara Marsh. While the Nicarus Forest isn't necessary, you may want to tackle it anyway. The enemies in the forest aren't quite as strong as those in the woods or marsh. This will allow you to gain some extra experience points for the weaker party members—namely, Kukuru.

If you'd like to complete the areas from the least to most difficult (as we've written them up), the order you'd travel them would then be: the Nicarus Forest, followed by the Ruvag Woods, and finally the Sembara Marsh.

As an aside, if you'd like to stock up on Stones, return to Capital HQ and talk to the child with the elderly man at any point before finishing both the Ruvag Woods and the Sembara Marsh. When spoken to he will give you a Stone. You can receive as many Stones as you'd like by repeatedly talking to the child. Though he says he only has five Stones, if you leave Capital HQ for the World Map, then return, he will have five more. And so on... Doing this is highly recommended, as they will come in extremely handy.

Being that this is, in a sense, a practice battle, you may complete it as many times as you wish to either strengthen your party or get used to how these types of enemies behave. The enemy set here will be the same each time you enter.

On this battlefield, to open the chest that you are unable to reach in the middle of the pond, you'll need to throw a Stone at it.

On the enemy side of things, the Skeletons not only have the ability to counter if you strike at them from the front, but due to their shields, they have a higher rate of blocking as well. A blocked attack delivers significantly less damage than a non-blocked attack would have. Too many blocks and counters combined can be a bad thing. One final note about the Skeletons is that when you kill them, their bones stay on the battlefield. As such, you must attack the piles of bones they leave behind to destroy them in order to complete the battle.

If you've chosen to continue on, the next stop on your journey may be the Ruvag Woods, which are northeast of the Nicarus Forest. The foes you will face here are stronger than the ones in the forest, so be sure to use Poco's Battle Drum to give yourself that extra edge.

One enemy to watch out for here in the woods is the Blood Weed. This foe, like the Acid Slimes, has the ability to cast "Shed Seeds", which spawn more Blood Weeds. Keep in mind that when this occurs, both the new and original enemy will then have half the Hit Points of a normal Blood Weed. The Blood Weed's Pollen Blast does massive damage to any character struck with it, so keep Kuku or Poco nearby in case you need one of their curing abilities. Allowing the Blood Weed to split here is a good way to raise experience with only limited risk.

To reach some enemies on this battlefield who may hide in seemingly unreachable areas, you may have to jump across patches of tall grass.

The warrior, now awake after his little nap and traveling with you, leads you deep into the monster-infested Toyoke Forest. With your party now in significant danger, as per General Yagun's orders, the warrior makes like a tree and leaves. You must now fight your way through the forest.

TOYOKE FOREST

This battle introduces a new face to your list of enemies, the Ninja. The Ninjas will toss out bombs that explode all around them if their Hit Points drop too low, so your safest way of dealing with them would be to throw Stones or Small Bombs at them from a distance. If you have nothing to throw, Arc will probably be your best bet at one-on-one fighting, since he is most likely your strongest character and most able to withstand the blast.

This Ninja picked exactly the wrong moment to release a little ballast, and made the flames much worse.

STORYCHECK

Of course, they're no good to anyone if they explode from eating too much, either...

With the battle behind you, you come across a section of the forest that looks very different. Water glistens and the grass is a beautiful shade of green. As Arc, Poco, and Kukum are admiring it, the Forest Spirit appears and tells Arc that his father visited her twenty years ago, back when he went by his true title—the Crown Prince of Seiryu. Yes, you heard right, Arc is descended from royalty.

When asked why his father left Palencia before his turn as King, the Guardian tells Arc that those who were envious of the Crown attacked his father. It was then that Arc's father Yoshua met the Forest Spirit in Toyoke Forest. Though Yoshua was near death, the Spirit saw fit to heal his wounds. With his strength returned to him, Yoshua revealed to the Spirit that the fighting between the people of the lands was too much for him.

Arc is then told that mankind is in serious danger. Destroying nature to further his own needs only hurtles man towards his own destruction. With this knowledge, the destiny of mankind now lies in Arc's hands. The Hero Crest, a gift from Yoshua, is then received.

SECRET CHECK

It cures almost anything, except perhaps involuntary wood from seeing rikkid fairies...

BACK FOR SECONDS

Make it a habit to return to the Forest Spirit throughout the course of the game. Only by returning to talk to her will you be able to receive two special items: the Throw Scroll and Silk Belt. A word of warning: if you miss returning for even one of the events, you'll miss out on being able to gain these valuable items. To make it easy—that's what you want from a strategy guide—we're providing this handy dandy little chart for you to use. And, as a special bonus, we're going to throw in Secretchecks throughout the rest of the walkthrough to remind you when it's time to run back to the peepshow with the Forest Spirit.

Now, that you've just received the Hero's Crest from her, go back to Toyoke Forest and a Cure-All is handed over to ya. Now leave and go to Seiryu.

Following the Spirit's advice, make your way to the Millmana Skyport and from there board the airship for Seirya. Since some of the foes you will face back in Seirya are rather strong, it would be wise to have your characters in the range of levels 12 to 15 before you leave Millmana.

At this point, before heading to the castle you'll notice that two new locations have appeared on the World Map in Seirya. These areas, Quina Hill and Karagan Plain, are both training-type battlegrounds and will stay open for you to fight in for the remainder of the game. Since the enemies you'll find in these locations are extremely strong for this early in the game, you may want to bypass them for now and return to them later when you've either accumulated a few more party members, or when your levels are a bit higher so that the damage you deal isn't trivial (which at this point it probably would be). However, if you do decide you want to try your luck, know that Quina Hill contains a Witch Doctor, Demi Monk, Boogie Man, Dark Monk, Mad Monk, Voodoo Man, Wicked Monk, and an Evil Bonze... Meanwhile in the King's Audience Chamber, Arc is about to deliver his report on the trip to Millmana to the Minister (apparently the King has fallen ill), when the Captain of the Guard rushes in. As soon as the Minister hears that Tosh (the man you saw in chains) has been suitably detained, he cuts Arc's report short.

SEIICHI KURANISHI—SENIOR EDITOR, Dengeki PlayStation®

What were your first impressions of Arc the Lad?

When Arc the Lad was made available, first we saw the screen shots. To tell you the truth, at that time, I wasn't that surprised. We didn't particularly think that there was going to be anything new here from the existing game platforms—I mean in terms of concepts, however, when we actually played the games, we were very surprised. The catch phrase for the first Arc the Lad game in Japan was "light and sounds RPG." It was precisely what that phrase suggested. It was a very high quality presentation and the sounds...and the characters actual speaking, and that kind of thing was placed all throughout the game. This kind of RPG never existed on a platform before the introduction of the PlayStation® hardware. So we were very surprised by that.

What do you think of the U.S. release of Arc the Lad?

I am envious—very envious. I almost wish that they could re-release it in Japan the same way—just eliminate the parts that I am in, in the video and release the rest. What I would wish for the American players is please play Arc the Lad 1 and 2 in chronological order—one after the other. If you start with Arc the Lad 3, that might be OK, but I wouldn't recommend starting to play with Arc the Lad 2 without first playing Arc the Lad 1.

At this point our heroes make the scene. When Arc can't decide what course of action to take, Kuku takes out a mirror. The mirror, passed down from generation to generation within Kuku's clan, glows brightly to show that Tosh is on the side of righteousness. That's all it takes to convince Arc which side he needs to back in the coming fight.

Of course Poco is playing dumb. He's been in the storehouse before on midnight snack raids.

VOICES

RYOJI AKAGAWA—EXECUTIVE PRODUCER OF ARC COLLECTION

One of the best parts of the series is the ability to import save data from one game to the next. How did you go about implementing this into the series?

Yes, I came up with this idea and when I suggested that we do things a certain way to the R&D people, they said it was going to be very tough to do that, but they nonetheless did it, which pleased me immensely. For the old type CD-ROM RPG, for that type of old cartridge-type of RPG, when you finished playing one game, that was basically the end. No matter what one does, you could only play within one game. Because of the memory card system—this is one of the PlayStation's special features, there are memory capabilities so I thought we might be able to utilize this system and make something out of it. I thought it might be interesting if we could see one character that players developed in one game, and then we might be able to see what happened to this character in the next story. I came up with this notion myself, but it was not an easy goal to accomplish. It was very difficult to achieve this and the staff struggled a lot to achieve this but we eventually succeeded in the end. I believe that a good percentage—10% or multiples of that...I believe that various elements of Arc's success is due to this system. Hence, I believe that a considerable portion of Arc's success is due to the wide acceptance of this system.

When word slips that the King's brother was your father, the Minister cries blasphemy and then accuses you of being a rebel spy. While he doesn't believe the Minister, the King does ask if you have any proof of your lineage. All it takes is for Arc to flash the Hero Crest and the King knows the truth about your father. What the King still doesn't understand is the connection between the Ark, the Forest Spirit and his brother the Crown Prince. All Arc can offer on that topic is that his father made a promise to the Forest Spirit to try to save humanity.

Once at Arc's House you see that it has been reduced to rubble, his mother nowhere to be found. When all seems hopeless... Mail Call! It's a letter from Arc's father. The letter was written recently, so Arc's father Yoshua is still alive. He writes that the "Ark" you need to find to save mankind is in Seirya, but there's a catch... to control its power you'll need to obtain the blessings of the Guardians first. These blessings will come in the form of "Power Stones", given by each of the Guardians as they deem you worthy. The letter closes with the location of the ancient book you'll need to begin your search for the Ark. You must travel to the Ancient Monolith and seek out the circle of stone.

Before heading to the Ancient Monolith you may want to return from the World Map to the ruins of your home. If you search the inside northern wall of the house you'll find the first of four pieces of the legendary Romancing Stone.

GOKEN, IS THAT YOU?

EVENT CHECK!

Ancient Monolith

Illusion World

The Ancient Monolith is located just north of Arc's House in Touvil.

As Arc begins to translate the writings on the Ancient Monolith, your party is transported to the Illusion World.

At the center of the battlefield, a large foe called the Illusion Lord holds an old man in its massive hands. This man is Gogen, and he's been waiting here for more than three thousand years.

Don't be fooled by the fact that there aren't many enemies or that the battlefield is on the small side; between the high Hit Points of the Illusion Flames and the damaging magic attacks of the Illusion Lord, your party can be wiped out very quickly here.

Begin by concentrating on the four Illusion Flames, focusing on one at a time so they reduce in number quicker. By the time the flames are gone, the Illusion Lord will have run out of Magic Points and be left with only the ability to attack physically. At this point merely keep your distance and attack the Illusion Lord with projectiles such as Stones or Bombs. If you get close enough to hit it with your weapons it will counter with a highly damaging triple attack. If you stay away, the Illusion Lord will be forced to skip its turn.

If you're defeated and need more Stones, you can go back and fight several practice battles in the nearby Colbo Plain, as the Fire Elementals may drop them upon their defeat.

Once the battle ends and the introductions are out of the way, Gogen tells you that he is in fact "the book" that Arc's father spoke of in his letter. You then realize that this encounter was a test of your strength, and that by passing it Gogen now knows that you are the true hero and worthy of his guidance.

Gogen is not especially...sry.

Arc asks Gogen how to gain the power of the Ark. The answer is simple—all you need to do is save the five Guardians who bind the world together: Earth, Water, Fire, Wind, and Light. If each Guardian accepts you, they will entrust you with a stone that embodies their power. Once you have all five stones you can then break the seal of the Ark. Sounds easy, huh?

With a glance at the return address on the last letter from Arc's father (after a hint from Gogen), you know that you'll need to start your quest for the five Guardians in Alatos. Since Alatos is so far away, the King's airship will be a necessary form of transportation.

Gogen then joins your party as a guide to the five Guardians. Not only does he bring with him the knowledge of great magic, but also another piece of the Romancing Stone.

When you've collected enough Stones, head to Palencia Castle to both update the King on your findings so far, and to ask permission for the use of the royal airship Silver Noah. The King gives you full use of the Noah as well as a special musical instrument for Poco called the Wild Lion Drum. Turns out, his shop is only a short distance north of Alatos Skyport. Here is where you'll find more information about the Light Guardian. The backward talkin' man from the Skyport and proprietor of the shop is named Chongara. He tells you that if you get a treasure for him from some nearby ruins, he'll tell you the whereabouts of the Light Guardian. The treasure he covets is called a Summon Pot. FORBIDDEN RUINS—BASEMENT FLOORS 1 THRU 5

You begin your trek into the depths of the ruins on Basement Floor 1. The ruins go much deeper than five floors, but bear in mind that the lower you go, the tougher the enemies will get, so save the curiosity for later.

To reach Treasure Chests in areas which seem unreachable, simply hop over the walls. Since you need to descend several floors in this dungeon, the battles will not end once all the enemies have been defeated as they usually do. Rather, just end one party member's turn on the stairs opposite where you began (the same goes for going back to the surface level, only in reverse). Because of this, the entire dungeon is treated as one battle. Keep in mind that although any status effects that have afflicted your characters will wear off, you do not get all Hit and Magic Points when you reach each new floor.

On Basement Floor 2, Gogen's Explosion ability can come in handy if enemies bottleneck in the hallways.

The Dark Priests on Floors 4 and 5 can cast a "Silent" spell, so be sure your healers avoid them.

With your levels in the high teens, Poco's Battle Drum will help out on Basement Floor 5. The item Chongara sent you to fetch for him can be found in the chest at the end of the left-hand passage on Floor 5.

With the Summon Pot safely in your inventory, it's time to leave the ruins for now. Before doing that, however, it would be a good idea to bring your characters to around level 20 while you're here so that they may fare better in the upcoming battles. You can venture lower at this point, but it's definitely at your own risk. Remember, you have to fight your way out to the first floor again, and the enemies you defeated previously on each level will have respawned.

Once you emerge, head back to Chongara's Shop to make a trade.

Opening chests in the dungeon is as easy as whacking on them with whatever's handy.

Once you've got the Summon Pot, hightail it out of this hellhole for a while.

South of Chongara's Shop you'll find the Azenda Highlands. It's here that you'll find the first of the five Guardians you seek. Don't expect to just stroll in and speak to the Guardian though; its chamber is infested with several powerful creatures.

For this battle, take heed of the old saying, "there's strength in numbers", and band everyone together. This way your stronger characters can defend the others, and the ones with healing abilities won't be too far away when they're needed. Stones and other projectile objects are valuable assets for some of your weaker characters in that they won't have to get right next to the enemies to do damage. Be wary of closing in on the Stone Golem... if you do, it may self destruct with its Bomb spell and take a few of you out with it (and cost you the Deity Fist).

Don't forget that Stones are useful for opening chests you otherwise would never be able to reach. Chongara's Mofly Summoning ability can also call forth a creature whose Abilities include creating bridges to some of the more out-of-the-way chests. If the Mofly needs more Magic Points, allow it to be killed then re-summon it.

One little-known element of fighting Stone Jackals is the flammable gaseous cloud they emit when scared.

The Light Guardian then gives you the Light Stone and the King's Image to help you should you need them.

Having now fulfilled his ten-year-old agreement with Arc's father, Chongara takes the King's Image and returns to his shop. Your party, on the other hand, heads straight for the Alatos Skyport.

No sooner do you tell the pilot at Alatos Skyport that you're ready to take the Silver Noah to your next destination than Chongara comes running back... begging you to take him with you.

Bad news: The item gets broken (I guess it really wasn't that great). After finding the item, Chongara tries to hide the item from his new friends, but Tosh forcefully takes the item from him. Of course, Chongara isn't going to let someone else have it. So he takes it back. Now, Kukuru gets involved, and during their bitch slapfest the item is broken. Great, guys! Proving Grounds

It seems as though Iga was paying attention when you were speaking, because he joins forces with you to combat his former master.

Breaking your party into two groups works well against the Novice Monks. Place Tosh, Arc, and Poco on one team and Chongara, Kukuru, Iga, and Gogen on the other. Splitting the characters this way allows both teams to have a healing character (Poco/Kukuru) as well as a heavy hitter or two (Tosh, Arc and Iga). After defeating the Novice Monks, have everyone converge on the Archmonk's true form... the Amaidar Monk. At this point you might want Kukuru or Poco on full healing duty to avoid any unnecessary deaths.

Once the Monks have been defeated, Iga decides to travel with you up Mt. Amaidar to see the Earth Guardian. You're then off to the World Map.

Gogen's been deprived for so long, he calls ANYTHING entertaining. Yes, even that.

Mt. Amaidar

Once you've chosen Mt. Amaidar from the World Map, it's time to fight your way up the mountain (you didn't think there'd be a comfy tram waiting, did you?).

For this encounter, use Poco's Battle Drum as soon as possible so that you get maximum coverage while everyone is still grouped together. Take out the group of Wild Hemo-jis to the right first. This will give the enemies on the upper section of the battlefield a chance to start coming down the main path in small groups. While dealing with Wild Hemo-jis, be careful of their Hemo-ji ability, as it turns affected characters into half-Hemo-ji, half-human creatures (the effect wears off after a few turns). Though you will still be able to control these characters, they will have almost no Abilities and do less damage than normal. Once the Wild Hemo-jis to the right are finished, bring your stronger party members towards the advancing groups of enemies. Even if Poco is not one of your better fighters, bring him along as well—his Lion Drum ability can deliver serious damage to a line of foes. Like the Acid Slimes, the Water Slimes have the ability to split, creating a clone of themselves but with half the Hit Points. Gogen's Thunderstorm ability dishes out quite the punishment to these meddlesome blobs. If any enemies hide along the right-hand edge of the upper section, you'll need to make your way to them by taking a long walk around the altar.

Actually, this is the beginning of a very bizarre love triangle. Gogen still won't talk about it.

You are the wind beneath those...uh, things.

SNATCH THE PEBBLE FROM MY HAND...

Seeing the error of his ways, as well as your noble intent, Iga asks if he might travel with you. He feels that the journey may strengthen his mind so that it matches his physique. Iga is welcomed with open arms. When the wrongs have been righted, Iga vows to return to the Amaidar Temple.

Iga's pretty bummed here. Nothing funny about that.

AMAI DAR TEMPLE PROVING GROUNDS

If you return to the Amaidar Temple at any time from now on, it can be used as a training ground, with matches getting harder after each victory. Acid Slimes, Fire Elementals (may morph into Soul Flame and Funeral Pyre), Doll Masters, Giant Bats, Water Slimes, Wild Hemo-jis, Vampire Bats, Soul Flames (may morph into Funeral Pyre), Mad Puppeteers, Blood Slimes and Funeral Pyres will test your strength and stamina. Should you beat every wave of foe thrown at your party, the monks of the Amaidar Temple will reward you with a Monster's Fang. In addition to the fang, after defeating the group of Wild Hemo-jis, Chongara will see a pure Hemo-ji, the result of which is that he learns the Hemo-ji Guardian Force ability. Once you've gone through all eleven challenges the Amaidar Temple has to offer, the monks will turn you away should you return.

ANYTHING NEW?

"They had nothing of this sort at the Temple. It is quite...uplifting."
— Iga

Now that Iga has joined the party, and the blessing of the Earth Guardian has been bestowed on Arc, it's time to make another journey back to our favorite nekkid nymph in the forest.

After telling you that you're nothing without her, she reminds you to remember the wisdom of the Earth Guardian and hands over another Cure-All. Now, if you've done all of these Secretchecks, she'll also give you the Throw Scroll!

Once she's done talking, leave her and head to Niedel. The next time you return will be once the Wind Guardian has given you his blessing.

OOPS!CHECK

During the translation process we found that the Throw Scroll wasn't actually in the game. After checking it out, we discovered that originally the Throw Scroll was to be given to you after defeating the Boogie Man at Mt. Amairar. However, this was changed so that they give you the Antidote Ring. The Throw Scroll was never put back into the game.

We decided to add back in the Throw Scroll so that it would be of some use during the game, and not just stuck somewhere in the code. So make sure that you visit the Forest Spirit at the right times so that this previously lost item can now be found.

Inside the Arena Courtyard, talk to the Official standing between the horse-creature statues to sign yourself up for the tournament. The reward for winning the contest is the Wind Orb, and though it is regarded as quite the fabulous prize, it also carries with it a terrible curse... those who possess it may die a sudden and unnatural death!

With the speech over, you're ushered back out into the Courtyard. Once again speak to the Official between the statues, telling him you're ready to have your first bout. If you talk to the Official with a party member other than the one you've chosen to compete in the tournament he will inform you that if you change characters mid-tournament you'll have to start over. During the Tournament you'll face five opponents. After each victory you'll be sent back to the Courtyard where you'll need to seek out the Official near the statues in order to continue on. Similar to your match against Iga at the Amador Temple, good accessory choices would include the Fiend Statue, Counter Bracelet, the Armor Stone, the Short Sword, as well as the Hit Scroll or the Senior Bandanna.

The first two opponents are rather weak, so you shouldn't need to worry about healing until you make it into the semi-finals against the Black Knight. After that, in the finals match, you will face a Mad Monk who has the ability to cast Divine Retribution—an ability that is the same as Kukur's Divine Judgment. After besting the Mad Monk your final opponent will be last year's winner... an Assassin. Remembering to attack from the sides or rear will go a long way towards your surviving this battle. As with the Ninjas, in an attempt to take you out with him, this foe detonates bombs upon your knocking him down to a low Hit Point level. As such, you may want to heal yourself before delivering the final blow.

With your win against the Assassin, Rock Rockoll crowns you champion of the Arena. Along with the title you receive the coveted Wind Orb.

This will be your fifth time seeing her, and still she lectures you on the importance of taking care of the environment. Okay, we get the picture: mankind is ruining the world, and fur is bad! "All fur?" To which she...oh, we just won't go there.

Since you put up with her speech, she once again rewards you with—go ahead, you can guess it—a Cure-All.

Now, it's time to say goodbye once more and head to the land of Zoriban to visit the Water Guardian.

SECRET CHECK

Not only is there a secret tournament option here, there's a secret OOPS!check, too!

THE BLACK TOURNAMENT

If you didn't get enough of the Arena yet, remember this little trick to open the alternate Black Tournament! To get this option to open up, you need to:

- 1) Have the Cheer Trumpet (see page 70)
- 2) Have defeated Choko (see page 95)
- 3) Have a save at the end of the game, after fighting the evil doppelgangers (see page 80)

Once you've finished the game, go to the title screen and select the save with the finish flag set (the one you chose when Are I asked if you wanted to save before the closing credits). When you return to the Nibel Arena, a new option will be available: Take part in the black tournament. By selecting this option, you'll be allowed to fight in the Black Tournament. If Chongara enters the tournament, he can then use his Search ability to add these doppelgangers to the Monster book. Completists should find this a lot easier than trying to Search them during the final battle.

There's also an OOPS!check within this secret. The confirmation menu has the cursor mis-aligned, and doesn't seem to let you select the first option. Actually, it IS selecting right internally. The top position is choice one, and the bottom position is choice two. This was the result of the second being too long and an invalid parameter being passed to the function internally. Since it's so out of the way, it apparently was only checked early in testing and not re-checked when the second option text was changed. Oops!

IT'S NOT NICE TO FOOL WITH MOTHER NATURE

Gogen can't help but chuckle because he knows that time isn't the only thing short that Tosh knows about.

You're met on the Zariban Skyport docking platform by an emissary of the Saryu tribe—sent by none other than Arc's father. Follow him to the village of Saryu, located to the southwest of the Skyport and listen to what he has to tell you. Legends say the people of Saryu are descendants of those from the Azenda Highlands who made this desert their home back when it was fertile and water was plentiful. This was nearly 1000 years ago. It all changed when a merchant from Romalia discovered energy stones in this land. One thing led to another, and before you knew it the mining plant built to harvest the energy stones had stripped the land bare. Some say it is a wound that nature itself may never recover from. As the emissary finishes his sad tale, a large beam strikes Saryu Village in the distance. It's a good thing you didn't arrive sooner, or you may have been destroyed with it.

As you rush into the decimated village, the emissary begins a frantic search for the village Elder. In your party's attempt to find survivors, you stumble across some of those responsible for the attack on Saryu Village.

After witnessing this entire village being wiped out by a massive explosion, no one's interested in comedy here.

VOTES

RYOJI AKAGAWA—EXECUTIVE PRODUCER OF ARC COLLECTION

What were some of the things you wanted to incorporate into this series?

I have studied a lot of pre-existing RPG games and after I studied these existing RPGs, we still wanted something different from the RPG format for which we had a lot of ideas. Of course, right now it is considered normal to do so, but at that time we wanted to include CG movie segments and for the first time, use voice effects when the characters were involved in fight scenes. This was also the first attempt to link the saved data from game 1 to game 2. I believe we had such a deep treasure of ideas.

How did you go about creating the characters?

There is a character called Tosh that we had certain grand ambitions for...I believe that popular supporting characters in RPG have certain specific features and types that become popular. I don't know what the proper phrase in English would be, but the character with certain problems—the dirty hero but in the end, he gravitates to the side of justice. This is the type of character that I very much wanted to create. I had certain ambitions about this character and I felt that there was a possibility that this character could become more popular than Arc. Just as I thought, there are a good number of people who are fans of Tosh.

While the Necromancers can cast Thunderstorm, if your levels are in the mid-to-high twenties you shouldn't have much to fear from them. Poco's new Atrophy Horn, an ability which lobbs bombs onto the targeted enemies, fares well in this battle. As usual, Gogen's Thunderstorm should be a favorite here. Physical attacks may be the way to go for Arc, Iga and Tosh, and since Kukuru's attack spells don't do much damage against these foes, her role in this battle should be that of healer.

Like the Stone Golem in Alatos, if you whittle the Fire Golem too low in Hit Points without killing it, it will detonate a bomb in order to self-destruct. Should this happen, you will not receive the Hawk Statue. To stop this from happening, converge on the Fire Golem with your characters just after it has taken its turn. VOICES

Do you think Arc was a trendsetting RPG?

Yes very much so, this game was a trendsetter. When we talked about doing an RPG for PlayStation®, we wanted to reach people who had never played an RPG as well as those that had played many RPGs. We didn't want to make the battle so difficult in the game just to prolong the playing time of the game. So normal people will play at a normal rate and finish in the average amount of time. It was our original concept as creators of this game, to have the player complete the game to the finishing scene once they had begun to play. Arc 1 is a game that people can complete in about 10 hours if they are playing at an average rate. We didn't want people to prolong the playing time due to players wasting time on useless features and end up giving up or abandoning the game in the middle. I think most people who played Arc 1 successfully reached the end of the game and I believe this game created a trend for more user-friendly RPG games.

Why did you choose to have the hero of the series called "Arc"?

A-R-C is a spelling that means character or personality. And there is this boy who has the same name, spelled Arc, who is the main character. That was the original idea. Arc also has a linguistic meaning of an archery type bow and this is also used in a manner such as we are conducting a play on words.

Basement Bio Lab

On the docking platform of the Zariban Skyport, Gogen once again uses the most recent Power Stone acquired to reveal the hiding place of the next Guardian. In this case, the fifth and final Guardian and stone you seek, that of fire, can be found beneath Palencia Castle in Arc's homeland of Seirya.

After a quick flight to Seirya, choose Palencia Castle from the World Map, and your party finds themselves sneaking into the warehouse where they first fought alongside Tosh. There they follow a mysterious man, using the Basement Elevator to take them to the Basement Bio Lab. In the lab, you're spotted by a scientist who recognizes you as Arc. In an effort to stop you from freeing the Fire Guardian trapped in a containment tank behind him, the scientist drinks a liquid from a test tube which transforms him into a Wyvern. The battle for the last Power Stone then begins.

A conference is better in the round.

BASEMENT BIO LAB

By now you should be familiar with how to fight the Blood Slimes and Wicked Monks, so that leaves only one new enemy—the Wyvern. With the ability to fly over objects a land-based foe would have to walk around, the Wyvern quickly appears on the battle's frontline. Those without high magic defense should be wary of the Wyvern's Death Wing ability. Strong physical attacks will make short work of this flapping foe.

THE OLD "SECRET LAB IN THE BASEMENT" PLOTTWIST

After critiquing Arc's education, the Fire Guardian decides to help.

After besting the scientist, your party converges on the Fire Guardian being held in a containment tank at the top of the Bio Lab. The captive Guardian tells you of how Andel and his scientists are draining his energy in order to speed up the development of Scirya. After a plea from the Fire Guardian, Arc steps forward and breaks the tank open. Though you've given the Guardian his freedom, it is not enough to sway him into handing over his Fire Stone... not until Arc gives him a sob story and flashes those sad puppy-dog eyes, that is! Not only do you get the fifth and final Power Stone, but Chongara is given Rai-jin, another of the fabled seven Guardian Forces.

Just when you think everything is going your way, the scientist you fought as the Wyvern crawls forward and triggers the lab's self-destruct mechanism. You now have sixty seconds to evacuate the premises.

Your escape in the elevator is cut short by more of Andel's minions. As Arc and Kukuru attempt to stall the enemy's advance, the rest of your party continues upwards.

Since your team for this battle consists of only Arc and Kukurū, it would definitely be wise to re-equip them with your best Accessories. For Arc, a Power Wrist, Kukurū's best choices include the Armor Stone, Fiend Statue, Goddess Amulet and Hyper Boots.

Only from Water Guardian
Arc's Gale Flash causes adequate destruction if it's leveled up enough. Kukurū's Divine Judgment ability can hit more than one target if the enemies get close enough together... and since this field is on the smaller side, that happens quite often. Be prepared to heal Kukurū after practically every hit she takes, as those Shadow Skeletons can strike pretty hard if she doesn't block. As usual, after the fight, all bone piles remaining on the battlefield must be destroyed for the battle to end.

The odds aren't nearly as bad as the last fight, as this encounter only pits you against two Fate Dragons.

A few of Arc's physical attacks are more than enough to kill each of the dragons. Keep an eye on Kuku's Hit Points; she'll be distracting the Fate Dragon Arc's not attacking, but it will do her in fast.

With the Fate Dragons out of the way, it's a short ride out of this hellhole.

He speaks of Anel being a spy from Romalia, and that they are looking for the Ark in the hopes that it will grant them immense power! Before he can apologize for the real reason your father left Scirya, the King dies in your arms. No time for grieving now, Arc—RUN!!!

It's clear now why no one calls Arc by his last name. "Ricolne?" Yeah, right...

SINCE I HAVE NOTHING BETTER TO DO...

By this point, almost no one even notices that she's naked.

You've found the Fire Guardian, had the King die in your arms, been labeled a murderer by Andel, and are now running for your lives—seems like the perfect time to head back to Toyoke Forest to visit the Forest Spirit.

The Forest Spirit gives you a nice speech about conservation, and not to take more than your share from nature. She also mentions the fact that cry-baby Arc has shed tears for the Fire Guardian—isn't that special? After the speech, you're handed another Cure-All.

Now it's time to go extinguish that Flame Cion for the last time. Oh wait, isn't this where the game started?

Heh...hehe...she said "parted."

After fighting your way down the Guardian Peak, it's time to take your last trip to Toyoke Forest.

Once there, it may come as a complete shock to everyone, but the Forest Spirit has nothing more to impart to you. She hands over another Cure-All. Now, if you've done all of these Secretchecks, she'll also give you the Silk Belt.

Don't worry! We'll see her again...in Arc II, but in better resolution.

GUARDIAN PEAK

High atop Guardian Peak, Arc and Kukurū are joined by the others... and just in time, too, as it seems the Ark Ghoul wasn't the only creature released when the Flame was put out.

With Accessories like Power Wrist, Phantom Gauntlets and the Deity Fist equipped, Tosh, Arc and Iga may fare better using physical attacks in this battle. Aside from that, Arc's Gale Flash, Iga's Ryusei-Baku, Gogen's Thunderstorm and Poco's Lion Drum are all good Abilities to use against these enemies.

In order to cross some of the gaps to the main section of the battlefield faster, you can have Chongara summon Mofly. Mofly can then create a bridge with its land-making ability. When attacking the Wizards, don't group your characters too close together. That particular foe can cast Diamond Dust, which has the potential to do fifty or more points of damage to your party members with low magic defense.

With the battle behind you, it's time to hot-foot it down the mountain, as the Ark Ghoul is waiting at Sabatigo Falls—the home of the Ark!

Sabatico Falls can be found on the World Map just below Touvil. Once entered you will find not one but FIVE Ark Ghouls and THREE Arch Fiends.

Forget physical attacks and concentrate on using your more powerful Abilities. Arc's Gale Flash, Poco's Lion Drum, and Iga's Ryusei-Baku do decent damage... however, Tosh's Shinkuzen and Gogen's Thunderstorm (is there ever a time where this ability isn't useful?) deal out massive damage to the Ark Ghouls.

Watch out for Dust Ruin from Ark Ghouls; it hits more than one target if they're in close proximity, and can do upwards of sixty-five points of damage on even your stronger characters.

be able to return to the World Map and from there do more level-raising, side quests or item-gathering if you feel you need to before committing to the final sections of the game. However, if you choose Of course!, then Arc will use the five Power Stones to create a doorway leading inside Sabatico Falls.

In the cave beyond the falls, the five Power Stones align atop an altar. This and the purity in your hearts awaken a force within the Ark below. The force puts you to a test to decide whether you're truly worthy of receiving its power. You're now sent to the Illusion World to fight "Dark" versions of your entire party.

Your first objective in this battle should be to get rid of Dark Gogen, as his Abilities can wipe out your party fast. Once he's out of the way, Dark Poco, Dark Arc and Dark KukurU need to be eliminated so they don't use their healing Abilities. Though Dark Tosh and Dark Iga are strong, without the others to rejuvenate them, they'll fall quickly. Dark Chongara should be left until last, since he poses no real threat.

If you're trying to fill in Chongara's Monster Book, your best bet is to unequip your party's Accessories so you don't accidentally kill your foes with counterattacks.

Arc's Slow Foe, Poco's Slow Bass and Speed Ocarina, as well as Gogen's Dream Knock, will prove extremely useful in either of these scenarios.

Sabatico Falls Interior

With the final test of his worth now over, Arc is deemed the chosen one. The voice from the Ark then gives you a group a speech on nobility... during which they are told that they must unlock the power of love in humanity if they want to right the wrongs and return the world to its once-peaceful state. With that said, the Ark opens...

From the Ark (the box), Arc (the Lad) receives the Power of Bravery. For her role in fulfilling the legend, Kukuru is given Divine Power. The voice tells you that monstrous beasts feed on greed, and that you must erase that greed in order to return humanity and nature to a suitable balance. Not everyone will welcome your efforts with open arms, however. There are those, such as The Dark One, who will do everything in their power to stop you.

Before leaving the Sabatico Falls cave it is decided that Kukuru will stay in Seiryu to contain the force of The Dark One. The five Guardians you freed previously then appear and offer you their wisdom. Finally, when all is said and done, the scene fades and you're then given the option of saving your game. Be sure and DO it.

This is not the end of your journey, Brave Warrior, but rather, the beginning.

And how. Arc has no idea what's coming up, and it's probably better this way.

As it was foretold, Kukuru must remain behind to contain the power of the being called The Dark One.

Chongara's Monster Book keeps track of all the enemies (and party members) that Chongara has scanned with his Search ability. If you successfully fill the Monster Book you will be a true obsessive-compulsive fan.

Guardian Forces

This Guardian Force will become your favorite in Arc II, IF you get the secret stuff. We promise.

The Guardian Forces Chongara summons during the battles can gain experience for themselves, and thus raise levels. If Chongara equips the King's Image, however, all experience the Guardian Forces raise instead go to him.

Like your normal characters, Guardian Forces can equip Accessories and use items in battle. To access the Accessory Menu, press the Start Button twice while on the desired Guardian Force's turn in battle. You'll then be able to select which Accessories to equip. Press  to call up the Items Menu if you wish to use an item instead.

OBTAINING GUARDIAN FORCES

KELACK AND MOFLY

Mofly and Kelack are the Summons that Chongara starts with. Of course, Chongara has the Search ability, but that's not one of the Guardian Forces.

HEMO-JI

Upon completing the Wild Hemo-ji battle at the Amaidar Temple Proving Grounds, Chongara will see a pure Hemo-ji and from it receive the Hemo-ji Guardian Force.

ODON

Between your getting the Earth and Wind Stones, if you head back to Chongara's Shop in Alatos you can acquire the Guardian Force Odon.

FU-JIN

Upon your meeting the Water Guardian, he gives you the Guardian Force known as Fu-jin. This Guardian Force is used in conjunction with the Guardian Force called Rai-jin.

RAI-JIN

Once you've freed the Fire Guardian from the containment tank in the Basement Bio Lab beneath Palencia Castle, you are bestowed the Guardian Force Rai-jin. Rai-jin is used in conjunction with Fu-jin.

CHOKO

At the very bottom of the Forbidden Ruins you'll find Choko. Best her in battle and she'll join you as a Guardian Force. Her power comes at a price though, as she can only be summoned on certain battlefields.

The areas she can fight on are: Seirya (Colbo Plain, Quina Hill and Karagan Plain), Millmana (Nicasur Forest, Ruvag Woods and Sembara Marsh), and Zariban (Raiden Ruins, Salyan Desert and Ishima Rocks).

FORBIDDEN RUINS

Decisions, decisions.

Once you've raised enough levels so that you feel confident you can best any enemy the game throws at you, return to Alatos and venture into the Forbidden Ruins. A good time to take the expedition to the depths of this hellhole would be just before the point of no return at Sabatigo Falls. By then, you've undoubtedly done all the level-raising that you're going to do (unless you still have the Amaird Temple Proving Grounds or the Niedel Arena competitions to complete).

The enemies in this 50-level dungeon come in all shapes, sizes, levels, and strengths. While the harder enemies are found on Basement Floors 45 through 50, it's not all uphill as you travel downward. From time to time, you will get breaks from the action in the form of fairly easy foes that come in waves that last a few levels each. If you ration your items and magic points well, perhaps you may even reach the ultimate goal of the Forbidden Ruins...discovering the well-guarded secret at the bottom.

When in doubt, gut it out.

CHOKO x1

EVIL IS HER ONE AND ONLY NAME

On the 50th Basement Floor, you'll meet Choko. Defeat her and her two evil minions, and she will join the Guardian Forces in Chongara's Summon Pot. Get ready to pull out your best magic abilities and deadliest physical attacks, because this innocent-looking sprite is armed with 999 Hit Points and unbelievable strength. Increase your odds of winning by equipping Kuku with all four Romancing Stones (with luck, you collected the other three before your hellish descent), reducing her Magic Point cost to zero for all spells. Kuku can now Resurrect to her heart's content, without having to ration her MP. When you need extra time to recoup, use Gogen's Dream Knock or have a character toss a Sleep Ball, to send Choko to bed without any supper (but not before she puts on her PJs and brushes her teeth).

Talking in third person is especially unattractive in pint-sized homicidal maniacs hell-bent on making a plaything out of your carcass.

Once you've tackled Choko, you'll have to take a 50-flight hike up memory lane. However, should you descend again to partake in Choko's sock-hop, you'll need to bring your best shoes for the long walk home.

Arc The Lad II

Elc

Elc is the last of the Pyrenians, an ancient tribe that had the ability to summon and manipulate flame. While Arc was still a child in Touvil, a small child named Elc watched as the Silver Noah launched a vicious assault that destroyed his entire village. During the raid, Elc was captured and sent to a place code-named White House for further studies. A Hunter known as Shu rescued Elc in the forest near White House, and took him in. While under Shu's care, Elc was taught many battle and survival techniques. Even now, Elc is still haunted by nightmares of his time at White House. As this chapter begins, he is about to take an assignment that will force him to confront all that he's struggled to forget.

Instilling his own fears into her, he's taught Lieza that people kill what they fear and don't understand. Unfortunately, in the case of Romalia, that's true, but only after they've harnessed her power for use in their mysterious Chimera program.

Displays the following information: Attribute (H, M, O), EXP (left value is a 300, right value is a 400), and Not Skill.

Earth	GOZ:	175
ADL:	3

ABILITY	Dark Shield	ABILITY	Acid Breath
ABILITY	Self Bomb	ABILITY	—
ABILITY	—	EQUIP:	Fang
ABILITY	Herb	STEAL:	Bitter Leaf

Displays the following information: Equip, Drop Rate, Drop, and Steal (described below).

Level:

Monster's level. The higher the value, the harder it is to defeat them.

Range:

The distance they can move. The higher the value, the more ground they can travel during their turn.

Hit Points:

The number of hit points needed to defeat the monster.

Magic Points:

Monster's magic points. They will be able to execute magical abilities until this number reaches zero (0). Note: Some monsters do not consume MP when they use magical abilities.

Attack:

Monster's attack strength. The higher the number, the more damage they will inflict on you, causing you to hate them even more.

Magic:

Strength of the monster's magic. The higher the number, the more powerful their magical abilities will be.

Defense:

Ability to defend against attacks. The higher the value, the harder it will be to waste them.

Agility:

Monster's reaction speed. The higher the number, the quicker they will react during combat, and the sooner they'll be able to move.

Jump Level:

Ability to jump over obstacles during combat. The higher the number, the better they will be at jumping.

Throw Level:

Ability to throw items. The higher the number, the more damage they will be able to inflict on a party member by throwing items at them.

Counterattack Level:

Ability to counter an attack. The higher the number, the more likely they will be able to counter a side or rear attack.

Catch Level:

Ability to catch items. Dependant on this value, the more likely the monster will catch an item thrown at them. If they catch it, they may keep the item, or throw it back.

Experience Points:

The value listed will be the minimum amount of experience points that the party member will get for defeating the monster. As it was mentioned in the ARC I section (Page 13), party members (and monsters) gain experience points every time they do something during combat.

Experience points for monsters are based on the following formulae:
If (party member's level < monster's level): then experience's level = 200.
If (party member's level > monster's level): then experience's level = 40.

Experience points for bosses are based on the following formulae:
If (party member's level < boss's level): then experience's level = 2000.
If (party member's level > boss's level): then experience's level = 4000.

GoZ (currency):

Displays how much GoZ will be acquired when the monster is defeated. The amount shown is the default amount.

This formula to compute GoZ is as follows: GoZmonster's level x 3. If it is a boss, then the formula is as follows: GoZboss's level x 30.

Not (Not Skill):

Displays the amount of experience points the party member will receive when the monster is defeated. Not Skills can be used as Monster Chants to upgrade a captured monster's stats.

The formula to compute Not Skill is as follows:

Not Skill = monster's level x 10.
If the value is 0, then Not Skill is 1.

Equip:

Displays which item (if any) is initially equipped to the monster. Note that monsters may be able to equip additional weapons or items after they've been captured.

Drop Rate:

The percentage that the monster will drop an item.

Drop:

The item that the monster may drop.

Steal:

The item that the party member may be able to take from the monster.

Elc's Village

As the next chapter in the Arc saga begins, you watch in horror as Elc's village is laid to waste by troops from Seiryu. All the villagers, including Elc's father and grandfather, are gunned down in a hail of bullets as they stand defenseless at a rock base. Only Elc is spared—and only because at the moment he would have been killed, he demonstrated that he had the power of the Fire Guardian within him.

With the villagers out of the way, the huge statue of the Fire Guardian is then airlifted away by the Silver Noah. Is this statue the Fire Guardian itself?!?!? If so, then what you're witnessing is a flashback to when Seiryu originally captured the Fire Guardian. As you recall, Arc found this Guardian imprisoned in a sealed containment unit shortly before the end of Arc The Lad. Whoa!

Unfortunately for him, Elc is then taken to the "Facility".

Elc's Apartment

Upon attempting to leave Elc's house, Lynx shows up and tells Elc to hurry to the Guild as a job awaits. Elc's occupation is that of a professional bounty hunter, and the Guild is where he gets assignments. When asked about compensation for the job, Lynx pussyfoots around the exact amount it pays. Well, anything's better than nothing, so when prompted, choose Of course! to be able to leave Elc's house for the Guild.

HUNTERS' GUILD

Once in the Guild, inspect the wanted posters on the wall. These, along with any you see in future Guilds, show you possible bounties. If you run into any of these wanted criminals AFTER having seen them on a wanted poster, capture them to qualify for the reward money they have on their heads.

Ele checks out the latest wanted monster posters while someone else checks HIM out.

Ele's toilet habits seems to be quite notorious.

When you're ready, talk to the dispatcher at the counter to take the job. The bounty is at Aldia Skyport. Apparently there's someone causing trouble there. The dispatcher tells you it pays 2,000 Goz, but the money has already been given to Lynx. Hmmmm... Talk to Lynx at the door to the Guild—again, he tiptoes around discussing your pay in any real detail.

Since you trust him to do right by you, tell Lynx Of course! when he asks if you've signed the journal at the counter (unless you want instructions on how to use the game's save journals, in which case you'd want to select Huh, what's that?), followed by Yes, I am! when he asks if you're ready. This last answer gets him to move from the doorway, allowing you to leave the Guild for the Skyport.

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

Without warning, Elc crashes the party...literally. The distraction provides just enough time for the hostage to escape. Your first battle then commences.

As in Arc The Lad 1, battles are fairly strategic in nature. Characters may be moved to any tile within the currently highlighted area during your battle turn. An "ATK" (Attack) symbol appears over any target's head when it comes into range for the tile your character then occupies (you may need to face the enemy for this to occur). The type of weapon you have equipped dictates how far away you can be and still have an enemy in range of your physical attacks. Pressing the  button while an enemy is in range will then activate your physical attack. Pressing the  button shortcut instead will bring up a list of all currently known usable magic Abilities, as well as noting the range of each via highlighting. Should you choose to cast any of these Abilities, press the  button while the desired spell is highlighted, then again after you've targeted the correct enemy. Pressing the  button at any time will bring up the in-game Menu.

Note: In Arc 2, characters DO NOT regain their Hit/Magic Points between battles like they did in Arc 1. You've been warned!

Since this encounter is basically to show you how the battle system looks, the designers made your opponent a green-haired, psychotic freak, which is the Arc Collection equivalent of the extra on Star Trek with the red shirt. It really doesn't take very much to come out the winner. Two or three attacks should be plenty.

When the terrorist realizes he's out of his league, he makes a run for it by fleeing out the terminal door and across the docking platform to a waiting airship.

Before going after the terrorist, speak to the woman you inadvertently helped escape from his clutches. As a show of gratitude, she will give you a Gale Bandanna to help stop the bleeding from the boo-boos you got on the way in, which gives you a stat boost if you wear it. Once you've received the Bandanna, head out onto the docking platform after the terrorist. From there you'll automatically enter the docked Romalia Airship.

Elc's catchphrase is simple and, uh...well, it's just simple.

But then again, green-haired psychotic freak STOLE his catchphrase...

Elc regretfully cannot stay to play patient...

Check2 ➡

DAMSEL IN DIS-DRESS

Inside the airship, you stop at the first open door along the interior hallway. Sensing someone in the room, you enter the Airship's Engine Room. In the darkness you hear growling... followed by a voice. It's a girl, and she calls out for her guardian wolf beast (Paundit) to heel. Amazed that the wolf beast has been tamed, Elc asks the girl if she's seen anyone run by this room. Silence. As Elc starts to leave the Engine Room, the girl blurts out that Elc's description might fit her. Mid-way through a conversation that makes no sense to Elc, screams for help ring out from the hallway.

Lieza is beautiful, but not too convincing.

Check3 ➡

WHY WON'T YOU DIE?

Rush back out to the hallway and enter the open door at the end (talking to the injured guard on the floor will point you in the right direction) to get onto the Airship Deck. Here you'll find Alfred (aka psychotic green-haired guy). Instead of running, he turns to face you—summoning four Giant Bats in the process. Just when it seems that you're hopelessly outnumbered... a healing spell shines down upon you. Puzzled, you turn to see the girl from the Airship's Engine Room and her wolf, Paundit. Three against five... at least the odds are now better than the five-to-one they were a moment ago. Your second face-off against Alfred then gets underway.

"Just...shut up, okay? You had me at hello...you had me at...hellô."

Elc has a confession to make...

For this encounter, have Elc and Lieza attack the same bat (if necessary), while Paundit attacks one alone. If the Giant Bats group together, have Paundit use the Cold Breath Ability in the hopes of damaging or destroying several bats. You'll only have enough Magic Points to cast this once, so make sure to get the most out of it should you decide to use it. Don't forget Lieza's Cure Ability if anyone gets hurt (again, you'll only have enough Magic Points to use Cure once, so gather your characters together before you cast so they can all be healed). After the bats have been destroyed, have everyone converge on Alfred... he won't know what hit him. When his Hit Points reach a low enough level, Alfred gives up.

EVENT CHECK!

Romalia Airship

Demanding that you turn Lieza over to them, a group of mafioso types appear, guns drawn. Knowing that this is a battle they cannot win, Elc, Lieza and Paundit race to the edge of the airship in an attempt to escape. When the men in black box them in, Elc flashes back to a time when he was in a similar situation as a child. Not wanting this time to turn out as the last did, where he left a friend behind, Elc uses the element of surprise to initiate an escape. All doesn't go as smoothly as he had hoped though, as Lieza is shot just after they slide down a docking cable to the platform below.

Fearing for Lieza's safety, Elc tells her that they should head to Indigos and attempt to find someone there who might be able to help her.

VOICES

SEIICHI KURANISHI—SENIOR EDITOR, DENGKI PLAYSTATION®

Can you describe your experiences in playing Arc the Lad?

I understand very well that in RPG games, the storyline is so very important; however, in my opinion, this is a game that is also interactive art. First the systems should be well organized and on top of that, the story is interesting and that is how it is expected to be. And I think that Arc the Lad satisfies these points very well and when we reflect on the game of Arc the Lad and think of how well it met these requirements...in Japan we have something called "running an errand" style of RPG. By that, we mean by finishing a series of many small tasks, the main story develops. Arc the Lad series is basically done in this style, however, it is unlike other "running an errand" type RPGs.

Once we started playing the Arc the Lad game, we could not stop playing and wondered why we were so consumed by playing this game. We often check ourselves to see if we made some sort of mistake...or maybe mistake is not the word, maybe I went in an inefficient direction while playing the game—perhaps not enjoying the game as it was intended. Perhaps I thought that I should be meeting other characters in the game. When I am thinking about things like this, I have difficulty advancing through the story while playing the game. So to check every single step at every step—Arc the Lad reminded me of this kind of experience. Especially when playing Arc the Lad III, it made me think. So when playing the game I was reminded of this and in Japan generally, this kind of "running the errand" kind of RPG is not considered to be interesting. However, the Arc the Lad series was not viewed in this manner at all. I tried to see all the events included in the game. Once when I was playing, in the middle of a game I forgot to go back to the town, just once, and I missed seeing a certain event, so I had to restart the game!

A NIGHTMARE ON ELC STREET

It was probably the liquor.

looking for her. While Lieza rests, speak to Shu (who returned shortly before you came back to his apartment with Doctor Lado). Shu agrees that this "Facility" Lieza spoke of may have ties to both your lost memories and your ability to control flame. Shu tells you he'll help you in any way he can, but first he needs to take care of a few things. At this point everyone rests for the night.

The Dreams... The painful reoccurring dreams. Night after night they creep back into Elc's subconscious... haunting him... reminding him of the horror that befell his clan so many years ago. With this new clue, perhaps the dreams may one day end. That day is not today though, as Elc's shaken awake by Lieza after he cries out. She's just as concerned about Elc's welfare as he was hers.

Shu is gone, presumably to do what he needed to do before joining, so it's just Elc and Lieza. Lieza tells Elc that she's feeling much better this morning, then asks him about the missing memories she overheard him talking to Shu about the night before. The story she hears next is not a pleasant one. The next thing Elc remembered after being taken away the day of the massacre at his village was Shu finding him in the west Aldian Desert five years ago.

When Elc tells Lieza that he's going to the Guild to drum up work so that they don't have to freeloader off of Shu, she asks if she and Paundit can come along...so Elc can protect her, of course. Once he agrees, Lieza and Paundit become full party members (Paundit is also added to your list of captured Monsters).

At this point, you can inspect the bed to bring up the question, Go to sleep on the bed? Doing so will replenish your Hit and Magic Points to maximum, should you need it.

HUNTERS' GUILD

After taking a brief nap, it's time to head to the Guild to see what jobs are available. Talk to the dispatcher who will offer you your first job, "Nearly Sacked At The Cul-de-sac" (see page 174).

Don't forget that, along with the jobs the dispatcher has, there are also wanted criminals to apprehend. Remember, you must look at the wanted posters for each criminal in order for you to be able to recognize them on the battlefield. A quick glance at the wall shows the following bounties:

CHAT WITH THE HUNTER AT THE GUILD

In the Guild, the Hunter near the wanted posters gives you these tips on what you can do at each level of some of the various battle functions:

Counters: Lv1—Counter enemies in front of you.
 Lv2—Counter enemies in any direction.
 Lv3—Inflict more damage.

Throw: Lv0—Use items on only yourself.
 Lv1—Use items on squares adjacent to you.
 Lv2—Use items on squares within 2 of you.
 Lv3—Use items on squares within 3 of you + inflict more damage.

Catch: Lv0—Take damage when enemy throws item at you.
 Lv1—You may "Catch" or "Throw Back" the thrown item.
 Lv2—Take less damage + Receive or Throw Back more often.
 Lv3—Inflict more damage with item + half items received added to stock.

Jump: Lv1—Jump over 1 square.
 Lv2—Jump over characters.

If this was really a Bris clearance center, this'd be a pretty sick sale.

After accepting however many of the jobs you think you can handle, leave the Guild and get to work.

Speaking to the dispatcher leads to a job worth...nothing. As soon as you accept it you're sent out to a back alley to apprehend a group of bandits. The alley turns out to be a dead end, but by the time you realize this, you're cornered by a Witch Doctor. The Witch Doctor then summons a group of monsters to help him defeat you. With no other way out of this trap, the fight begins.

During this battle, as you defeat the monsters, more are summoned. After a set amount of them have been killed, the police arrive. Though their presence distracts the monsters, they're really there to apprehend your party. As the officers close in, a door opens at the back of the alley and a mysterious voice calls for you to hurry inside. What other choice do you have?

GO IN OR STAY OUT?

Shante doesn't really have much room to talk. There is that business about her brother...

After finishing the first task from the Guild, you're back in the main section of Indigos. With the fuzz hot on your tail, you rush into the Indigos Bar to hide.

Inside, your leggy new friend introduces herself as Shante. As you know from speaking to some of the townsfolk, Shante is the singer at the bar whose brother is in a hospital or something like that. Shante offers to get you information for a fee of 1500 G. You're also given an open-ended invitation to come and see one of her shows.

Cut to Gallarno's Office once again. Amused that you've come this far, Gallarno gives his men new orders.

Your task is now to return to Shante at the bar when you've raised the 1500 G to pay her for whatever information she can uncover.

Start by returning to Shu's Apartment. Even though it seems like Shu may lend you the cash to buy the information from Shante, he doesn't. Instead he joins your party at this time. Leave Shu's Apartment and enter the bar if you would like to see Shante sing. After the performance, head over to the Guild to take on a job or two so that you can raise some cash.

Still stinging from the humiliating loss at "Simon Says", Gallarno gives his team captain a pep-talk.

Indigos Jewelry Robber

1 LOCATION: Indigos Jewelry Shop 2 WEALTH: 1000 G 3 MERITS: 4 (job) 1 (bounty)

4 TIME FRAME: Indigos Guild—After Shante saves you in the cul-de-sac.

5 DESCRIPTION:

Thieves who command monsters have been robbing jewelry shops lately. Client requests a Hunter to guard the jewelry shop tonight.

To prompt this job to appear, you need to look at Docson the Doll Master's wanted poster at the Indigos Guild, then leave Indigos and enter Hien Port, located far to the north. Upon your return to Indigos, this job will be available for you to take.

To begin the job, enter the Jewelry Shop during the daylight hours (if it is still evening, return to Shu's Apartment and sleep away the night) and speak to the clerk behind the counter. Answer, Of course! when he asks if you're ready to start. The scene then changes to the following night. Docson the Doll Master and his gang of Stone Golems break in through the rear wall and start to clean the store out. To complete this job successfully, you must stop all the would-be robbers before they can take the jewels and escape.

During the robbery, the Stone Golems will not attack your party members until they've taken the jewels from their row of display cases and are on the way out. A good way to slow down the robbers is to position party members directly in front of the cases so that they cannot be broken into. Alternately, you can position your strongest party member IN the blast hole to prevent any of the Golems from escaping, but they WILL have made a mess by the time they try to exit.

Once you've successfully thwarted the robbery (or you've failed and let Docson's gang escape), the police arrive. Your pay and merits for this job are based on how many of the robbers you stopped, plus the bounty on Docson's head if he was defeated.

5 DESCRIPTION:

Mr. Barns has lost his dog. He wishes a Hunter to help him retrieve it. He'll meet you in front of the bar in daylight to give you more detailed information.

This job appears in the Guild once you've completed the “Indigos Sewer Research” job. After night passes and daylight breaks (rest in the bed in Shu's Apartment to cause morning to arrive), meet Mr. Barns outside the Indigos Bar (he'll be standing between the two signs). Once he gives you a description of his lost dog so that you know what you're looking for, return down the nearby manhole you used to complete the “Indigos Sewer Research” job to find the pup. As you approach it, a hungry Ghoul steps out from the shadows. Apparently, the Ghoul has a craving for Thai food, and closes in on Mr. Barns' dog. When you reveal to the Ghoul that you intend to put him on a crash diet, his unamused, non-vegetarian friends appear. Now that your party has arrived, they suddenly decide that you'd go well with some wine and beans, and decide to step up from the pup to bigger prey—you!

Kill the Ghoul and Zombies to complete this job. Like the Skeletons, these enemies fall to the ground in a heap when their Hit Points drop too low. When this occurs, you'll have to attack the heaps to fully destroy them. If you don't do this fast enough, they'll regain Hit Points and get back up.

Once this job is complete, speak to the boy who's standing in front of the Indigos Bar where you met Mr. Barns. He tells you that Mr. Barns has left Indigos to travel abroad, and wants to know if you can look after his dog while he's gone. You are then given four Dog Treats.

Arc The Lad II

I WANT MY MUMMY!!!

The Sealed Ruins on Yagos Isle work like the Forbidden Ruins from Arc The Lad in that they are multiple stories deep and play out as if they were one long battle. Using a set of stairs to go up or down a level can bypass some fighting, but will not replenish your party's Hit or Magic Points (though it will remove any status effects your characters may have had cast on them during any particular floor).

Once you're past the carved arch and in the ruins themselves, the fun begins.

One thing to be aware of: though the native at the arch claims that monsters here revive themselves, they do not reappear if you return to a floor after having killed all foes on it. For this to occur, you'll need to leave the Sealed Ruins and re-enter them.

Like Zombies and Skeletons, when a Mummy is knocked too low in Hit Points it will change forms—in this case retreating into its sarcophagus. Attacking the stone coffin one final time does away with this foe. Unlike in Arc The Lad, any treasure chests you find needn't be attacked to open them. Inspecting them after the battles or whenever you come to them will suffice. Another difference between this and the first Arc game is that in these ruins, multiple battles can and will occur on the same floor. Walk into the wrong section and it's time to dust off the weapons again.

LASER-WIELDING ROBOT!

On the third floor, you find Lia surrounded by Mummies. (They're closing in on her too fast—you'll never make it to her in time!) A scream from Lia awakens the thing embedded in the wall behind her. Within seconds, all four Mummies are vaporized by a beam of energy from the wall.

With Lia safe—for the moment—you leave the Sealed Ruins and return to Yudo Village.

Ele mistakenly stumbles into an authority on native mating rituals.

"Maybe we can just be friends, then..."

Lia gets more mummies than nature intended, and isn't the least bit happy about it.

At this point, head into Doctor Vilmer's house and rest for the night. During his slumber, Ele dreams of the day he was brought to the "Facility". This was also the day he first met Mariel and Ginie, the two girls from his previous dreams. Resting a second time will prompt another nightmare. When you wake, head out of the village. As you start to leave Yudo Village, the merchant calls you over. In return for your helping Lia, he teaches you the virtues of using a sword and whip. YOU DON'T KNOW DIEK!

The battles on the first two floors of the Sealed Ruins are the same as when you went looking for Lia. On the third floor you find the thing in the wall, exactly where you last saw it. Attempting to dig it out triggers it to awaken once again. It begins by asking who you are. When you tell it you were sent by Doctor Vilmer, it tells you it is Diekbeck, leader of the 7 Machine Gods. Further questioning of Diekbeck reveals that in order to free itself, it will need a Power Unit found on one of the lower floors of the ruins. Shortly thereafter, its power completely drained, it deactivates.

There are also four treasure chests on the third floor that you cannot open at this point in the game as they are located in rooms out of your reach. These chests require that Gogen be in your battle party, so that he may use his level three Teleport spell to warp into the rooms and open them for you. Since you do not have Gogen in your party at this point, return for these chests at a later time when you do.

Diekbeck refuses to tell Ele how many licks it takes to get to the center of a Tootsie Pop.

On the fourth floor, you come across a green glowing light called the Guardian's Force. Ele explains to Lieza that touching this fountain completely replenishes your energy.

PUSH OR LEAVE IT?—GOOD QUESTION

After the battle on the seventh floor, a Gargoyle statue shatters, allowing you access to a previously hidden area. Two more statues in the following corridor are engraved with the word "Guard". Further inspection reveals that three more Gargoyle statues lie in the rooms ahead, two of which have a switch on their base. You may choose to either Push the switch, or Leave it. The reason for these switches lies in the treasure chests the statues face. If you open the chests while the Gargoyle statues face them, they will come to life in the form of Ruin Ravens when you return to the central corridor. To get around this trap, Push the switch on each of the two statues' bases twice so they rotate and face away from the treasure chests. Once this is accomplished you can open each chest without fear of retaliation.

Ele takes a break for the sake of culture.

SOME KIND OF POWER UNIT

Upon reaching the first intersection on the eighth floor, two spirits appear (if you reach this point prior to talking with Diekbeck, the spirits will banish you to the seventh floor). When they let it slip that there may be twenty Power Units, the spirits fear you've discovered too much. Four Gargoyles are then summoned to life to help silence you. On this floor there are also two more hidden rooms like you saw on floor three. If you wish to open the chests in these rooms, you will need to return to them later when you have Gogen and his level three Teleport spell available to you.

With the defeat of your foes you find one of a possible twenty Power Units (labeled Power Unit 00 – Power Unit 19, so don't go looking for Power Unit 20) for Diekbeck. Return to the third floor once it's in your possession. There, Diekbeck absorbs the Power Unit and becomes operational once more—for a short time that is; after mumbling something about joining one who walks with Guardians, it collapses.

It's a long trip back to Yudo Village when you have to lug something as heavy as a Machine God.

BACK UP TO INDIGOS, I'M SINGIN' IN A BAR

Frustrated, Officer Lizetti unloads on Ele.

Misunderstood ingenue or family serial killer? Hmm...

Cut to Gallarno's Office. Gallarno reprimands a member of the Cabal for not returning Doctor Vilmer to Romalia. After which, he calls in extra help to take care of Ele and Lieza.

Now that you're back in familiar territory (if you need to leave East Aldia for any reason, merely choose to do so after entering Hien Port), enter Indigos and make your way into its Guild. As soon as you get through the door, you see the police trying to get information from the dispatcher. Apparently there's a serial killer on the loose called the Slasher, and he's recently been killing the people of Indigos. You're told that Officer Lizetti has been assigned to the case. Along with new jobs, at this time the Slasher's wanted poster becomes viewable on the wall of the Indigos Guild.

Enter Shu's Apartment to rest for the evening. Mid-way through your slumber, an intruder sneaks through the rear window. It's Shante! Shante tells you that she has been in hiding ever since the Cabal found out she was snooping around. She came back to Indigos to meet with you. She then leaves, telling you to meet her at the Indigos Bar in the morning.

Before leaving Shu's Apartment, search under his bed. No, you're not going to find any reading material; rather you find the Slasher—the item, not the monster.

The next morning, as prompted by Lieza, head over to the bar. Along with wanting to meet with you, Shante came out of hiding to try to help her brother out of some trouble he's gotten into. When pressed for the whereabouts of Gallarno, Shante says she'll need a little time to come up with it, so come back tomorrow.

Rather than go directly back to Shu's Apartment to sleep through the night, try taking on a job from either the Indigos or Prodias Guild. One new addition to the game's mechanics is that now before most future encounters you will be given the opportunity to select the party members you wish to take with you into battle from your pool of characters.

4 TIME FRAME: Indigos Guild—After completing “Weird Sewer Sounds” job.

5 DESCRIPTION:

In the ruins near town, a doll collector has been seen inviting children into his house. Client wishes to have Hunter make certain children are safe.

This job appears after you’ve completed the “Weird Sewer Sounds” job. To begin it, make your way into the Abandoned Building in Ruin Town. Here you will find several statues of various children. Your first objective is to get to the second floor, but the statues are blocking access to the stairwell. In order to reach the stairs you’ll need to push the statues out of the way. Since you cannot pull them, you’ll need to move them in a specific manner or else one may block another, making your goal unobtainable. Should you dead end yourself while moving the statues, press the  Button and choose Restart from your Menu to begin again. The correct way to move the statues so you’ll be able to reach the stairs is shown on the map for FLOOR 1.

Once upstairs, you find your old pal Piers Beronica. He’s the Doll Collector in your job description from the Guild. Claiming you’re intruders, he calls four Soul Flames to help show you the door. Unfortunately for Piers, the Soul Flames hold no true allegiance to him and will turn on him should the opportunity arise. Once all foes have been defeated, the job is deemed complete.

Before heading back to Indigos, take a closer look at the statue in the top right corner of the second floor. It’s a statue of Choko, one of Chongara’s Guardian Forces. On the base of this statue you’ll find a button. Press it a total of three times to cause it to blink, lick its ice cream cone and finally drop its ice cream cone. Replace the ice cream in Choko’s hand to bring a smile back to her face. Getting past the statues on the first floor once you go back downstairs is just a matter of pushing some of them to the left. Your bounty for this job is based on whether or not you saved Piers from the Soul Flames.

From a hidden passage, Gallarno appears just as Ginie becomes but a memory. And who else should come through the passage? Shante!! For reasons known only to her and Gallarno, she betrayed you, causing the death of your childhood friend in the process.

Just as it seems as if you'll be captured by Gallarno, an explosion rocks the room. Through the now-reduced-to-rubble doorway comes an old friend thought to have been lost on Yagos Isle—Shu! Shu rushes to your side and gives a hasty explanation of why Shante did what she did. Shante's brother was taken hostage by the Cabal and had underwent a transformation at White House. What's worse is the fact that he was "Alfred", the terrorist from the Aldia Skyport that Elc fought against several days ago. When Elc screams that Gallarno isn't human, Gallarno proves him right.

At this point, both Shante and Shu become party members, and you're given the chance to select five members for the upcoming battle.

Soon after you defeat what you believed to be Gallarno, you find out that it was merely an impostor. The police then arrive, late as usual. Back in Indigos, Elc has just returned from Gallarno's House. Reminiscent of the saying "great minds think alike", it's decided that since Gallarno is most likely hiding at White House, that should be the next place they search. Unfortunately, the best information they have on its whereabouts is that it's somewhere in the Salba Desert in West Aldia. While not the "X marks the spot" they'd like to have, it does at least point them in the right direction.

VOICES VI

MASAKI SEKI—CG DIRECTOR, I-DESIGN CO., LTD.

Why did you omit character CG animation in Arc the Lad II?

At the time of the release of Arc II, character animations were possible, but there were a number of restrictions; for example, from the point of view involving hardware, we couldn't do the characters. But with Arc the Lad III, there was an abundance of software applications available and there were some new software programs that was suitable for character-type animations. And that development made it possible for us to have character type animations. Recently, there have been so many improvements so that the view of the hair, and other descriptive details and this type of descriptive setting has improved greatly. So now we have a pretty fantastic array of tools to work with.

What scenes were the most difficult for you to create?

For Arc the Lad II, the part that was difficult was that there were many scenes where buildings collapsed. When we use CG, when we illustrate a standing building alone, that is easy. However, if we have to construct a scene with the building crumbling, we have to piece together each of the pieces of the building that break separately. So that was a very difficult process and required a lot of patience. For Arc the Lad III, regarding that segment that I was involved with, the illustration of the moving thunder-head-type clouds and/or water eruptions bursting forth from the lake—these are the ones I worked hard on.

With West Aldia in mind as your next destination, head over to Hien Port. From there, leave East Aldia in the airship.

Along the way to West Aldia, make a quick stop at Yagos Isle. Seek out Doctor Vilmer in the Research Lab of his house in Yudo Village. Once you do, he'll tell you that he's finished the repairs on Diekbeck, the battle robot you retrieved from the Sealed Ruins. Enter the next room to see the Doctor's work. At this point, Diekbeck joins your party. When you return to the Doctor, he gives you several Power Units. He then tells you that unlike the rest of your party, Diekbeck does not get stronger based on how much experience he's gained, but rather from Power Units. For this reason, you'll need to find and equip Power Units on Diekbeck throughout your travels in order to strengthen the robot. Each Unit, the Doctor explains, may have an attribute attached to it and, based on the type of encounter Diekbeck is taking part in, you should equip him accordingly. Up to two units can be attached at once, as long as they are not of opposite attributes, such as Fire is to Water. Inspecting the scale-like device nearby prompts the Doctor to further explain that any experience Diekbeck accumulates can be given to others via this machine.

Curiously, Elc doesn't ask what ELSE Vilmer's programmed Diek to do.

ANOTHER FLASHBACK? COME ON!

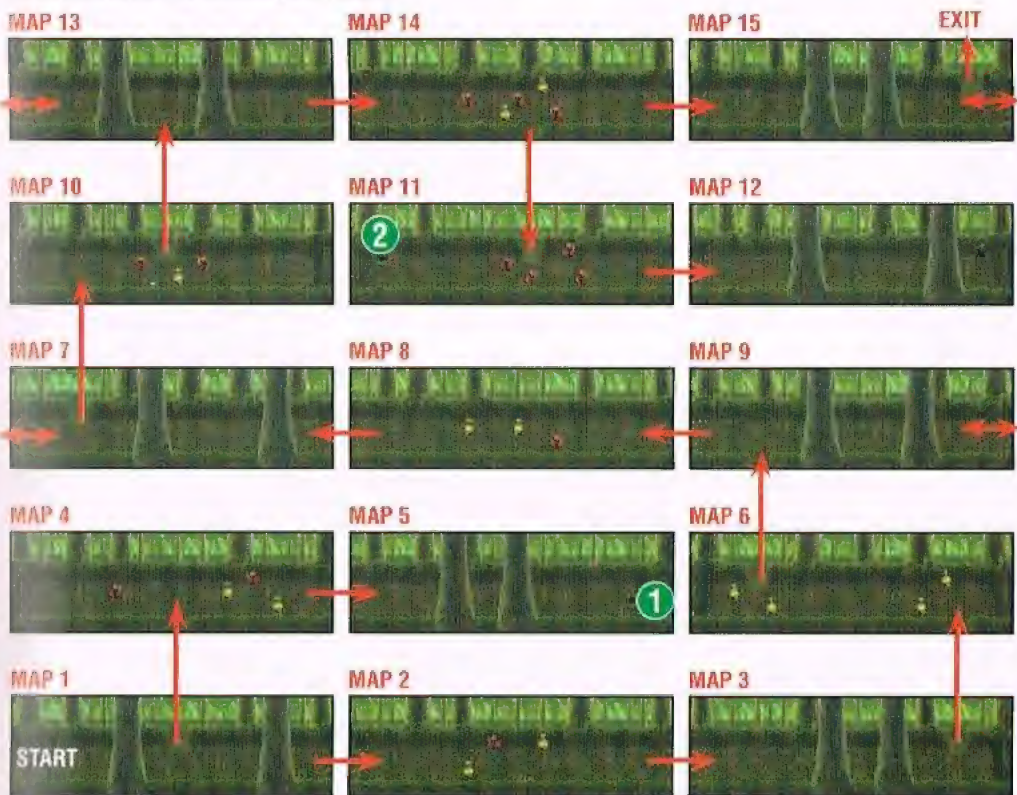

Which makes this an excellent place to ditch dates that are going badly.

As soon as you enter the Lost Forest, Elc begins to feel as if he's been there before. As we know from his previous flashbacks, this is where he was forced to leave Mariel when the two of them made their ill-fated escape from what they knew at the time to be called the "Facility". After a warning from Shu, who seems to know a bit about the area, you're asked to choose your party for the battles that are sure to come.

NAVIGATING THE FOREST

To successfully navigate the Lost Forest, take the opening path as far east as you can, then head north whenever possible. Towards the northern edge of the forest there is a dead end path. On this path are two things, a treasure chest containing a Strengthen Fruit, and a wizard who claims to be the guardian of the Lost Forest. Speaking with him results in your being asked the question, What do you want to do? Choose Find the Forest Exit and he will tell you the way out. DO NOT choose Go to the White House or he will teleport your party back to the beginning of the Lost Forest. Petty bickering fills the room, until Andel makes mention of the Martyr Plan... a plan he believes will gain him control over the entire world... a plan which will bring with it the resurrection of the dead-for-ages monster The Dark One, who will once again control the world. IN THROUGH THE OUT DOOR

Of course, this is no time to flash back to Ele and Shu's first double date.

Though only three guards stand watch over the front entrance to the White House, Ele thinks it best to sneak into the facility, rather than attract any unnecessary attention. Ele then leads the party to the airduct he used to escape the facility when he was a child. It'll be a tight squeeze, but it's your best chance of reaching the basement of the White House unnoticed.

EVENT CHECK!

White House Sewer

Once through the ducts, you find yourself in the White House Sewers. Since danger lies ahead, you're asked to form your battle party at this time.

If for any reason you'd like to leave this area, climb back up the ladder to the airducts you came from to do so. You will see that the White House now appears as a location on the World Map. So if you'd like to return to the Airship Landing Point so you can use the Hien, you'll be able to access the White House again without having to trudge all the way through the Lost Forest.

It's a code name, not THE White House. There are no Presidents inside, and no Clinton jokes here.

WATCH YOUR STEP

To the southeast of your entry point you'll find another ladder, this one leading to Level 1-Map 5. Here you can rest and save the game. Across the bridge to the southwest, a switch panel can be found which opens the shutter door around the corner to the west.

While working your way through the sewers, any monsters you come across will have to be destroyed for fear of their alerting Gallarno to your whereabouts if you don't.

Further to the west there are two more ladders. The one directly west leads to Level 2-Map 4 with another locked shutter door; while the one to the northwest brings you to Level 2-Map 1 and the switch which opens said door as well as Level 2-Map 2 which contains a treasure chest.

ILLUSION-MAKER?

Onboard the Guist, both Andel and Gallarno agree that it was a mistake to let Arc and Ele meet, as the two will surely join forces. Andel feels that taking their secret weapon, the Illusion-maker, to the Towers in Romalia would be best at this time. Gallarno assures him of the safety of his precious Towers by alerting him to the fact that monsters are being mass-produced to protect it. Ele's airship, the Hien, is then located and confiscated by the evil duo. Shortly thereafter, the Guist leaves for Seirya.

The Silver Noah lands at Touvil Quarry, inside Seiryā.

With Chongara carrying the still-unconscious Elc, the party rushes to Sabatiko Shrine to try to save the dying boy.

Inside the rear chamber of the shrine, Kukurū quickly uses her healing abilities to try to stay what should have been the inevitable. Once Kukurū has done what she can for Elc, she returns to the others to tell them some distressing news. Though she was able to bring him out of harm's way physically, it seems Elc's mind was damaged in the encounter with Mariel at White House. When asked what can be done to save Elc, Kukurū basically says stopping Andel from gaining world domination is the golden ticket.

At this point, Lieza stays with Kukurū and holds watch over Elc, as Shu and Shante leave the shrine in search of the Silver Noah docked out on the cliff's at the Touvil Quarry. Since it's been a long time since the last save point, if you wish to save your progress, you can return to Sabatiko Shrine, where in a room to the west you'll find a bed as well as a journal.

Pass through the abandoned village of Touvil, exiting by the dirt path to the west to reach the Quarry. Here you'll find the Silver Noah. Unfortunately, Chopin reveals that the airship is in need of too many repairs to leave for Romalia as Shu suggests. When pressed on the matter, all Chopin can offer is that they may wish to try looking at the Seiryā Skyport for another airship to take them where they need to go. For details as to how you can reach the Seiryā Skyport, return to the shrine and ask Kukurū.

Because having the next half of the game take place at Elc's bedside would be really stupid.

She then teleports Shu and Shante to Palencia, the others remaining behind to hold watch over Elc, should he regain consciousness. For the good of the world, you must prevail.

TRYING NOT TO GET CAUGHT

Once the battleship nears its destination, the two arise and begin exploring the ship. As luck would have it, in the very first room they come to, the guards spot them. The alarms sound, and the guards transform into their true monstrous forms. It's now time to fight your way past them.

With the first guards' defeat, Shante begins worrying that the entire ship has been alerted to your presence. Shu has an idea—find the hangar for the smaller combat planes and steal one. If successful, it will get them off the battleship and into Romalia.

Your new task is to find the hangar. Start by continuing south out of Floor 3-Map 3 (labeled "D") and once in the main corridor, Floor 3-Map 2 (do not flip the switch in the main corridor; it closes the door which leads to the room you can rest in), head through the door to the northwest.

Shante and Shu have no idea how wrong this statement will turn out to be.

CORRIDOR CRUISING

In Floor 3-Map 7, be wary of the Evil Eyes, as they may cast Petro, a spell which can turn a character to stone. When the battle ends, you'll find a switch on the northern wall. Flipping this switch opens the southern door in the passage to the east (this passage is reached by way of the short hall at the center of the eastern wall of the main corridor). With that accomplished, return to the main corridor, Floor 3-Map 2, and enter the door at the southeast. Trigger the switch at the top right in Floor 3-Map 4 to unlock the northern door in the eastern passage, then once again return to the main corridor. The room to the southwest, Floor 3-Map 5, contains enemies as well as treasure chests. The chest furthest south is accessible by jumping the fence during battle.

And, just as strangely, a door is probably closing somewhere in the world, too.

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME

Once you've flipped the necessary switches and opened the chests you wish to, head through the short hall and follow the eastern passage north, through the previously locked northern door, as well as the door at the end (labeled "D"). This will bring you to Floor 2-Map 1 of the Romalian Battleship. From here, proceed to the west and enter the only available door (labeled "E") to head back up to Floor 3-Map 2. You're now in a square corridor, with doors on the inside northern and southern walls. Since the northern door (labeled "G") is locked, enter the southern door (labeled "G").

After defeating the foes in Floor 3-Map 6, flip the switch at the northeast to open the northern door (labeled "G") which was previously locked. Return to the outer corridor and from there enter the now-open northern door (labeled "G") to access a chest containing Crystal Shoes.

Shu is thrilled to have found the one remaining artifact he needed to complete his Elton John outfit.

Check 4 ➡

STARTING OVER AGAIN

With this area now fully explored, return to your starting point on Floor 3-Map 2, and instead of going north as you did before, take the eastern passage south. Once through the door at the southern end of the eastern passage (labeled "H") you'll again be on Floor 2-Map 1 of the battleship. Proceed to the west as far as you can, passing through to Floor 2-Map 2 to reach the cargo hold. In the cargo hold, you'll find more monsters who will try to impede your progress.

Continue through the cargo hold, exiting through the door to the northeast. In Floor 2-Map 1, if you go north in the eastern underpass between the two halls, there is a secret passage. Find it by walking upwards. This secret way leads around the smaller halls to a treasure chest containing a Strengthen Fruit.

Apples are nature's candy...once you add caramel and a stick.

Check 5 ➡

ALMOST FINISHED

If you continue east, past the hidden passage in the underpass, at the end of the hall you'll come to another switch. This switch opens the sealed door at the southeast of Floor 2-Map 1. Once you've opened this door, return west and enter the door at the end of the corridor leading north (labeled "I").

You'll now be on Floor 1-Map 1 of the Romanian Battleship. The door at the southwest (labeled "J") leads to a storage room. Enter Floor 1-Map 2 and flip the switch at the top of it. Doing so opens the first of two locked doors in the central area leading to the stairs (labeled "L") in yet another section of Floor 2.

Who wired this battleship, anyway? An inbred, dyslexic, drunk Romanian contractor?

Check 6 ➡

LIGHTS ON, LIGHTS OFF

Next, pass through the door at the southeastern corner (labeled "K") to gain entrance to the guards' quarters in Floor 1-Map 4. Luckily, they're asleep. Quietly make your way to the north wall of the room and trigger the switch on the wall to the left in order to open the second of the locked doors in the center of the outer area. Do not trip the switch to the right, as it turns the lights on, which wakes the guards.

Once both doors are unlocked and open, pass through them and head up the stairs (labeled "L") that follow to Floor 2-Map 1. From your starting point on Floor 2, the door to the west (labeled "M") leads to the southwest corner of Floor 3-Map 2, where you can enter the only open door (which leads to Floor 3-Map 9) to find a treasure chest containing a Ranger Suit.

No way to talk yourself out of this one...

Check 7 ➡

THE ENGINE ROOM

After retrieving the Ranger Suit, head back down to Floor 2 and flip the switch on the wall just east of the small passage. This will open the door at the north-east (labeled "N"). Head through the newly opened door to reach Floor 1-Map 1 again, then follow the only corridor you can, passing through the door at the end of it (labeled "O") to enter the Main Engine Room, Floor 1-Map 3.

Continue onwards, leaving the engine room via the door to the south (labeled "P"), and in the following short hallway, take the next door (labeled "Q") to Floor 2-Map 1. From here, head north. A short distance up the passage you'll be ambushed by a squad of Romalian guards.

A surprisingly well-spoken line for a member of the notoriously under-educated Romalian army.

THE WAY OUT!

Having bested your opponents, make your way through the open door to the north (labeled "R"), to return to Floor 1-Map 1. Finally, pass through the large steel door you come to in order to reach your objective—the Airship Hangar where the combat planes are kept!

Shante spots the Hien among the craft assembled on the deck of the hangar. As you are just about to board it, trouble comes calling.

After dispatching the guards, their commander returns to the hangar. Seeing that he's outnumbered, and that Shu is in no mood to play games, the officer does as he's asked and explains how to use the lift. In order to move the Hien into position on the launch deck, you'll need to flip the lever next to the ladder. Knowing this, as you take control of Shante, pull the lever so that Shu may pilot the Hien once it's in launch position.

As the lift rises, more guards enter the room in an attempt to stop your escape. As Shante climbs the ladder in an effort to get away, she'll come to a second set of levers. Flip the "Right" lever so that the lift keeps traveling upwards towards the launch deck. If you pull the lever to the "Left" the lift will instead return to the hangar bay and you will need to start again... after fighting off the guards who have climbed back down the ladder, that is.

Once you've properly flipped the second lever to the right, the unthinkable happens—Shante is blown over the side of the battleship due to a combination of strong winds and bomb-throwing guards. Shu narrowly avoids capture by dropping a few bombs of his own out the hatch of the Hien before lifting off.

A line Shante perfected during her days as a singer in the bar.

Galburn pulls out all the stops and fires off every magic spell he knows at his opponent, but Gruga just brushes them off. It's not until Galburn paralyzes Gruga that he begins to feel the sting of Galburn's attacks—luckily, it doesn't last long, as Gruga soon breaks free of the immobilization spell. At this point all hell breaks loose on poor Galburn, as Gruga unleashes a beating the likes of which Mike Tyson would walk away from crying. Greedy Romalian soldiers are on a house-to-house septic search for more seum to suck, but Lieza's grandfather isn't in the mood to give 'em samples.

When the painful memories stop, Kukuuru tells Lieza that she must face her inner demons alone, and not wait for Elc to help her resolve her inner turmoil. Chongara then enters the room and offers his support, as well as that of his Guardian Forces. Though currently only Hemo-ji, Mofly, and Kelack are traveling with him, he mentions that Rai-jin can be found at the Azenda Highlands in Alatos and Fu-jin at the Zariban Water Shrine (though he doesn't mention them, the remaining two Guardian Forces, Odon and Choko, can be found as well). With that, the three present Guardian Forces join Lieza as teammates, and Chongara tells Lieza to seek out the Silver Noah to aid in the retrieval of the others as well as her personal quest.

Leaving Diek behind to help Kukuuru care for Elc, exit the Shrine and head through the abandoned town of Touvil to the Silver Noah, which is docked at the cliffs of Touvil Quarry.

Chongara's speech is pretty much a joke on its own. Read into it what you will.

Temple Square

In Ramul, Lieza's fortune can be told by the old woman in the southern alley between the first two houses. The fortune teller claims that one of several Spirits can be seen around our heroine—hopefully this will turn out to be a good thing.

While speaking with the citizens of Ramul, you're told to inquire at the Gia Temple for more information about the goings-on at Holn, so take the short walk to the east from Ramul to see what all the brouhaha is about.

At the Gia Temple, a crowd has gathered to listen to the Archmonk as he takes up a collection for the construction of the new temple cathedral. The Archmonk tries to sway the citizens into donating by scaring them with his talk of the reviving of the Beaststalkers of Holn.

Hearing of Holn makes you homesick, so leave the Gia Temple grounds and head west across the World Map towards Holn.

Ask not what your temple can do for you, but rather what you can do for your temple.

From the woman, you find that if you take her son's usual letter-writing habits into consideration, the boy may have been missing for upwards of three months. The last letter his mother received stated that he would be returning to Forles in five days, so she feels he may be somewhere nearby. With that, she gives you a picture of him and tells you his name is Segle. At this point, leave Ramul and head to Forest Edge Pass, located just outside of the Village of Hohn (this location becomes available on the World Map once you've taken this job). Here, coming out of a home unfamiliar to Lieza, is Segle. HOLN BRIDGE

As soon as you enter Holn Bridge, which leads to Lieza's village, you see that it is overrun with monsters. Five Barbarians are about to attack a small boy before your very eyes! Not one to let an innocent child die, Lieza calls for Paundit to help her save him. Though the monsters taunt her, little do they know the trouble they'll soon face when Lieza brings her wrath down upon them. As the fight begins, the boy runs away and hides among the nearby trees.

During this squabble, in addition to Lieza's and Kelack's Cure, Lieza's Earthquake and Paundit's Cold Breath spells will prove useful.

Once you've killed all but two of the Barbarians, the battle ends. Those remaining run away to save their natty hides. With the coast now clear, Lieza calls for the boy to come out of hiding. Thrilled to have seen you communicating with Paundit, the boy asks if you're from Holn, since that's where the Beastalkers are from. After he leaves for home, you notice a large rock strategically placed by the monsters to prevent you from crossing the bridge and entering Holn. Inspecting it gives you an idea. Perhaps someone in Ramul would be both strong and kind enough to help you move it...

anyway, he further reveals that the rock you so valiantly tried to get someone to help you move is locked in place with a powerful spell, and it'll take more than a mere human to move it. He then bids you adieu, as he has to catch an airship for Aldia.

Though Ele placed the seed of trust in her, will Lieza betray that trust and hold all humans in contempt for what the citizens of Ramul wish to do to her? Perhaps not, for as the occupant of the next cell introduces himself (why it's your old, and we do mean OLD, friend, Gogen the Great!), the small boy Lieza saved at the entrance to Holn Village sneaks into the jail through the manhole leading from the sewers.

Not knowing the others would react in this manner, the boy apologizes for not being more discreet, then tells you he's also there to help you escape. How's that for restoring faith in humanity? A quick look around the room, and the key to the cell door is found. Moments later you're free. Risking being recaptured, Lieza takes the extra time necessary to free Gogen from his cell as well. Was it faith in humans or the fact that Gogen spoke the same words Kikuru did to her back at the Shrine that led to her taking this chance? There's no time to worry about reasons now; race to where the boy is and speak to him. He tells you his name is Leets and that you should follow him as he shows you the escape route through the sewers.

Which, translated into contemporary speech means: "You're a damned annoyance, kid."

WHAT'S THE AIR SPEED VELOCITY OF AN AFRICAN SWALLOW?

When you return to Holn with Gogen in your party, he confirms that the rock has indeed been sealed with a magic spell. A few well-placed Explosion spells later you see that the blockade didn't stand much of a chance against your new friend. The bridge is now open for crossing.

As you reach the center of the bridge, a group of creatures appear and decide they'd rather kill you than let you enter Holn. Apparently they have set up camp in your hometown while you were away and have no intention of letting you back in. An attempt at retreating proves futile, as the two Barbarians who escaped your wrath earlier show up along with a few friends. Gogen, Lieza and Paundit are mandatory party members during this battle, so choose the two next best heavy hitters from your roster and get ready because it's clobberin' time.

Entering the house gives Lieza a feeling of sadness...everything is just as it was the day Gallarno's scientists took her away. Remembrances of her grandfather that hint at the powers she now masters are cut short, however, as a Beast Master—another of Gallarno's twisted creations—enters the house. Check 1 ➡

As soon as you enter the lab, you'll need to assemble a battle party just in case you meet up with any of the "locals". Begin by triggering the switches at the end of both the east and west corridors off the first intersection of Map 1. This will in turn open the doors at the end of the east and west corridors off the following T-branching intersection. The door at the northwest leads to Map 2, which contains a treasure chest.

The northeast door, however, leads to Map 3 and a stairway in the northeast corner that you'll need to pass through on your way to the next floor of the lab.

In Map 4, you'll find switches that control the locked doors next to them at both the northwest and northeast corner of the first room. First, enter Map 5 via the northwest door and attempt to flip the switch at the northwest. As you approach the switch, a group of undesirables appears and tries to stop you.

After the fight, turn on the switch (if you didn't already do so during the encounter) then head back to the previous room. Flip the switch at the northeast and enter the door next to it for—yup, you guessed it, another encounter!

When you've dispatched the enemy, proceed through the open door (which you triggered before in the west portion of the room) at the north end of the room. You'll now be in Map 6.

Check 3 ➡

Along the corridor's northern wall are three banks of three switches each. These switches control the movement of the sectional bridge needed to get to any of three possible exit doors located in Map 7. You will now need to flip the switches so that the bridge aligns in such a way that you can reach the door of your choosing. The first bank of switches controls the top section of the bridge, the second the center section, while the third bank of three switches moves the lower section. In each bank, the first switch causes the corresponding portion of the bridge to move to the far left, the second switch moves it to the center and the third will cause it to move to the far right. In other words, flip the switch in each bank that matches the position of the door you wish to pass through.

Of the three doors, the left one leads to Map 9 and sleeping quarters. Here you can use any of the beds to rest in to regain your Hit or Magic Points. The right door gains you entrance to Map 10 with a treasure chest that contains a weapon for Lieza.

IS ANYONE IN HERE?

These skeletons are really bored. Next, they'll be teaching their dinner to do tricks.

MORE SWITCHES

This guy is really just covering for the one he ripped just before you walked into the room.

THE MADNESS...

Why isn't there a "maybe" choice?

Check4 ➡

THE LONGEST CORRIDOR

The final door, the one in the center, points you towards the stairs to the next floor.

Once up the stairs in Map 8, continue around the extremely long corridors in Map 11 and enter the door at the end of it to step into an ambush.

A friendly game of "crack the whip."

Check5 ➡

MORE OF THOSE ANNOYING SWITCHES

Pass through the room when your attackers are no more, and in Map 13 you'll notice a bank of switches nine long. These switches, like the three banks of three before, control a sectional bridge. As was the case with the last bridge, the one in Map 14 also leads to three possible doors. The similarities end there though, as instead of each section being grouped by a bank of switches that move it east or west, these switches each correspond to the placement of a specific section in a specific place.

Confronting enough switches to make any naughty kid nervous.

The placement of the top section of the bridge is determined by switches five, six and two (shown in green); the center section by switches three, one and seven (shown in blue); and finally the bottom section will be controlled by switches nine, eight and four (shown in red). Due to the bridge being moved about in this fashion, turning on another switch within the same bridge section will result in the first shutting off (you can't have a piece of the bridge in two places at once, now can you?).

To go through the left door (to MAP 15), activate switches 5, 3, and 9.

To be able to go through the center door (to MAP 16), active switches 6, 1, and 8.

Finally, to gain access to the right door (to MAP 17), activate switches 2, 7, and 4.

Check 6 ➡

Triggering switches six, one and eight aligns the bridge so that you can access the door in the center—however, you should skip the room this door leads into, as its floor is booby-trapped. Entering Map 16 will cause you to fall through a trapdoor to the sectional bridge in Map 7. While you won't lose any Hit Points from the fall, you will have to fight your way back to the area where you were previously.

GLORY HOLE (NOT)

Lieza's just setting herself up for a fall...

Check 7 ➡

Switches two, seven and four enable you to reach the door at the east. From Map 17, proceed through the hallway to the Laboratory in Map 18 where the latest batch of transformed mutants awaits you. Just as the fight is about to get underway, Leets calls out to you from the balcony at the back of the lab. He's found the others from Holn. Lieza's grandfather then steps forward. Though grateful to once again see his granddaughter, all he can do at this point is watch the battle unfold in front of him and pray that Lieza and her companions emerge victorious—for all their sakes! At the start of this encounter, you'll have the opportunity to select three of the five members of your battle party again (Lieza and Gogen are mandatory members).

With a little help from Gogen, Lieza and her grandfather are soon together again once the battle has played out in your favor. Everyone is in such a good mood that Leets isn't yelled at (too much) for following you into such a dangerous place.

The reunion is short-lived though, as Gogen fills the group in on the fact that this was only one in a series of labs created by the Romalians, and that to stop the experiments for good you'll need to destroy the Main Lab. Lieza's grandfather gives her his blessing on traveling with Gogen and helping the humans, as well as Holn Village's precious Nol's Crystal. With the crystal in your possession you'll be able to open the way to Mother Claire, as well as accumulate experience from creatures that you defeat in a similar fashion to how Diekbeck distributes his, but with creatures you have captured via the Ravish spell instead of normal party members.

With a final tear-filled hug, Lieza says goodbye to her grandfather, then tells Gogen that she's up to the task of helping him fulfill his mission. Unbeknownst to Lieza, though days have past since she left, Fle still lies unconscious in his bed at Sabatico Shrine.

If you don't continue, Arc III will never be!

Though it pains you to do so, you must destroy these familiar apparitions. In the end, it is winning this battle that makes you realize giving up is not the answer to any problem. Self-preservation runs strong within you, and today that becomes all the more evident. If you can prevail over something as difficult as the guilt from causing the death of several loved ones, no matter how inadvertently, then what chance will Gallamo and Andel have against you—when you don't even LIKE them? Add to the fact that in stopping these madmen, you will give others a chance at having a life of their own, and the choice is clear! Learn from your mistakes, but don't let them control your destiny.

Morning breaks. Dickcheck enters the bedroom to check on Elc. It's now seemingly routine...go in, see that Elc is still unconscious, leave. It's no wonder that at first Dickcheck didn't notice you stirring in the bed. Once he does, however, the robot tells you to follow him to Kukuru's chamber so that she can bring you up to speed on what's been happening.

Recapping the obvious.

Kukuru tries hard to get Elc to check out the swinging scene, but has little success.

Enter Kukuru's chamber at the northernmost room of the shrine. There, standing at the altar, is Kukuru. After introducing herself to you, Kukuru explains that Arc was the one who brought you here. Amidst ramblings from Elc as to the fact that since the Silver Noah was the ship used when his village was destroyed—that Arc must somehow be at fault, Kukuru tells you to seek out Palencia Castle to learn the TRUE reason that your village was chosen. Concerned for your safety, Dickcheck offers to come with you on your journey.

When you're ready, speak to Kukuru and tell her Yes... when she asks if you're ready to leave for Palencia Castle to learn the truth. As she did previously with Shu and Shante, Kukuru teleports Dickcheck and yourself to Palencia.

could you have been so wrong... all this time? The Guardian goes on to say that the people of Touvil who were kidnapped by Andel (back at the end of Arc the Lad) will soon be executed at Palencia Tower. Poco hears this and runs over.

Poco's true intent was to come to the ruins of the castle in the hope that he might learn the whereabouts of the secret passage into Palencia Tower. The Fire Guardian obliges by showing them the way.

With time quickly running out, Poco comes up with a plan. He'll go on ahead if you'll return to the Shrine and tell Kukuru about the villagers. You're then given Leaf's Bead, an item which, when used, allows its host to return to Touvil. While Poco is being placed under arrest, who should enter the room but none other than Minister Andel! It’s out of the frying pan and into the fire for the daring do-gooders! Once they’ve been reacquainted, Andel spills the beans that they are to be used as bait to lure Kukurū out of the Shrine. Unfortunately, as Poco and Diek are led away, they make the mistake of bragging that they’ll be rescued. Andel counters this claim by ordering triple security be placed on their cell in the Tower Basement before he leaves. Normally it would be almost impossible, but now, thanks to Poco’s big mouth, it will be even harder for any would-be rescuers to bust them out of Palencia Tower.

Cut back to Elc, who has just arrived for the second time in Palencia. Though he has an important job to do, before doing anything else, you may want to first check out the small outdoor shop to the north as now is one of the few times it’s open (once you leave Palencia it closes again).

A trip to the normal shop for Recover Fruits would be a wise decision also, as you may end up needing them in the not-too-distant future. When you’ve finished shopping, leave Palencia and head south to the coast, where you’ll find Palencia Tower.

4 TIME FRAME: Palencia Guild—Before going to rescue Poco and Dickbeck.

5 DESCRIPTION:

Instead of heading directly into Palencia Tower, make Poco and Dickbeck wait a bit longer and enter what was once Palencia Castle to hunt for the wanted ghost Shako. This evil spirit materializes as soon as you wander into your first encounter in the Basement Warehouse Ruins of the castle. Since you're alone at this point in the game, equipping a Spear with the ability to Paralyze your foes may work to your advantage, as the less attacks you receive per battle turn, the better. Take out Shako first, as he has the ability to cast Paralyze Wind, a spell that can stop you dead in your tracks. With the defeat of Shako and his undead brethren, you'll have more than met the requirements necessary for collecting your latest bounty. If you feel outmatched here, merely defeat Shako, then leave the Basement.

AREN'T YOU A LITTLE SHORT FOR A STORMTROOPER?

Ele is all business on this mission, and this guard was just taught that unfortunate truth.

What he lacks in stealth, Ele makes up for in hand-to-hand combat skills as he lays the guard at the front gate of Palencia Tower flat after being seen on his way in. Quick thinking and sheer luck that the unconscious guard just happens to wear the same size clothes when you switch outfits with him saves you from discovery when another guard appears. This new guard informs you that you're late for your shift. What's your shift entail, you ask? Why, keeping watch over Poco (and Dickbeck), that's what! How's that for convenient?! A fast punch to the gut when the new guard makes a stink about your wanting to "clean up" the mess in the security booth eliminates all possible witnesses. Now that you have free roam of the tower, head inside to try to find the Prison section so that you can begin your shift (read: rescue Poco and Dickbeck).

HOW ABOUT WE GO RIGHT?

Once in the tower itself, take the stairs at the end of the east corridor to the floor below. Pass through Map 2 and make your way to the northwest corner of Map 3, and pass through to Map 4. Use the switch at the north end of Map 4, next to the locked door. Proceed through the now-open door into Map 5, where you'll find another switch. After flipping this second switch, return to Map 3, this time heading southeast through Maps 6, 7, and 8 as far as you can before turning west. Pass through the open door in Map 9, which was opened by way of the last switch you triggered, and flip the switch on the north wall of Map 10 (next to the claustrophobic guard). You'll notice the door to the right, on the other side of the heavy equipment, open once you do. Head back the way you came, but take the north corridor leading west in Map 8 to reach the door you just opened.

BACK TO ZERO

Through this door is yet another switch—this one controlling the position of the stairs next to it. Trigger it to lower them, creating a shortcut back to the area you first entered, Map 3. Pass by the stairway, continuing to the west where you'll find stairs that lead south to Map 12 with another switch. Flip this switch to open the door to the northeast of the very first door you came out of in Map 3 (which was the door above the shortcut stairway, in case you've lost track while navigating this maze of hallways and switches), then seek it out and pass through it.

"I guess my job is to dispense obvious advice to players..."

Check 3 ➔

EL POCO LOCO

Follow the next winding corridor in Map 13 until you reach the second locked door with a switch next to it (skip the first door for now, you'll come back to it soon). Trip this switch as well as the one in Map 15, then return to the first locked door (told you you'd be back soon) and unlock it. Proceed through the door and follow the stairs (some of which were lowered by a switch you recently tripped) through Map 17 to reach the Prison section.

A quick shout gets the attention of Poco, who then directs you to his cell. One mighty whack on the cell door later and Poco and Diekbeck receive a "Get Out Of Jail Free" card courtesy of Ele.

Now all that's left to do before you skedaddle is to free the villagers of Touvil, who Poco mentions have been taken somewhere downstairs. At this point both Poco and Diekbeck rejoin your battle party.

Ele's disguise must be so totally convincing....

ITEM!
Nothing, nada, zip!

Check 4 ➡

As you leave the cell, your cover is blown when you're seen with the prisoners. Though you'd rather leave no trace of having been in Palencia Tower, it's "exit stage right" when Poco reminds you that you don't have time to fight if you hope to rescue the villagers.

Once you've put some distance between yourself and the guards, ignore the switch at the base of the stairs in Map 18 (it's already triggered), then continue through the corridor the only way you can. Unlock the door at the east in Map 20 by flipping the switch next to it, then proceed through the area where Poco and Diekbeck were originally captured (the door at the top of which is controlled by the switch you ignored after the jailbreak) until you reach Map 22. As you wind your way through this room, composed of a series of platforms connected by short stairs, lightning flashes as several Medusa Lizards are summoned to stop you. During this battle, attacking with only magic abilities would be best, as using weapons and getting countered may cost you more in Hit Points than you might be willing to spill. Poco's Healing Harp, Cheer Trumpet, and Wild Lion Drum, along with Elc's Explosion and Fire Storm, will help you get the job done right.

HERE A SWITCH, THERE A SWITCH

With the battle behind you, leave the room by the exit to the southeast. At the end of the corridor in Map 29, fall through the trap door in the floor to drop to a cell below.

On the wall of the cell are two switches. While you may think that since the left switch opens the door to this cell it should be the one you trigger—don't. It also raises a wall in the large room to the south, dividing it into two, and that would be bad. Instead, begin getting yourself out of this new mess by flipping the switch to the right. Doing this will open a hidden passage to another cell to the west, where you'll find two more switches. After triggering both of these (the left switch opens the door to this second cell), proceed to the larger room in the south where you'll find an open door (courtesy of the right switch in the cell you just exited). In Map 25 is yet another cell with two switches on its wall. Ignore the right switch, since it closes the door to the second cell, and trip the one to the left. This will open the door to the southeast in the larger room. Head through this newly opened door to Map 26. After flipping the left switch, a hidden section in Map 24 will open to the east. Though the way out of this trap can be found there, before leaving, trigger the right switch as well, then return to the cell you originally fell into via the trap door. Here you'll find that the last switch opened a hidden passage to Map 27, containing a treasure chest. After you've snagged the treasure, leave the area through the door at the southeast in Map 24 and the stairs beyond to reach Map 29.

THE HEROIC TRIO

Besides, Poco is getting creeped out by his evil doppelganger.

Getting the obvious out of the way first is so first-year adventurer.

Diekbeck makes an obvious observation, too.

Check 6 ➔

Once out of the cells and back upstairs in the corridor, trigger both of the switches you'll find here. The one next to the stairs lowers a large stairway at the northern end of the Map 22 where you fought the Medusa Lizards, while the one to the west (be careful not to step on the trap door again before reaching the switch or it's back to the cells you go) disengages the trap door so that you can walk over it safely. Next, return to the platform room and take the new stairway you lowered to—another trap! This one's an ambush!

IT'S A TRAP!

Elc tries out some of the negotiating skills that will serve him well in the Imperial Senate when he's old.

Check 7 ➔

THE LOST INHABITANTS OF TOUVIL

A passage leading to two staircases opens after you've defeated the bounty hunter wannabes. If you take the east stairway in Map 31, you'll come to a cell full of the remains of long forgotten experiments. After seeing this atrocity first-hand, if it wasn't crystal-clear to Elc before that Andel needs to be stopped, it certainly is now. The stairs to the west, however, lead to your objective, the cell where the Touvil citizens are being held. With the villagers found, now comes the matter of actually getting them out of the tower. For this, Poco suggests using the secret passage he and Diekbeck used to get in. After a small pat on the back for Poco, he asks if you'd like to rest before heading for the secret passage...

After rounding up the villagers, it's time to leave the cell far behind you.

Cut to Andel's Chamber. When a guard informs Andel of Poco's escape, it doesn't take much for him to realize Elc is involved. The order to kill on sight is then handed down. Soon after the guard leaves, a mysterious voice calls out, expressing disappointment in Gallamo. Could this be the powerful being that the Fire Guardian spoke of in the ruins of Palencia Castle, or just the dude from the movie preview voiceovers? Time will tell...

Cut back to our heroic trio. With the villagers assembled in an old storage room, Poco reveals the entrance to the secret passage. As the last villager passes through, several guards burst in. After ordering Poco and Diekbeck to escort the villagers to safety, Elc stays behind in order to slow the guards down. This may have been a bad decision, for as soon as the door shuts behind Poco and the others, Andel teleports into the room. With a flick of his wand, the guards are transformed into more of his evil creations. A heavy burden is then set upon the young Flame Master. Lose to Andel's minions here and your friends at the Chimera Labs will suffer the same consequence. With that, he teleports out just as suddenly as he had entered. Fight to the best of your ability, for if you fail here you won't be able to help the others at the lab. Hopefully, you took our advice and picked up a few extra Recover Fruits before leaving Palencia, because Elc himself has no healing spell.

After a little positive reinforcement game of "I'm OK, you're OK", Elc leads the villagers out of the cell.

Andel works on his nefarious plan to capture Elc and perfect a process he's dubbed "char-broiling".

SUR-PRISE, SUR-PRISE, SUR-PRISE!

Once you've proven yourself the better fighter, the action shifts to Map 35 where Poco and the others are almost out of harm's way. Almost, but not quite, actually. At the end of the passage lies a pack of sleeping monsters that won't allow anyone or anything to pass by if they awaken. It's decided that on the off chance that Elc was overtaken, they should attempt sneaking by the sleeping critters instead of waiting for the guards to come and recapture them (any guesses as to what's going to happen? Anyone? C'mon—you should see this coming from a mile away... Anyone? Class? Bueller?). One by one the villagers sneak past this latest stumbling block, until Lishena's turn comes up (guess yet?), WHA-THUMP!!! She trips, the noise waking the creatures from their nap. Time to haul ass out of here.

As each of the remaining five villagers attempt to run to safety, it's up to you to kill the monsters before any of the girls are mortally wounded.

With the death of the last foe, Elc makes an appearance in the passage, albeit fashionably late. As Elc calls to Poco and Diekbeck, another battalion of enemies shows itself. At the start of this battle, since Poco is too far away to cast his Healing Harp, you might want to retreat with Elc and use a healing item on him if his Hit Points are low from his last encounter.

Hard to deny that logic.

No, this isn't a scene from the PlayStation®2 launch day.

STORYCHECK

I bet that suggestion to put a random on the tower doesn't seem so nutty now!

Meanwhile, back in Touvil... Our heroes return to the Sabatico Shrine to fill Kukur in on what's happened. Elc tells her that he must get to the Main Chimera Lab immediately—Lieza's life may depend upon it! Having overheard your wish to leave, Chongara enters the room and offers you the use of the Silver Noah. With your travel arrangements now figured out, leave the Shrine and head to Touvil Quarry to board the Silver Noah.

RETURNING TO TOUVIL

Once you've made it back to the Bio Research Lab, and are outside the reach of Andel's magic, Elc uses Leaf's Bead to return everyone to Touvil—and safety.

Cut to Andel's Chamber. Andel tells the mysterious voice of a backup plan he is about to put into action.

Houfion

After fleeing the Romalian Battleship in the Hien after Shante fell overboard, Shu makes his way to Houfion, a city on the Romalian border, to lay low until the heat dies down.

Though it's run-down, and most of its inhabitants are below the poverty level, Houfion has all the normal establishments you'd find in a more prosperous area.

Due to a large wall dividing Houfion and Romalia, partly to keep the citizens of Houfion from fleeing to Romalia, it will prove difficult to get inside and continue with your mission to find Gallamo. After asking around, you find that a rebel group called the Resistance has a presence in town. Perhaps through them you can discover a way into Romalia. Unfortunately, because of the threat they pose to Romalia, the Romalian Patrol Corps make periodic sweeps of Houfion in an attempt to capture the rebel soldiers.

Begin by talking to the bartender in the Houfion Bar to try to learn more about Romalia. The only information he shares with you is that Moris would be the man to see about this topic, and that he can be found at the Inn. Aside from this tidbit, the bartender is too afraid of spies listening for any conversation about Romalia to tell you any more. Though Shu doesn't yet know it, Tosh is sitting at a table in the corner drinking alone.

As you leave the bar, you witness one of the Romalian raids first-hand. Three Romalian Patrol Corps officers are interrogating a young boy mercilessly. Shu, in an attempt to stop them, causes the officers to "turn" on him.

As you're on your way to his room, Danny, the boy you saved from the Romalian Patrol Corps, enters the Inn to thank you. Danny blurts out that you must be a part of the Resistance—an accusation which you're adamant (that's right, in a scene left on the cutting room floor, Shu had dressed up as the 80s' glam singer) in denying. After giving Danny some good advice, knock on Moris' door. When he lets you in, you tell him that you need information...specifically, how to get inside Romalia. Moris tells you the only thing going in or out of Romalia nowadays would be the supply train for the Romalian Forces, and that airships like the Hien are no good as they'd be shot down before getting anywhere near the wall. Other than that, Moris doesn't offer much help. When you mention that you're going after Gallarno, Moris changes his tune. Instead of pleading the fifth, he tells you of a man with "wild red hair" at the bar who may be able to help you... Tosh!!! At this point, rest up, save your game, and leave the Inn.

Seeing no other way to get the point across, Shu bitch-slaps the boy, knocking him to the ground, while yelling at him that this is not a game and that he should go home. Once inside the Cave-In area, a worker from Houfion approaches you and explains the current situation. It's then up to you to stop the gas that's been coming from a nearby large hole. When you're ready, enter the hole by walking up to it and choosing Yes when asked if you'd like to Enter Heap Cave-In? Though hazy with gas, do your best to make your way through the passageways towards the end of the northwest passage. At the far end, on the northern wall, you'll find a switch. Turn this switch on to stop the gas from being expelled through the vent at the passage entrance, then head back up to ground level. Talk to the worker, telling him of a hidden doorway you saw in the process of shutting off the gas in order to complete the requirements for a job well done.

- To start this job, leave Houfion and return to the Heap Cave-In (to the east of Houfion if you've forgotten already). Jump into the hole as you did before, then fight your way to the central point of the passage leading to the northwest. Here, next to the hidden doorway you told him of when you completed the “Stop the Terrible Gas Leak!” job, is the worker from Houfion. He tells you that after opening the doorway he found a tunnel crawling with monsters. At this point, head inside the tunnel and try your best to eradicate anything that gets in your way as you travel to its opposite end—far to the north. Once you reach the room at the far end, the real task of stopping the monsters begins. On the rear wall are six panels which open one at a time under a set circumstance, allowing six Ghost Skeletons to pass through. Around the room there are also six pillars which you can move by pushing. The object here is to push the six pillars in front of each of the panels so that they block them from opening. The triggering devices for the six panels are the seven floor tiles scattered throughout the room with the same “square and grid” type pattern on them as the tops of each of the six moveable pillars have. If you avoid stepping on any of these tiles while moving the pillars into position, the Ghost Skeletons will not enter the room. If you do mistakenly hit one, and you want to fight (rather than leave the room and re-enter to try pushing again), the best strategy to defeat these creatures of the undead would be to position yourself between as many of the pillars as possible, thereby cutting down on the number of foes you can be attacked by during each battle turn. This will greatly improve your odds for survival. Once all six panels have been blockaded, leave the hidden tunnel and speak to the worker in the Cave-In passageway to complete this job.

NOSEY LITTLE BRAT

Danny sees the Shu puns coming a mile away...

While investigating the tunnel, Gallano's name is mentioned, and Danny, the little snoop, asks, "Who is that?" Tosh gives the boy the old "none of your business" to shut him up. Just as Danny starts to comment about the treatment he's receiving from you, a squad of guards from the Patrol Corps arrives and asks for you to show your papers. Since you're outnumbered, now would be a good time to make a break for it. As the three of you are running from the troops (ever notice how hard it actually is to run on train tracks? If you ever have to, it's best not to look down or you're definitely going down hard on a tie), a group of monsters materializes on the tracks ahead of you, blocking your retreat. Danny makes a break for it only to be followed by shadows summoned by one of the creatures. The rest of the guards soon arrive at your location. Back at the end of the Romalia Tunnel, our heroes Tosh and Shu, fresh from putting yet another batch of Gallarno's transformed rejects out of their misery, race frantically back to Houfion so they can warn the Resistance before it suffers a fatal blow.

Upon returning to Houfion, enter the Bar to see that you're too late. Before losing consciousness, the bartender tells you that the monsters from Romalia were responsible for what's happened (Duh!). At this point, make your way through the back room to the Resistance Base below the Bar. Your worst fears are soon realized as you see the bodies of your fallen friends and comrades lying in the outer hallway and assembly room—Moris' included. The time to grieve is cut short when the shadowy creatures who caused this pain emerge from the Operations Room. Their leader, the wanted android SA-200SP, carries Danny's limp body in its arms. Seconds later, the boy is hurled through the air towards you, landing on the floor at your feet with a loud thud. The inevitable then begins.

Tosh is really pissed that the SA-200 hosted a kegger while he was out. They totally wrecked the base!

One, who pulls all the strings, has called them all here to brief them on the status of his plans for world conquest. Amidst petty bickering, he is informed that the Sky Castle is nearly complete. In order to power it, however, the darkness within humanity must be drawn upon. To set this stage of the plan in motion, creatures disguised as soldiers have been placed within both Seirya and Millmana and the train cannon Graunohn is now fully operational. The obliteration of the lands surrounding Millmana are testament to this last fact. Even with all this, Anel still awaits the right moment to trigger the "Martyr Plan". At that time, Arc and the others within the lineage of the Seven who sealed the Dark One long ago shall pay for that disgrace with their lives.

Cut to the Chimera Main Lab Security Room. Here we see Gallarno just bitching in general about the way things have been, and are going for him lately. A guard reports that a Hunter has captured Iga and is requesting a meeting with Gallarno to turn him over. Not since Boushh escorted Chewbacca into Jabba the Hutt's Palace has such a ploy been used to get close to an adversary.

As Iga is taken from the room, to be placed in a cell until he can be transformed into another hideous creature for Gallarno's army, the General is left alone with the Hunter who's no taller than a mere lad. In true villainous fashion, Gallarno lets his mouth run more than he should, disclosing the details of the Martyr Plan and how The Tower will be the starting point.

AND WHOSE FAULT IS IT?

After the battle plays out in your favor, Danny regains consciousness, but only briefly. He's lucid just long enough to tell you he's taking full responsibility for what happened. Shu and Tosh then bring Danny to Moris' room at the Inn to rest, which is the best thing he can do right now.

LET'S BLOW THIS POPSICLE STAND

Desperate times call for desperate measures.

Return now to the Houfion Bar, where Shu and Tosh are going over their plans for infiltrating Romalia. Rather than taking control of the train, they decide to destroy it instead. Blowing up the train while it's at the start of the tunnel should allow the two of them to sneak into Romalia amidst the enormous confusion that would follow such a strike. The plan is now for Tosh to act as a decoy and draw the Romalian Patrol Corps away from the tunnel in order to give Shu enough time to set the explosives. To help Tosh in his end of things, Shu gives him a Cast-Off Ball and tells him to use it when he feels he can't hold off the guards any longer. For this mission, bringing along a few extra Recover Fruits, as well as equipping Shu with a Sub Machine Gun, may be wise.

Head out of Houfion and return to the Romalia Tunnel. Shortly after Shu leaves to begin work on placing the bombs, Tosh realizes he may have bitten off more than he can chew. Though it puts you directly in harm's way, Shu needs time to do his part of the plan. You have no choice but to jump right in and get things started. While stalling for time, if you feel outnumbered you can prolong the battle several turns by running to the tracks to the east. If or when you reach a point where you feel you just can't go on fighting, and that you're going to be defeated, highlight the Cast-Off Ball in your inventory and press X to use it. With a puff of smoke you'll be teleported to safety. Hopefully you'll have bought Shu enough time. If not, you get to do it all over again, baby. This is not an optional scenario.

If you want to earn more experience or give Shu more time, you can continue to fight with Tosh, but after twenty battle turns he will start to not-so-subtly remind you to use the Cast-Off Ball.

Meanwhile, further down the tracks... Shu is shown setting the explosives. After he's armed the first, a squad from the Romalia Patrol Corps discovers him. You'll now have to finish arming the bombs while you dispose of the guards. To do this properly, inspect a bomb once during each battle turn to first Open the cover, then Set the timer and finally Turn on the switch to arm the device (looking at more than one bomb, or a bomb more than once will prompt Shu to remind himself not to rush). Do not look at any of the bombs while an enemy is in range for an attack, or you'll instead commit your turn to the attacker rather than a bomb. Speaking of attacking, don't forget to do so each turn after you've advanced the bombs, or you may be defeated before completing this portion of the mission. Along with arming the remaining two bombs, all three enemies must be taken out within the time made available by Tosh to successfully complete the mission.

VOICES VII

RYOJI AKAGAWA—EXECUTIVE PRODUCER OF ARC COLLECTION

When you set out to make Arc the Lad, were you trying to make a truly unique RPG experience?

Probably anyone who creates an RPG game is thinking that way. And I think the difference is whether the surprise is well concealed or not. If you are pursuing one thing and you are successful at it, you will enjoy a nice reward. It is not like if it becomes the obligation where you have to pursue it. Experiencing an RPG is much more interesting and enjoyable if you willingly play, and the more you play, the more enjoyment you get over time. In Arc the Lad, that's how I wanted it.

One example of this is the monster game in Arc 2 where you can capture monsters. And of course, there are the elements of adventure and other things, but to catch the monster itself is a lot of fun—very enjoyable. It is also enjoyable and fun to raise the monsters. So enjoyable, in fact, that we decided to make the monster battling and management a game by itself. That's how Arc Arena came about. I think the creation of Arc Arena demonstrates that we, the creators, had a lot of devotion to the making of the game.

Meanwhile, as the guards leave their posts at the Chimera Main Lab to help with the train wreckage, Iga breaks free of his bonds and escapes from his cell.

When we return to the two responsible for all the commotion, we find that Shi and Tosh must head west down the tracks past the wreckage of the train in order to get inside the Romalian Castle Wall. Time is of the essence, so after hitting the shop for a few more Recover Fruits (trust us, you'll need a few extra with what's to come), get going before the Patrol Corps realizes the derailment was just a ruse.

Not one to pick up the slack of others, Zalbad tells the officer to let Gallarno clean up his own mess. The Dark One soon cuts in, telling Zalbad that he feels otherwise. His reason? It could disrupt the Martyr Plan if Arc and his friends are allowed to run free. Due to this, the General is thereby ordered to warn Gallarno of the impending threat.

Cut to Gallarno. As he watches the security monitors he can't help but gloat that having so many of Arc's companions in one place will make destroying them that much easier. Having them all together also gives him an idea... prepare the "machine", he commands.

AND YOU ARE?

As we return to Shu and Tosh, seeing as how there's no way to go back, your only choice is to continue forward. In Map 8 you'll meet up with Gogen and Lieza, who seem to have gotten lost wandering through the complex. With the four of you now allied, head through the door to the south and then west down the following corridor until you reach a locked door. Flip the switch, then proceed through the door to the Chimera Research Lab's welcome wagon. A nasty surprise awaits you just before this encounter gets underway. What you thought were your friends, in actuality are two more of Gallarno's creations—courtesy of the Illusion Machine. During this skirmish your best bet would be to take out the Gogen wanna-be first, as his magic isn't exactly second rate.

Shu and Tosh are back on the sexual orientation thing...

KEY TO SUCCESS—CONFUSION

As you leave the room, the scene cuts back to Gallarno at Chimera Lab Security. Amidst more gloating, we learn that his plan is to have our heroes so caught up in thinking that any friends they meet up with are just Gallarno's robotic toys—that they end up killing the true flesh and blood versions as well! Gogen and Lieza can be found wandering the platforms in another area within the research lab. After Gogen explains to Lieza that they must seek out and help Tosh, select three party members from your pool of captured monsters to travel with the two magic users. Once you've done that, make your way to the doors at the northern sections of Map 11.

This is Lieza's version of a smack-down. She's so sweet...

Check 5 ➔

As Gogen and Lieza ponder the question of who or what their last opponents were, our next group of daring do-gooders—Elc, Diekbeck and Poco—come to a standstill at a locked door in Map 14. Mounted on the walls nearby are six switches. One must release the lock on the door, but what of the other five? Knowing Gallarno, they may be part of a trap leading to certain death—or worse! Truth be told, triggering the wrong switches may set off an alarm alerting any monsters in the area to your whereabouts, or it might heal you... how convenient. To help with your decision to activate the switches, check out the screenshots to the right.

When the door opens, pass through it to meet up with Arc and Kukurū. Hmm... we thought Kukurū needed to stay inside the Shrine??? Aside from that obvious clue, Poco points out the dark aura surrounding the two lying look-a-likes. Hardly worth the bullets, huh? Bring it on!

After you've done away with this latest set of evil twins, Poco suggests that Gallarno must be behind these familiar-looking creations.

Check 6 ➔

While Elc, Diekbeck, and the ever-frightened Poco continue on, the focus turns to Shante and Gruga. As they make their way across the platforms in Map 16, they are spotted by the monsters guarding this area. During this encounter, you might want to consider positioning Shante behind Gruga on one aisle of the platforms, leaving her safe to cast healing magic while he takes the brunt of the attacks.

Once the melee has ended, walk north from the intersection of the platforms and trigger the switch on the wall to open the door at the northwest. Next, head back around the platforms and pass through the door to find Shante's previously-believed-to-be-dead brother Alfred (as if that's not a big enough clue that something isn't quite right...). The real fun begins moments later when Elc and Lieza make an appearance (or do they?).

All is not lost, however. It seems that Gallarno isn't fooling anyone with his replicants, as Gruga and Shante both know that the monsters they just struck down were not their friends and loved ones.

Elsewhere in the maze that is the Chimera Research Lab, Iga fights on alone... His purpose—to destroy the machine that creates the soulless copies of his friends and fellow teammates. Before him in Map 18 is a hallway with three doors. Through the first door is Gallarno's version of Iga. We soon see that this version pales in comparison to the real thing. The door in the center hides several monsters of the basic variety, but when you combine their numbers with the fact that Iga does not have a healing ability, problems can arise for a lone warrior... even one as strong as Iga.

The last door, to the east, leads to the machine responsible for the cyber-clones, but to reach it you must first fight your way past the monsters that appear as you enter the room.

With the winged demons out of the way, the Illusion Machine is destroyed in a massive display of power. After thus accomplishing what he set out to do, Iga leaves to seek out his companions.

STORYCHECK

Yes, our man Gallarno likes to watch.

Back in the halls of the lab, Tosh and Shu reach an intersection only to come face-to-face with Gogen and Lieza. Unbeknownst to them, these are not Gallarno's replicant wind-up toys, but the real Beasttaker and Great Magic Master... and they too assume the faces they see across from them are those of an enemy. As the two parties each wait for the other to make a move, Elc and Poco come around a corner from the north—followed shortly thereafter by Shante and Gruga via a southern corridor. It's only when they all start in with the trash talk of how they're going to kill each other that it dawns on them—each party is referring to all the others as “copies”. At this point, Iga, the final participant in this daring raid (and voice of reason) makes an appearance. He explains that Gallarno's intent was to trick them into killing each other... but since the Illusion Machine was destroyed, those present here must be their true versions. When everyone agrees, including a reluctant Tosh, the group bands together and begins their hunt for Gallarno with renewed vigor.

THE ONE

Of course, this would allow Iga to try to recreate the “two Max” skit. Question: which would be on top?

COME TOGETHER

Tosh and Shu, prowling the rooms nearby, hear and feel the effects of Iga's success and rush towards the commotion. Upon entering a room down the corridor, the two are baffled by what they see... Elc, with Iga following close behind, dashing around erratically. To find out what may have caused their current behavior, Tosh and Shu continue forward towards the area that Elc and Iga came from.

Cut to Chimera Lab Security. When Gallarno is informed of Iga's escape and subsequent rampage that resulted in the destruction of the Illusion Machine, the General alters his plans. The coup de grace will now include the small-in-stature bounty hunter who until this time has been merely a spectator to Gallarno's failed attempts to stop the rebellious intruders. How he will come into play though will remain a mystery for the time being.

This encounter is about to get more complicated.

Check 8 ➡

DECISIONS, DECISIONS...

Once you've arrived at Map 22, four stairways lead out of this room. Each of these exits bring you to a room containing six enemies which you must fight in order to reach the room beyond. During these encounters, specific characters from within your character pool will be deemed mandatory party members.

Poco may stop shaking in his shoes, and Gogen will have more opportunity for gloating after they lead you to victory in the battle that awaits you in the room that the northwest stairs lead to. Through the door on the other side of your foes in this room lies another where you can rest and change your Battle Party.

Climbing the northeast stairs gives Gruga, Shu, and Shante a chance to prove that they're not just along for the ride.

Heading down the stairs at the southwest leads you to a brawl in which Toshi and Iga must take part.

The southeast stairs demand that Elc and Lieza show what they're made of when you choose to proceed in this direction. After defeating the Blood Zombies, an IceKnife may be received.

You may want to take notice of the fact that the enemies in these past four areas will regenerate if you return to any of the rooms. With this in mind, if you feel you need to level-raise, now would be a good time to do so.

A HERD OF ILC

Beyond the room where you fought the Zombies (Map 25) lies a room with a locked door. Flip the switch next to it, then proceed through Map 31 to the door at the northeast. Though Iga destroyed the Illusion Machine with his own hands, numerous replicants of Elc remain in this room for reasons unexplained. After a final tease from the viceroy of voyeurism, Gallarno, you're asked to choose the party members for this encounter. The only stipulation is that Elc may not participate, as once the battle heats up it may be difficult for the others to tell the real Elc from the counterfeits.

After terminating the clones of your friend, return to the main chamber. As before, as you approach the center of the room, Gallarno calls out to you. Impressed by your fortitude, he opens a second door, this one to the northwest, and dares you to defeat what lies within.

Toshi and Iga mysteriously stray into conversation about Richard Simmons.

Check 10 ➡

TOSH REPLICANTS...EXCELLENT!

The contents of this room are similar to that of the last—replicants of one of your party members. The lucky winner this time... the feisty S.O.B. Tosh. Choose your battle party, which of course must be minus Tosh, then get to it.

With this latest test of your skills behind you, return once again to the main chamber. As soon as you step into the center of the room, Gallarno congratulates you for a job well done and opens a third door directly to the north. Passing through this door brings you to the Chimera Lab Security office.

Elc in a rare moment of doubt.

STORYCHECK

As Gallarno's pathetic puss appears on the security monitors, you realize you've been tricked. He can't help but laugh when you suggest that Romalia's reign of terror will soon end. After his chuckling has subsided to little more than petty snickering, you learn that he was a decoy... one meant to stall you while the remaining Generals progressed the Dark One's Martyr Plan unhindered by your distractions. It's when Tosh calls for Gallarno's death that a panel opens in the floor—revealing a Mecha Monster which rises to confront the party. Seconds later, a beam is emitted from the cyborg beast, resulting in the instant paralysis of your entire party.

Meanwhile, in a room somewhere else within the complex, Gallarno explains his new pet to the young bounty hunter. The bounty hunter's reaction is to tell Gallarno the truth... that he thinks the General is afraid of losing to these rebels, and that he's nothing more than disposable trash to those truly in charge of Romalia. In an attempt to hide a bruised ego, Gallarno claims credit for making Romalia what it is today. Surely they wouldn't be in their position of power without his Chimera Labs and the beasts created there. Further comments prompt Gallarno to sense that something isn't right with the bounty hunter he had come to favor. Unfortunately for him, the revelation comes too late—for at that moment, the bounty hunter casts aside his cheap disguise and slashes out at the controls for the Mecha-Monster...

Back at Chimera Lab Security, the Mecha-Monster, now deactivated, crumbles to the ground. A glance upwards at the monitors reveals the party responsible... the bounty hunter's true identity is Arc! As he advances towards Gallarno, Arc calls out for you to get in there and help him—fast!

Upon entering the nearby room, you're stunned by what you see, as you come face-to-face with what Gallarno has become—one of his own Chimera abominations! Doing this unspeakable act to himself to further the plans of his true master, the Dark One, proves what you've known all along... that Gallarno is a one-a spiey meat-a ball, and loony to boot! It's come down to this... defeat Gallarno—and in the process stop the Chimera Research Labs for good—or fail and be transformed yourselves. The latter cannot be allowed to happen! You MUST destroy Gallarno—there isn't a choice in the matter.

WHO'S WATCHING WHO?

Elc, frightened by Gallarno's immense face, loses all control of his bowels.

Which is clear from all the bird poop on the roof.

AT LAST—GALLARNO!

For this boss encounter, you might want to consider taking two characters with you that have healing abilities—just in case. As for the boss, Gallarno himself has seven target points throughout his now massively hulking form... one at his head, and six along his base. The lower six are there to block you from what should be your primary target, the head—to defeat this boss, you need only destroy the target point located there. Characters such as Gogen whose Earthquake, Thunder Storm and Diamond Dust magic abilities have a high range and hit more than one target make for valuable additions to your party. Where sheer strength is concerned, Tosh, Gruga and Iga are all prime candidates to fill that category. When attacking, concentrate all your efforts on Gallarno, as the Death Mages will only respawn once you kill them. Aside from magic use, you'll need to cut your way through the base of Gallarno's new form to be able to reach his head. Hitting this target point really annoys your foe—so much so that any physical attacks attempted here will be met with a severe counterattack. Another attack to watch out for is the flamethrower attack from the two smaller dragon-like heads on his shoulders that can strike your entire party if you have them huddled together while attacking the beast's head.

When this battle is done, one chapter in your lives comes to an end, and another begins. Though you've defeated Gallarno and stopped the madness that was the Chimera Research Labs, there are still three more Generals, as well as the Dark One himself, for you to face.

Guided together by the Guardians themselves, each of your team as important as the next, perhaps working as one you may have what it takes to overcome adversity and save the world.

The mutants have come out to play.

A little pep talk to rally the troops before the reality of what lies ahead sets in...

HOSTILE TAKEOVER

After teleporting to the Romalia Skyport from the Chimera Research Lab, speak to Chongara who's standing at the ticket counter. When he tells you of a disturbance in Greyshinne that needs your immediate attention, follow him outside to the hangar bays so that you may board the Silver Noah and hear more about the emergency. If you're worried about the Hien—don't. Chongara has already docked it aboard the much larger Silver Noah.

If you return to Houfion or the areas around it first, you will have the opportunity to perform some new jobs that are now available, as well as track down a few more wanted creatures (see the preceeding page). A point to be aware of—now that your characters are no longer working individually or in small groups, any battlefields you enter will take this into account and up the enemy rate accordingly.

In the Operations Room of the Silver Noah, you find out that Millmana is expanding their military into Greyshinne. Iga's home country will never succumb to Yagun and his troops! The leader of the Amaidar Monks will see to that! Further information reveals that Anel may be the mastermind behind this turn of events that will help bring about the "Martyr Plan". Arc offers a little more insight into the Martyr Plan in that he's heard that it includes erecting towers at locations throughout the world in order to revive something—but what that something is, he isn't sure of. With that, the Silver Noah makes its way to Greyshinne.

THE 13TH WARRIOR—ACT 1

Yagun only said "bedeviled" here because his mind wandered to thoughts of deviled eggs...Mmmm.

Will you wear my cape and be my bitch?

Upon arriving in Greyshinne, rest up in Paysus and have your fortune told by the mysterious fortune-teller, then head west to the Amaidar Temple so you can address the Archmonk. He tells you that Millmana has conquered a bordering country and is currently gathering their forces to storm the neighboring city of Paysus. Before any further information can be shared, Sania the fortune-teller from Paysus barges into the Archmonk's Chamber. The self-proclaimed prophet claims to have important details on Millmana's military, but the cost of her sharing it is unacceptable—a look at the Amaidar Scripture, the holy scripture written by and for the monks of Amaidar. For reasons known only to the soothsayer, Sania is interested in learning the history of Amaidar and its previous Archmonk. Iga steps forward and tells her that one must complete the rigorous training of the Amaidar Temple, as well as be pure of heart, in order to view the documents. He then shuns her suggestion that he open the sealed scripture for her. Before she can ask again, one of the temple monks enters the chamber and announces that the King has arrived to meet with Iga.

In light of Gallarno's recent misfortune, General Yagun, the head of Millmana's armed forces, warns Minister Andel to tread lightly or he may suffer the same fate. Completely unaware that Iga is returning to the Amaidar Temple, Yagun and Andel may be counting their chickens before they hatch in assuming that because the monks have no leader they will be an easy victory. Further discussion between the two sheds more light (or should that be "darkness"?) on the subject of the Martyr Plan... The towers that Andel is constructing will absorb the negative energy from those around them. This energy will then be used to allow the Sky Castle to rise from the ground, thus paving the way for the return of the Dark One. At this point, an officer enters the room and informs Yagun that the emissary from Greyshinne has arrived to negotiate a peaceful end to the conflict. The General's response... Kill the emissary and send his body back to Greyshinne as a message—that there will be NO peace!

Tosh finally airs the group's feeling that Iga needs some time with a woman...BAD.

In the Proving Grounds of Amaidar Temple, Iga greets the King, and hears the favor his Majesty has traveled so very far to ask—that Amaidar surrender to the forces of Millmana! Can the King be so foolish as to believe General Yagun's false promise of safety for the people of Greyshinne? Even if he isn't, Millmana's cannon is not something the King wishes to face down, therefore the choices are limited to...well, one. At Iga's request, your group retreats to the Archmonk's Chamber to ponder what the King has just asked of him and the other Amaidar Monks.

When it seems that Iga is ready to throw in the towel, it's the newcomer Sania who steps forward and verbally smacks Iga to attention. The result is a renewed sense of faith within Iga...both in himself and that of his friends and country. When asked why she wishes to know about Amaidar and the Archmonk, Sania doesn't hesitate to tell you the reason...revenge! The mystic's parents were slain, and hopefully by learning more about the Archmonk that was defeated by Arc and the others, Sania can discover who commanded the evil imposter, and thus bring her closer to finally fulfilling her lifelong quest to avenge her mother and father's slaughter. With a word of caution, Iga agrees that since she has shown him the light, he too will help her get the information she seeks from the holy scripture. You then leave the Archmonk's Chamber for the Paysus library, where the scripture is kept.

Once inside Paysus, enter the library and talk to the patrons on the first floor to find that someone has stolen something of importance. When you proceed upstairs to the second floor, the librarians confirm what you had feared—that the Amaidar holy scripture was the target of the theft! Your urgent search for the guilty party begins now.

As you go to leave the library, Sania exclaims that she knows where the holy scripture is...sort of. She then pulls out her crystal ball and attempts to conjure up an image of the scripture's current whereabouts. It doesn't take long for an image of the thief to appear to her. Although Sania can't say for certain that he is still in Paysus, she feels strongly that the culprit is still somewhere within Greyshtinne. Now that you have a pretty good description of who you're looking for, you're sent out of the library so that you may try to track him down.

A TOUCH OF EVIL

Far away in Millmana, darkness envelops the office of General Yagun. The Dark One has arrived (now you know why they call him The Dark One). The General asks what good news the mysterious presence has for him, to which he's told that the Amaidar Scripture shall soon be in their hands.

As the light returns to his office, signifying that The Dark One has left, Yagun hints of another fiendish plot up his sleeve, but before revealing what it may be, the General erupts into maniacal laughter.

Once you've asked each of these eleven suspects for their alibi, return to the second floor of the Paysus library and talk to the Hunter again. Since the thief is no longer in the city, you'll now have to scour Greyshinne for him. With the Amaidar Temple, Sealed Ruins, and Greyshinne Skyport each ruled out for their own reasons, all that's left as potential hideouts are the Noyam and Rutar Plains and the Anan Flats. Knowing this, your next task will be to head out of Paysus to start searching these three locations. You may want to stop by some of the establishments within the city first, as they may have items, jobs, or services that could benefit you.

SHAKEDOWN

Meanwhile, outside the Paysus library you notice that the description Sania came up with may not be that helpful, as it seems to fit practically half the citizens of Paysus alone. To weed out the innocent, return to the second floor of the library and talk to the man next to the open cabinet where the scripture used to be kept—who incidentally also fits the description of the thief. After he tells you that he's a Hunter sent from the Guild to solve the crime, he asks that you go around Paysus collecting alibis from anyone who fits Sania's description. Once you have finished taking the suspects' statements, he'd like for you to return to the library and give him the results. Before leaving, ask the Hunter for his alibi when prompted, since he fits the description as well. With that out of the way, head out into the streets and buildings of Paysus to question the remaining citizens who match the composite of the thief about their whereabouts at the time of the crime. Including the Hunter upstairs in the library, there are a total of eleven people you'll need to ask for an alibi so you can complete your current task. They can be found at the following locations:

5 DESCRIPTION:

A local client wishes to confess his love for a girl, but is too shy. He requests a Hunter to send a message for him, and is waiting at the Inn in Paysus.

This job becomes available at the Paysus Guild as soon as you've won the Amaidar holy scripture back from General Yagun's monsters. Start it by speaking with the elaborately dressed man from Balbalard in the northeast room of the Paysus Inn. Apparently he's got an infatuation with the girl working at the counter of the restaurant downstairs, but is too shy to tell her himself. Answer Yes when he asks you to help him, then head to the restaurant and tell the object of his affection of his feelings. Unfortunately you must bring him back bad news. The girl's parents think that she is too young to marry, but they may reconsider if any would-be gentlemen callers were to offer the jewels from the monsters at Anan Flats as a gift. When the client asks you the inevitable—will you get the jewels for him, answer, Sure. Why not? You ARE a Hunter. So it's off you go to Anan Flats, located in central Greyshinne, to do his dirty work. As soon as you enter the Flats, you'll see that the keeper of the treasure you seek is none other than Hell Spawn, the Death Druid wanted by the Paysus Guild. With his defeat not only do you fulfill the necessary requirements for collecting his bounty, but you also receive the jewelry you came here for in the first place.

Back in Paysus, give the jewelry to the man in the northeast room of the Inn so that he can win over his love. Next stop—the Paysus Guild to collect quite a handsome reward.

As Iga places the scriptures on the altar, the Earth Guardian appears and tells him that no one suitable to receive its power has been found in Amaidar. With all that Iga has achieved so far, what further requirement could possibly be needed for him to attain the power of the scriptures? The answer? A simple question...Since the power is so great that it brings with it the ability to destroy the world, as well as the risk of instant death, should it prove too much for the chosen one to absorb, the Earth Guardian must ask if this is truly what Iga wishes to bear before bestowing on him the "Amaidar Fist"—the power of the Amaidar holy scriptures themselves. Without hesitation, nor a second thought, Iga tells the Guardian that protecting his people must come before his personal safety, and as such he must take this risk. With this, the Earth Guardian chants the words that could be the difference between life and death for the strongest of the Amaidar Monks...success! As a result of this merging between man and divine power, Iga is now forever bound to be the protector of the Amaidar lands—a role he accepts wholeheartedly, with both pride and honor.

Once you've returned to the World Map, make your way to the southern border of Greyshinne (this area is entered via the "To Border" selection just south of the Greyshinne Skyport).

With the camp now destroyed by Yagun's own madness, Arc and the others can't believe that someone would sacrifice his own men willingly to carry out a personal vendetta. Hearing that, Sania lets it slip that she knows more of General Yagun than she had previously let on. Being originally from Millmana, she describes to her new friends a time before the evil General came to her land...a time when her country was as peaceful as the neighboring Greyshinne. But that time is no longer; that happy time ended with the slaughter of more innocent people than she cares to remember—her parents included! It was only because of their intuition, which led to Sania being hidden away, that the young fortune-teller is still alive today. Though the names and circumstances are different for each of them, Arc and the others all have a similar story driving them towards their common goal. With this, Sania is welcomed into the fold.

EXCITEMENT CITY

The King is not a happy camper. He's actually not a happy hiker or spelunker, either. Royal guards hate doing anything outdoorsy with him, as a matter of fact.

At this time, over in the Paysus library, the others are gathered around a table, watching as Sania uses her talents to determine the source of the power for the Martyr Plan. The medium senses that both Brakia and Forles are countries from which the main source of power is being derived. Now that you've been given this information, no matter how vague it is, you'll at least have a starting point from which to begin your searches. Iga then arrives and fills you in on his discussion with the King, and of his hopes that the people of Greyshinne can be rallied together against the Millmana Forces, giving you more time to proceed with your quest to stop the three remaining Generals. To try to throw a monkey wrench into their Martyr Plan, your first stop should be Lieza's homeland of Forles, followed by the country of Brakia.

At this point the Greyshinne Skyport will reopen, allowing you access to the Silver Noah. Before you leave Greyshinne, however, there are a few things you may want to take advantage of prior to boarding the airship.

ODDS AND ENDS BEFORE DEPARTING

Before you leave Greyshinne, this would be a good time to familiarize yourself with the Proving Grounds at Amaidar Temple as well as the Sealed Ruins. The Proving Grounds provide survival mode and time attack tests of your party's strength, and the Sealed Ruins offer more fine dungeon crawling.

Even if you don't need to gain levels, it's recommended that you at least blast through the Sealed Ruins, because there is another of Dick's power units hidden within.

With Yagun's forces decimated by his own Graunoln Cannon at the front, Iga returns to Amaidar Temple.

The King enters the Archmonk's Chamber, outraged that the Master Monk has stood up to Millmana. Though Yagun's propaganda has worked on the King, as he feels that taking this path can only lead to the destruction of Greyshinne, Iga feels confident that the opposite is true—and that their deeds may inspire other countries to do the same. One country may not be able to prevail against Millmana and General Yagun, but if several come together, then even the impossible becomes possible.

This probably means the Silver Noah is ready to take off.

YAGOS ISLE

Stopping here may be beneficial, as you'll be able to distribute the experience Dickbeck had collected during the sections where he was a party member via Doctor Vilmer's EXP apparatus. Along with that, you can also trek back into the Sealed Ruins here to get those chests in the hidden rooms on floors three and eight by way of Gogen's level three Teleport spell. As if that isn't enough, don't forget that there's also a Combine Shop on the Isle.

EAST ALDIA

If you return to Shu's home country you'll find there are several jobs waiting for you at both the Prodias and Indigos Guilds. If you hate spending all that extra time raising the levels of your weapons, armors and items, keep in mind that the Prodias Smith can do this for you—at a price.

SEIRYA

Though you must land at Touvil Quarry, it's only a brief stroll to the Sabatigo Shrine where Kukuru will teleport you to Palencia whenever you'd like. She'll even give you a Leaf's Bead each time so that you may return to her when you're through. The Palencia Guild has a decent flow of work, including bounty jobs, so stopping here won't be something you'll regret. Plus it's always nice to drop in on Kukuru...she must get lonely being there all by herself. Each visit she's a little less hot...poor thing.

GREYSHINNE

Remember that you can always return here to train at the Amaidar Temple. The Proving Grounds, which provide survival mode and time attack battles, is a great place to test your party's strength.

ALATOS

The main draw in Alatos is Chongara's Shop. While technically not a shop (you don't actually buy anything there), you can get a lot of very useful items there. Other attractions include the town of Gazalla and a battle area where you can find another of Chongara's Guardian Forces. Did we also mention that Alatos is home to one of the famous Sealed Ruins—fully stocked with monsters and treasures to help keep you occupied while you visit? And last but not least, who could forget the ever-popular fifty-floor-deep Forbidden Ruins? Most world travelers already know what you'll discover: time spent in Alatos is well spent, indeed.

CLENIA ISLE

The small island where you met Gruga boasts bounty work, the Clenia Arena, and the Time Forest, which gives you the opportunity of gaining another supremely awesome secret party member.

NIEDEL

Niedel Arena, home to the once-famous Wind Orb Tournament, is now open to lesser competitions in which you can earn valuable Seum Medals. Along with the arena, the accompanying village of Misro has a small Hunters' Guild where you can find some extra work should you need it.

ZARIBAN

A stop to visit your old pal the Water Guardian can net you yet another Guardian Force, and the Guild in the sandy town of Elzark has a job for the taking.

1 LOCATION: Prodias—Yagos Isle 2 WEALTH: 3000 G 3 MERITS: 8

4 TIME FRAME: Prodias Guild—After getting use of the Silver Noah.

5 DESCRIPTION:

We received a cryptic message from a long-time client. They asked that a Hunter slay a monster, but said that full details would be supplied in Apartment 2.

Like "Exterminate Weapons Thief", this job is also waiting for you at the Prodias Guild once you can use the Silver Noah to roam the World Map. From the Guild, make your way to Elc's Apartment Building and when prompted, choose Go to Apt 2 to enter the apartment next door to Elc's. Inside, Hope, the woman who usually seems depressed, asks you to kill her. Just when you think things couldn't get anymore confusing, her "guard", Alven, makes an appearance. Amidst questions from him, Hope asks you to return this evening, when there'll be a full moon. (Oooh kids...spooky!) When you return later that night, you'd swear you were at a screening of the new horror flick "An Aldian Chimera in Prodias". A creepy monster appears over Hope's head that Elc immediately recognizes as a Chimera. Big problem! If you kill the Chimera, Hope may die as well. Is there no hope for Hope?! As the monster taunts Elc, Hope struggles with all the mental ability she has left to draw the evil being back inside her—for now!

After she is put to bed to rest, and Alven leaves the room, Hope confides in you. Since you have the White House in common, perhaps you could help her. The only thing that can stop the monster at this point is Doctor Vilmer, who she had heard escaped the lab shortly before her. Luckily, you know just where to find him. So, after telling Alven of your intent, and grabbing a quick nap, leave Aldia via the Silver Noah and get your butt over to Yagos Isle to see Doctor Vilmer.

As soon as you arrive at Vilmer's Research Laboratory, the Doctor listens to what you have to say, and lets you know that the second stage of her transformation has begun. He goes on to say that there may be a way to save Hope. North of Yudo Village is the Jinbara Tube. If you can bring back the juice of the Jinbara, he may be able to mix up a potion that will stop her from becoming a C-class monster.

Out on the Isle World Map, make your way around the bluffs to the northeast, where you will find the Jinbara Tube Vilmer spoke of. Inside is the plant whose juice may restore Hope. Though it has the Hit Points of a boss, this specimen of Yagos Isle flora doesn't pack that much of a punch. With its defeat, you receive the Juice of Jinbara. Return this to Vilmer and within moments he'll turn it into the cure for Hope. Leave Yagos Isle once you have the potion and bring it to Apartment 2 in Prodias. Though you're in time to save Hope from harm, sadly the same can't be said for Alven. After a night's rest for everyone involved in this unfortunate incident, head over to the Guild to collect your reward.

6 AREA MAP:

Elc needs to do this job in record time, or things are gonna get uglier... fast.

Under the influence of the Chimera, Hope mistakes her loved ones for Amway salesmen.

5 DESCRIPTION:	This job is the third and final job awaiting you at the Prodias Guild once you have the ability to return to it via the Silver Noah. Upon taking this assignment, leave Prodias and travel southwest to Aldia Bridge. Enter this area to meet the client, Lunacius, who's afraid of being rolled by Ax Master Marg and the rest of the Dark Crown bandits as he crosses the bridge. According to Shu, the Dark Crown bandits have no control of the land to the south of Aldia Bridge, as that's the turf of the Dark Serpent bandits. Midway across the bridge, the Dark Crown bandits make an appearance. Oh well! So it won't be as uneventful as you'd hoped. It's not like you're afraid to get your hands dirty. Just before you dig in, Lunacius tells you that if you take out Marg, the rest of his gang will scatter. 5 DESCRIPTION:	If you completed the job "Indigos Jewelry Robber" (page 177) back towards the game's start, head to the Indigos Guild once you have free access to the Silver Noah to find this job waiting for you. After accepting it, enter the Indigos Jewelry Shop and speak to the woman at the counter. Answer Okay! when she asks if you're ready to begin your shift as night watchman. The object of this job is to defeat the monsters before they escape through the hole they blew in the rear wall with any stolen jewels. The difference between this and "Indigos Jewelry Robber" is that there are more thieves to stop this time around. There are many foes, so select only your best characters (though you won't have a choice about Elc and Shu, as they are mandatory members of this battle). Otherwise, you run the risk of a lower reward, should any get away...or worse, a failure. In order to complete this job, you must defeat the Golem Master and the last three Iron Golems that he sent to block you rather than steal jewelry. Blocking the hole in the rear of the store with your strongest character is a good way to contain the mayhem. Catch the Slasher

1 LOCATION: Prodias Guild—Aldia Bridge	2 WEALTH: 4000 G	3 MERITS: 8
4 TIME FRAME: Prodias Guild—After the “Indigos Escort” job has been successfully completed.
5 DESCRIPTION: A slasher has attacked numerous people on Aldia Bridge recently. Our client has requested a Hunter to stop him. As with “Mysterious Job Interview” (page 453), this assignment becomes available at the Prodias Guild as soon as the “Indigos Escort” job has been successfully completed. At first this one seems pretty straightforward. Head out of Prodias to the Aldia Bridge, and once there, choose a lone character to act as a decoy so you can lure the slasher out. Then when he shows himself, catch the thug with your battle party. The problems start when the slasher, a Soul Knight, casts a silence field around your decoy so that no one will hear any calls for help—including the rest of your party, who are hiding out of sight in the darkness further back on the bridge. Due to this, your decoy is on their own! Hope you picked a good one! Another rather unpleasant side effect of the field that you may notice, is that you will not be able to cast any magic. So if you need to heal, you’ll have to rely on your items. This job is completed to the satisfaction of the Guild when your decoy character has seriously wounded the slasher, causing him to break the field so you can get him help. At this point the slasher gives you a sob story about a sick daughter, and how he was killing to get blood for a potion to heal her. You’re now faced with a tough decision... Do you Take him in to the Aldia Police, or Let him go ? Know that your reward from the Guild, including Merit Stars, will be cut in half if you choose the wrong answer. If you decide to Let him go , you realize you made the wrong choice when you hear him yell “Suckers!” as he runs away.		6 AREA MAP:

5 DESCRIPTION: Upon completing the “Find Ancient Treasure!” job, the Palencia Guild is again contracted by the elderly gentleman. Deja vu may set in once you accept this job, as it’s very similar to its obligatory predecessor. Begin by talking to the old man in the Palencia Bar, then head out of town to look for the treasure once you’ve gotten the new details on what he’s looking for. From the letter, you get a riddle that when solved will provide you with the location of the treasure. That riddle goes as follows... “Quina Hill, from the skull under the tree... Castle 4 Out 2 Sand 1 Ghost 7 Out 5 Sand 2 Ghost 4. Under the corpse of the crow.” Hmmm... What could all that mean? Taking it one step at a time, start your search at Quina Hill to see if anything there fits the second part of the description. As soon as you step one foot inside Quina Hill you’re attacked by the local wildlife. After thinning the herd, skip right to the final part of the riddle and inspect the fossil of the crow at the lower right corner of the battlefield. Voila! You found what the old man wants! It’s his “Ancestor’s Treasure”. Bringing the heirloom back to him at the Palencia Bar wraps up another job with honors. If you speak to the old man again afterwards, for 1000 G, he’ll offer you part of the treasure that he doesn’t have any use for, an Illusion Robe +0.

The client, a young boy, can be found in the central room at the Palencia Inn. Talking to him reveals that the man he wishes to kill always travels with an entourage of armed soldiers. This makes taking a shot at the desired target difficult, as he may hit one of the soldiers instead. This is where you come in...if you were to distract the soldiers so that they left the target for even a short time, the boy could get a clean shot at revenge. When the scene shifts to the Palencia Castle Ruins, the boy approaches his mark, informing him of his intent. This is your cue to make a move. The mere sight of your party scares not only the guards off, but the prey as well. Luckily for you, they run in different directions, with the boy's target heading into the Basement Warehouse, where he transforms into a Blue Phantom and summons several Will 'o Wisps to his side. Since this is no longer the one-on-one battle the boy wished it to be, it's up to you to even up the odds. The encounter ends after you seriously injure the Blue Phantom. Now that it's more of an even match-up, thanks to your help, the boy can finish what he's waited for so long to do. MORE TREASURE THAN YOU CAN SHAKE A STICK AT Chongara doesn't seem to get tired hearing HIMSELF talk, though. Hmmm...

While not a required stop just yet, there are several good reasons to land the Silver Noah in Chongara's homeland of Alatos before you continue on to Forles or Brakia. These include: Gazalla, Chongara's Shop, Azenda Highlands and the Sealed Ruins.

Though Gazalla isn't exactly brimming with activity—yet—this town does have a shop should you need to restock before trying your hand at either of Alatos' ruins.

AZENDA HIGHLANDS

Any desire to leave this battlefield prematurely can be done by ending a character's turn on the sunlit rope found at the south central point on the map.

After concluding the battle, rather than returning up your rope to ground level, make your way across the wooden bridge to the north on the battlefield. There's a small cave there where the Light Guardian resides. Inside this cave, along with the Light Guardian, is Rai-jin, another of Chongara's Guardian Forces. Along with a word of caution about the fate of the world, the Guardian gives his blessing that you take Rai-jin with you for the remainder of your travels. As an added note, once you get Rai-jin's counterpart, the Guardian Force Fu-jin, to join your party, the two can make use of their shared Furaiha spell. To allow this spell to be cast, bring both Guardian Forces into battle with you, and place one on each side of a single enemy. The resulting spell causes them to combine their elemental powers in the form of a foe-crushing wind attack.

THE FORBIDDEN RUINS

Those of you who played Arc the Lad inside and out will remember these ruins well. Fifty floors deep (that you know of), working as one continuous battle, it's enough to cause even the mighty to fall. If you think you're up to the challenge, head to the dark depths of this monstrous dungeon—the experience, treasure and bragging rights will be well worth it.

Some sage advice...before entering the Forbidden Ruins, gather the Romancing Stones One through Four from Chongara's Shop (see page 338) if you got them in Arc the Lad and converted your data. Then use the Combine Shop on Yagos Isle to create the single Romancing Stone from them. Equip this on the character you'll be bringing into the dungeon with you to act as a healer for their magic cost to be reduced to zero. Something else that makes this go-round in the Forbidden Ruins easier than when you traversed it in Arc the Lad is the inclusion of healing and exit statues. These can be found every ten levels you descend (aside from the fiftieth), and can really help out in a pinch. The healing statue is of a winged goddess, while the exit statue is in the form of a cherub. As if that weren't enough, if you reach Basement Level Thirty or Fifty (Forty-Nine on the way back up) you will be able to change your battle party if you so desire.

Due to the fact that Choko is familiar with the Forbidden Ruins, what with her having stayed there for so long (as read about in author H. Lucy's archives stored at the Greyshinne Library, and witnessed first-hand in Arc the Lad), if you bring her here once you have her in your party, she will show you a shortcut which leads to the fiftieth basement floor at the bottom of the ruins. She'll only show you the first time she returns here, so pay attention to where she says it is (in the rock wall at the lower right). If you enter the fiftieth floor of the ruins after Choko has reached level sixty-five and has returned to Tokoko Village to "grow up" after level fifty-five (see Page 515), and obtained Choko in Arc the Lad and converted your save, a whole new section of the Ruins will open for your exploration (see Page 517). Got that? Good!

THE SEALED RUINS

Located to the southeast of Gazalla, the Sealed Ruins are wide open for any adventurers who should happen to wander by. While similar to the other Sealed Ruins in some ways, this dungeon is unique in that it has multiple areas on several of its floors. A Guardian's Force Fountain appears on the eastern section of Ruins B2 after you've disposed of the creatures that dwell there. Though it is rather early in terms of placement, keep in mind that you can return to it whenever you need to without hassle, as once you clear a floor it will remain that way for the duration of your stay. Be aware that these ruins can be especially tricky due to the Paralyze Breath cast by the more-than-abundant Killer Wolves.

CHOKO LIKE TO PLAY IN LEAVES

Even the CATS on Clenia Isle are combative!

Whether it's level-raising, earning Seum Medals to trade for items, or the need for another party member, Clenia Isle is the place to go. Below you'll find all the juicy details on where to go, what to do and who to see when you vacation on Clenia Isle. Just keep Tosh out of the sun, he's a redhead and you know how they burn.

Be SURE to take care of the Time Forest and get Choko. She is one of the best hidden characters EVER, and you have to do this to get her story to unfold.

TIME FOREST

To find Tokoko Village, home of the legendary Guardian Force Choko, and written of in H. Lucy's Archives at the Greyshinne Library, begin your search in the Time Forest on Clenia Isle.

From the opening of the forest, you'll need to travel very specific routes if you ever hope to reach Tokoko Village. It wouldn't have remained hidden for over six hundred years if it weren't off the beaten path, now would it? Fortunately, there's an easy way to get there and a hard way.

First, the hard way. Once you enter the forest, walk up one screen, then back down one, next go two screens to the right, then back to the left two screens, until finally you go up two screens to find Tokoko Village. Another route you can take is to alternate heading left then right three times each, then down one screen followed by up one screen to the village. Got that? You can go either, Up, Down, Right, Right, Left, Left, Up and Up—or Left, Right, Left, Right, Left, Right, Down and Up. A clue that tells you you're walking in the correct direction is that the sky gets darker the closer you get to Tokoko Village. Choose to travel in almost any other direction than those mentioned here and you'll get hopelessly lost. If you happen to get lost anywhere but towards the very end of your trip, merely walk a screen or two to the south to return to the Clenia Isle World Map. If you get lost at the end of your expedition, where the sky is dark blue, you'll be forced to find the village instead. Do this by traveling up.

This isn't the first time someone exploring the Time Forest has uttered these words...

"Uh, if I say no, what happens?"

Now, for the easy way. Enter and exit the forest to and from the Clenia Isle map ten times. Choko will appear when you enter the next time and take you captive in some kind of silly game she plays. The dialogue here is specific to each character in the party, so it may be more or less humorous, depending on who's the on-screen leader of your party when you're taken captive. If you're so inclined, you can save before this, change characters and repeat to see all the dialogue.

TOKOKO VILLAGE

Once you arrive in Tokoko Village for the first time, Choko greets you at the edge of town.

She's overjoyed that you found your way through the Time Forest to see her and praises your navigational skills. She then runs off to wait for you at her house.

Head to Choko's house at the northwest corner of the village so you can talk some more to the Guardian Force who takes the form of a little girl.

After a tale seemingly riddled with gibberish, Choko's father, Ralgo, introduces himself and asks that you have dinner with them and stay the night. Answer Yes when prompted to make a decision and you will sit down to dinner, followed by a good night's sleep.

STORYCHECK

CHOKO'S DAY OUT

Of course, anyone with a mother knows not to take candy from a stranger, and definitely not a priest.

World Map, Choko tells you what's required of her if she wants to become an adult—a journey of adventure! She then either gives you the directions for finding her village should you ever want to come back and visit her, or, if you made sure to speak with her while walking along the paths through the Time Forest, Choko will decide that the “journey” she needs to take to become an adult involves going with you! If you get the latter, she joins your party.

If you weren't able to get Choko on your first try, head back inside the Time Forest and return to Tokoko Village. After spending another night at Choko's, and retaking her tour of Tokoko, you'll have the opportunity to try again. Once you've got her in your party, if you try to reenter the Time Forest before Choko reaches level fifty-five, she will tell you that she's not a grown up yet and then shoves you back out to the World Map.

When you have raised Choko's level to fifty-five, return with her to the Time Forest and make your way through it to the Graveyard. Once there, inspect the back of her mother's tombstone to find a hidden inscription that only Choko can read (this dialogue is different, depending on who reads it). After reading what you can, head over to Tokoko Village (leave the forest then re-enter to be taken to the village automatically) to see Choko's dad Ralgo. Upon talking to him, Choko mentions that she can't find her loyal pet Silva. At this point, you're sent out of the house to search for the lost pet. Do NOT leave the village until this task is accomplished, or you will not be able to see all of Choko's back story!

Once you've exhausted all the options for doggie hideouts and have asked everyone in the village if they've seen him (you need only to have left the house and re-entered), go back to Choko's House where the little girl will remember that she hasn't yet checked the backyard. Simple huh? The problem now is that the back door is locked, which you discover upon trying it. Hmmm, you need to find the key so you can find the dog. Fortunately, the key isn't as well hidden as Silva may be. Merely check the pile of Choko's stuff at the lower left corner of the house to uncover what you need. Now that you have the key, use it to open the back door and head outside to the backyard. Around the corner to the right Choko makes a very sad discovery—Silva's grave—the poor mutt is no longer. What's odd is that Choko doesn't remember this happening, even though the marker was obviously made by her. Did she block the memory because it was too painful for her—or is there some other reason for her lapse? Back in the house, Ralgo tells you the answer to this question. In an attempt to erase the memories of what has hurt the young Guardian Force, Choko lives with her emotions and memories sealed. Sorrow and hatred are now a thing of the past for her. As you leave Choko's house and catch up with her at the village gates, she utters the words “Silva has been killed” then falls unconscious to the ground. Moments later a large group of slimes appear. As soon as Ralgo picks up his only daughter and rushes her away to safety, a battle begins.

PLAY TIP

Separate your party into two "teams". This will allow you to quickly reach the treasure chest to the northeast and still exit the area quickly. Using Eic's Expand Range spell at the start of this segment is also very helpful.

Once you mortally wound any of the Slimes, it will cry for help. This alerts you to the fact that what you're fighting could be an illusion, and that you may actually be hurting the people of Tokoko Village. Since Lieza says not to attack them, your best bet is to try to put some distance between you and the Slimes, else even your counter-attacks may kill them. Killing them all is a bad idea. You'll cut yourself off forever from continuing this cool side story.

At this point you may want to equip your worst weapons on your current battle party so they do as little damage as possible if one of the Slimes does happen to get too close. Another possibility is to paralyze the slimes so they can't force you to accidentally counterattack. At this point, you should break your party into two "teams".

Send Team 1 to the northeast, on a quest to open the chest with the red shoes.

Team 2 should make its way to the southwestern corner of the battlefield by hopping over one of the bushes to the left of the normal path into/out of town, then work its way west through the trees. There you will find the only unobstructed path leading out of town. DO NOT exit to the graveyard until Team 1 has opened the chest with the Red Shoes!

Once the shoes are yours, have Team 2 exit to the Graveyard. Be ready to fight your way past the Zombies that rise from their dirt naps toward the Dark Pillar, and destroy the creepy energy field that now surrounds it.

LOCO CHOKO

One of the few sorta-normal sentences that come from Choko in the game.

There's a new ho in town, and this one likes to get freaky in the graveyard, yeah.

With the encounters behind you, your concern for Choko drives you to return to Choko's House to see how she's doing. Once there, you see that the Slimes are gone. Everyone agrees that the tombstone must have been the device responsible for the illusions. Now that the mystery is solved, enter Choko's room to check on your little redheaded friend, and to try and get some better answers from Ralgo on what's going on (a save journal can be found on the table next to the fireplace in Choko's House if you feel the need to save your game at this point). Inside you hear from Ralgo that Choko is actually the child of a Beast Lord, and that he raised her in place of the wife and child he lost a long time ago to a monster attack on Tokoko Village. He also spills the major nugget that in order for Choko to quell the evil urges inherent to her race, her Dark Power was sealed in the large tombstone in the Graveyard. Finally, he asks that Choko be allowed to continue traveling with you, as the life experiences may help keep her powers in check. While Ralgo speaks with you in the main room of the house, Choko, lying unconscious in the bedroom nearby, meets the Dark Forces sealed within the stone as it invades her subconscious. An innocent gesture by a little girl then leads to the releasing of untold evil.

Now that Choko is a permanent member of your party, it's best that you leave Tokoko Village and continue on your journey to save the world—at least for now—you can't get back in until Choko's at least level 65. However, if you really MUST see how the rest of Choko's storyline plays out, peek at page 515.

CLENIA ARENA

Right about now, you can check out three games that combine chance and fighting prowess in the Clenia Arena. Winning any of these games rewards you with medallions called Seum. These Seum can, in turn, be traded for equipment or items—if you know the right people. The initial games are Genma-jin, Renma-jin and Dauma-jin... all of which will allow for only one battle party member to compete at a time. The rules of each are as follows:

GENMA-JIN

No, not the panda-bear-shifting father from the Takahashi Rumiko manga, but rather a game of speed and strategy whereby various images of monsters are summoned from within large magic squares. The object is to destroy the phantom images as quickly as possible, for they can disappear as fast as they appear. You may know this game by another name—oh, say, Whack A Mole. Your best characters for this game would be those with either long-range weapons, like Shu and his Sub Machine Gun, high rates of movement, like Gruga, or ones with powerful magic, such as Gogen with his level three attack spells. For every image you strike down you'll earn ten Seum, with a bonus of thirty extra Seum if you hit all twelve.

RENMA-JIN

Sealed within the magic tiles that comprise the floor of this section of the Arena are phantom images such as you saw in Genma-jin. Like the last, these phantoms will only remain for brief periods of time, so get to them as fast as you can. In case you're feeling a little swollen in the head from only battling foes who don't fight back, actual monsters will appear at random to keep you on your toes—and yes, they can do damage to your character. Now that you know what you're up against, let's get to the point of the game, shall we?

Your objective here is to destroy as many phantoms as you can before missing one or dying—at which point the game will end. Prize Seum is distributed for the total number of foes defeated, at a rate of five per phantom and twenty per real monster. Your best character choices are those with a high rate of movement as well as decent weapon and magic range. Should you need an extra nudge in the movement department, remember that both the Whirlwind Edge and Bravery Wings will raise that statistic by one point each. If you need to heal, or cast any other helpful magic on yourself, try to do so just after defeating a real opponent while you have a free turn so that you don't waste one while fighting. Real foes can be identified by the lack of an energy field glimmering around them. If an image seems too far away to hit, check your higher level magic since they have greater range. Even if the spell isn't that powerful, all it takes is one hit to destroy a phantom and keep you in the game.

DAIMA-JIN

For this final game, a large group of monsters has been placed within a caged-off section of the arena. Your job, as contestant, is to run around the outside of the cage and destroy the creatures inside using your weapons, items or magic. Any attempt to get into the cage with your opponents will result in your immediate disqualification. As with Boma-jin in the Nidel Arena, for every enemy defeated, you regain eight Magic Points. Prize Seum is determined by the time it takes you to defeat all the monsters. At the start of the match, the total Seum stands at two hundred, and decreases by ten with each turn you take until all foes have been vanquished or the reward has been entirely used up. If you wish to end the game prematurely, just ask good ol' Catch. Like Genma-jin and Renma-jin before it, this game allows for only one battle party contestant. Magic casting range and power are key here, so choose a character who meets these criteria.

NOW YOU SEUM, NOW YOU DON'T

Standing in the upper right corner of the Clenia Isle Arena Courtyard are two men (one of which is hidden behind the statue). These men run the black market that will offer you items in trade for your Seum medals. To get them to provide you with this service, first talk to the man to the right several times. Eventually he will give you the passcode "Blessing goods for a brighter tomorrow", which you'll need to say to the other man in order to open him up to the idea of trading with you. If you come across another Seum Medal Black Market in your travels, know that if you've already gained the trust of one, you will have the ability to use them all. The items you can exchange your Seum Medals for are:

Of course, he's just unlooped his access card at his dealer's, so who is HE to talk about legalities?

BATTLE ROYALE

Arc makes small talk with the lusty redhead in the courtyard. Yeah, he's hard up.

The lure of competition should be more than enough to warrant your characters stopping in Nidel for a little break from the stress of saving the world. The arena here, like the one on Clenia Isle, rewards you with Seum, which you can exchange for equipment, weapons or items. Along with the Arena, the town of Misro has two jobs awaiting you at its Hunters' Guild, with another to follow when you successfully complete them. Oh... it also has a shop. The specifics of each of these are further explained below.

HUNTERS' GUILD

Along with the jobs you can attain by talking to the dispatcher at the counter, the following wanted posters adorn its wall:

NIDEL ARENA

Upon entering the Nidel Arena Courtyard, speak to the Official standing beside the statue of a blue horse. The Official will then offer you your choice of three different combat-based games in which you can participate. Once you've made your selection you will be brought into the arena to compete. The choices given by the Official are described on the following pages.

MATEN TOWER

At the northern end of the arena stands a large slot machine-type device with four spinning wheels. After it has been activated, pressing the  button once per wheel determines your opponents for the coming battle from within six types of Ninja, the difficulty of which is noted by their color—white, red, blue, brown, green or purple. These Ninjas will be fought four at a time, and with their defeat you'll receive medals called "Seum". The amount of Seum you earn is based on the color of the Ninjas, as each is worth a set amount of Seum (for example, killing one Red Ninja is worth 15 Seum). Special bonus Seum is awarded when you stop the wheels on four like-colored Ninjas... for example, if you stop the wheel on four Red Ninjas you will receive 30 extra bonus Seum before the round begins. Since you fight only four opponents, you will only be allowed to bring a like number of party members into the contest with you—that means four.

ENEMIES:

BOMA-JIN

The object of this game is to stop the twelve Skeletons in the center of the arena from escaping through any of the eight exits. Unlike the other two games available at the Niedel Arena, you can select a full regiment of five for your battle party while you play Boma-jin. While that in itself may be a help, unfortunately your Magic Points are set to zero at the start of the match. Damn! You are awarded eight Magic Points for every enemy you destroy, which you may give to the character of your choosing. The prize Seum begins at 120, but is halved with each Skeleton you allow to escape. If a total of four are allowed to exit the arena, no reward will be given—so fight fast! Due to the nature of this event, characters who can target more than one opponent with their weapons may fare better than those who do not.

ENEMIES:

BLACK SKELETON x6	RED SKELETON x6

TOPPA-JIN

For this game, you begin at the bottom of the arena and attempt to defeat any and all opponents on your way to the exit at the top. Though you can have a battle party of up to four players, only one needs to make it out alive for you to be considered a winner. Surviving Toppa-jin earns you 100 Seum. A good character to bring with you into this contest is Gogen, as his level three Teleport spell will go a long way towards getting him, and those around him, to the exit fast. An extra 100 Seum will be awarded as a bonus if you defeat all the enemies who stand between you and the exit.

THE NIEDEL ARENA COURTYARD BLACK MARKET

After having your fill of the three Niedel Arena games, talk to the man in the black jacket at the far right inside the Arena Courtyard several times. He will eventually refer you to the man next to him in the green shirt who runs the "Seum" Black Market. Along with the referral, he gives you the password "Venuncio", which when spoken to the man in the green shirt will let him know that you want to begin "dealings" with him. Of course, longtime Working Designs fans also know that Venuncio is the name of one of the enemies in Popful Mail. This is just a little inside nod.

Once the man in the green shirt trusts you, he'll show you a list of items several pages long that you can blow your Seum on. Wait, that sounded wrong. Anyway...you can trade medals for some nice stuff here. Look...

Maybe a fragment of sense would be more useful in this circumstance.

5 DESCRIPTION:

After accepting this job, head over to the small house at the upper right corner of Misro, where the little boy they call a bully lives. With the description you get of the old man you should have no problem picking him out in a crowd... carries an umbrella, wears a ribbon on his head... it's no wonder their kid acts up. That family ain't right!

Once you know what you're looking for, enter the house to the left of the Misro Inn and tell the only umbrella-carrying, ribbon-wearing old man you see that they're looking for him at home. Next, return to the house at the upper right and talk the bully's father again to discover that the old man never went home like he was supposed to. Hmmm... Back you go to the house to the left of the Inn. Yup, just as you suspected, he's still there. Upon trying to speak to him this time, he leads you over to a corner where he can tell you something in private. It turns out that the old man is acting this way to try and cheer up the woman who lives here. After hearing him out, go back and tell the man in the upper right house that his father is fine and that he's just taking advantage of older women who have been "unfulfilled". 4 TIME FRAME: Misro Guild—During your first trip to Niedel.
5 DESCRIPTION: Misro Arena is overrun with monsters, and villagers are afraid to go there, now. Exterminate the monsters and secure the Arena. This one needs a little more of an explanation than you'd first assume. After you take the job, enter the Niedel Arena Courtyard and talk to the Official next to the horse statue. Tell him Let's Go! to be admitted into the Boma-jin area of the arena, where you'll fight the creatures who have taken it over. Here's where the job gets a little tougher than what the Guild originally implied. It seems that the wanted monster Negdus is the one leading the beasts in the arena, and to try to escape capture he's made all his cronies disguise themselves as him. To add to the confusion, with each enemy you kill that isn't Negdus, another enters the arena. This job is completed to the satisfaction of the Misro Guild when Negdus has been taken out.

YEAH, BUT IT'S A DRY HEAT

No more strange than a Guardian sucking on a water pipe under the desert.

The final country with any substantial reason to visit before proceeding toward your ultimate goal of saving the world is Zariban. Here, in this barren wasteland that was once lush, green, and fertile, you'll be able to explore the town of Elzark, which holds the solution to a job you may have taken long ago. Visit with the Water Guardian who reacquaints you with a familiar face, and gain experience fighting on its numerous battlefields. While there is also another of the fabled Sealed Ruins here, your entrance to them is blocked by a mysterious force until you've first traveled to the ruins in Balbalard.

HUNTERS' GUILD

Aside from the job "Stop the Desert Thieves", which you can get from talking to the dispatcher, on the wall of the small room to the left in the Elzark Hunters' Guild hang wanted posters of these seedy-looking individuals:

SALYAN DESERT

This desert is the battlefield where, aside from normal enemy encounters, you'll be able to track down one of Elzark's most wanted.

Upon entering the Water Shrine, home to the Guardian of Water, you're shocked to find that the unthinkable has happened—it's now overrun with monsters! One positive thing that will come from this discovery is that it won't stay that way for long.

After ridding the area of pests, head inside the Water Guardian's chamber via the hole in the rocks to the north. He was there for you when you needed him in the past, and this time is no different. Moments after he appears, and without your even having to ask, the Water Guardian calls forth Fu-jin, the final Guardian Force, to travel with you should his strength be required. One thing to be aware of with this new addition to your roster is that you'll now have the ability to cast Furaiha—if you have Rai-jin in your party as well, that is. To cast this devastating wind attack, bring both Rai-jin and Fu-jin into battle together and have them position themselves on either side of an enemy. The spell will then become active for either Guardian Force.

We have an elderly client looking for a new house. Meet the client in the Paysus Restaurant.

While this job will appear in the Paysus Guild once you have Sania as a selectable party member, you need to have passed the point where you can freely explore the entire World Map via the Silver Noah in order to be able to complete it. To start, after accepting it, you'll need to head to the restaurant on the first floor of the Paysus Inn and speak to the white-haired elderly gentleman standing next to the counter. Tell him Yes when he asks that you return to him after you've found a nice house in a warm place, then head out of Paysus to begin your search. The house that fits his description is located far to the west, in the desert country of Zariban. After arriving in Zariban by way of the Silver Noah, enter the town of Elzark and seek out the veiled woman in the house behind the Elzark Guild. Talking to her reveals that she wishes to move, but can't find anyone to buy her current home. What luck! You just happen to know a certain someone who's in the market for exactly what she has to offer. All that's left now is for you to return to the Paysus restaurant and tell the elderly gentleman that his search is over.

VOICES VIII

OSAMU YAMAZAKI—SCENARIO WRITER, ARC COLLECTION

Can you describe how the gameplay mechanics changed for each of the games?

Arc I advances with the main story alone, and it is not a very long game. From Arc II, the style changes a little bit and besides the main story, there is also a sub-story called "Guild Work". For Arc III, we put that "Guild Work", which was the sub system in Arc II, as the main story line in Arc III. By accepting the "Guild Work" it causes the main story to develop. So there are some differences in all the systems of the different sequels. As for the battle system, we changed the traditional battle system a little each time, but the changes were not that dramatic. We pretty much left the overall battle system alone because it was very well received by the players in Japan.

How do the characters evolve in the series?

As the story progresses from Arc I to Arc II, the characters gradually come together and become allies. That idea is carried into Arc III, too. For example, when Elc appeared in the beginning of Arc II, he was just a novice hunter. However, he appears in Arc III as a legendary heroic character that everybody looks up to and admires. Arc on the other hand, appears as a character that people don't even remember. Only a handful of people in the story recognize him. However, this role of Arc is very important in the 3rd series as well.

How much time and effort do you put into a character's background?

Let me see...to think about one character's background on and on, is very tedious and tiresome. I personally don't like it that much, so I don't do too much of that. When I think of a character, rather than thinking about the backgrounds too much, I usually think more about if I have character A and character B and have them fighting each other, then character A or B will respond in terms of what they would say. Or sometimes I force the two characters to strike up a friendship with one another. I like to build the character that way because to think about the background is too much work for me.

SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE

Holn is a shadow of its former self.

Once you touch down in Forles, take a short walk west to Holn. Upon entering Lieza's village, the Beasttaker gasps in horror as she sees the unimaginable...her hometown has been destroyed! How could this have happened? Better yet, where are the citizens you rescued from Gallamo's clutches?! To look for an answer to these questions, make your way to the northern edge of town and enter the wreckage that unfortunately is all that's left of Lieza's house. Shortly after entering the house, you're ambushed by a group of Death Druids. They shift blame for the evil deeds done here to the citizens of Ramul, and express a keen desire to claim your souls! Yikes! Ya know, if it's not one thing, it's another.

Ramul

After the battle in Holn, Gogen offers a few words of wisdom. First, the people of Ramul were most likely being controlled when they did this; they might not have been on the best of terms with Holn, but they were not so blind with hatred that they would wipe it out. And second, if any emotion is shown towards the loss of home, family or friends, then those responsible may know of your association with Holn and target you as well.

To try to unravel this mystery, head over to what the Death Druids claimed to be the source of the trouble—Ramul. What you see there disgusts you. Everyone has an over-the-top violent attitude towards Lieza's village. Even Leets, who you'll run into inside the Inn, claims Holn is evil! Having been helped by Leets during the raid on the Chimera Lab, you know that the words coming from the boy's mouth cannot be his own... someone, or something, is controlling him and the rest of the people of Ramul. Shortly after Arc suggests that you stay in Ramul and keep watch over the townsfolk, you are given the option to rest. Take it.

STORYCHECK

Ele wasn't told WHY they rent the rooms by the hour here. He thinks the moaning is spooks.

During your attempt at slumber, the bells at the Gia Temple begin ringing. A look out the window into the night reveals that the bells are calling people somewhere. As you leave your room to follow them, you overhear the Innkeeper and Leets mumbling something about Gia Temple and the Archmonk. The Archmonk?! Oh no!! Not another one!! As soon as the two leave, quickly head outside and follow them out of town towards Gia Temple to the east.

SUNDAY, BLOODY SUNDAY

Once past the welcoming committee, press on up the long stairs to the Gia Temple. If you're lucky, maybe you can destroy it from within. Before passing through the front gates, you're asked to choose characters for a battle party—just in case. The high doors of the temple give way to the front chamber of the Temple Cathedral. Climb this next set of stairs before you reach the Cathedral itself, then hide behind one of the pews in the back row so you can eavesdrop on this unholy congregation. Here Gogen once again reiterates his fear that the townsfolk are under some sort of hypnotic trance. Since that's the case, your next task must be to find a way of breaking it. A bit of exploration reveals a doorway at both the upper left and right corners of the Cathedral room. Perhaps the secret to stopping this madness is through one of those doors...

FOR DOOM THE BELL TOLLS

As you reach the balcony on the third floor (Map 1), you oversee one of the sisters far below informing the Archmonk of your intrusion. After getting the order to stop you, the sisters band together, and one presses a hidden switch on the altar. Moments later, the altar moves, and the Archmonk and sisters enter a secret passage behind it. Now that you've seen where the switch is, trek back downstairs and enter the passage yourself.

No sooner do you pass through the opening behind the altar, than you discover Lieza's Grandfather face down on the floor in Map 16! Luckily he's still alive. Happy to see him, but worried about the Archmonk, you help Grandpa back to his feet and continue on toward the top of the temple.

Up the stairs beyond where Lieza's Grandfather was found you go, racing towards the upper floors of the temple. Halfway up, one of the sisters stops you and lets you know that magic is not permitted in this area...well, wasn't that nice of her? As she leaves, a gang of ghastly creatures fill the void left by the sister's abrupt departure. They must have had a sale on Demi-Zombies and Skeleton Lords at Monsters 'R' Us because those are all the Gia Temple seems to be stocked with so far. From this encounter until the final confrontation with the Archmonk, your magic abilities are silenced. D'oh!

Look, Arc had a good reason for leaving that in the corner. He REALLY had to go.

Unfortunately, it was the WRONG hidden switch, and the temple is flooded with bad polka muzak.

STONE ALONE

If anyone has been injured during this last skirmish, you'll be happy to find a Guardian's Force Fountain through the door at the top of the stairs. Once you've replenished your Hit Points, head up the stairs to the left (between the statues) and enter the door at the top of them. In this next room, push the stone block onto the beam of light coming from the floor at the upper left corner. Blocking this light triggers the door in the room to the right to open, so once you've accomplished this, leave the room you're in and head to that one via the stairs next to the fountain. Pass through the door you opened, then follow the corridor it leads to as far as you can, pushing more stone blocks as you go in order to progress.

Nothing funny about this. Pushing stone blocks is hard work!

Check3 ➡

TIME TO FIGURE OUT THE PUZZLES

Once across the western overpass, push the block that you brought with you north (but not all the way to the top of the room), then to the east, so that it falls off the edge of the corridor and onto another light in the floor below, thereby covering it. Next, walk back to the southwestern corner of the corridor and push the remaining two blocks (one at a time) over the same edge like you just did the last one (make sure you begin by pushing them east, then north, or you'll get them stuck on a wall at the top of the room). During this, or the previous room where you needed to push the initial stone block onto the light, if you misplace any of the blocks you can press the  button to bring up your menu, and then choose Restart to return to the point before you moved any of the stone blocks. With these three blocks in place, you can now cross the gap where the broken edge was and push the final stone block forward onto the glowing eyeball in the floor, thus opening the nearby door to Map 20.

Even Arc makes mistakes sometimes...hence, the RESTART option.

Check4 ➡

A RED GLOWING CORRIDOR... NO PROBLEM

Through this door lies yet another corridor...this one lit by an eerie red glow, which makes the walls seem almost organic. At the far west and east are more stairways leading deeper into this area, but before taking them, head to the center where you'll find a cave-like opening that brings you to a room (Map 21) with a floor covered in a repeating skull pattern. A large stone block sits in the center of this room. Upon close inspection of the floor you'll notice that two of the skulls, one towards each upper corner of the room, have a chin that is a pale white instead of the normal gray that the others are colored. Pushing the stone block onto the skull to the east opens a door further ahead, while pushing it onto the one to the west drops another batch of your favorite undead creatures into the room. Let's push it east, shall we?

Definitely push the block to the right. The left skull switch starts a party you're better off skipping.

ARE SKULLS A BAD SIGN?

If you don't have many healing items with you, or you just want to conserve them while you can, keep in mind that you can return to the Guardian's Force Fountain at any time.

Now that the far door is open, walk back around to the stairs at the west in Map 20 and proceed up them until you reach another room with a skull-patterned floor. Wind around this room and push the stone block to the east and then southward so that it comes to rest on the white-chinned skull in the lower east corner of this side of the room, opening a door not too far off to the east in the process.

Finally, make your way back to Map 20 and head up the eastern stairs. As with the others, this leads to yet another room with a skull-covered floor. The stone block here needs to be pushed quite a distance. First push it north, then west down the long hall—where unfortunately it will hit a skull, which triggers an unavoidable encounter.

It could be worse. You could be pushing TWO stone slabs...or Harry Knowles.

Check 6 ➡

THEY'RE SUPER-FREAKY, YOW

After you've knocked the "un" off the undead, continue on with the block by pushing it the rest of the way down the hall, and then downward through the door you opened beforehand. Lastly, shove it into the southwest corner of the small room it's now in, so that it ends up on the white-chinned skull and opens a door in the area to the west.

With all the locked doors now open, head back around to the west and pass through them. You will come to another Guardian's Force Fountain at the base of a large set of stairs. These stairs lead to the bell that you mean to destroy, but since both the Archmonk and sisters may have something to say about your intentions, using the fountain might be a wise decision before ascending.

When you're ready, take the stairs and do your best to rid Forles of the Gia Temple mind control device activated by its evil Archmonk. By the time you actually fight this bastard, you'll be utterly convinced that he is evil incarnate. When this lunatic tries to control Leets, the situation goes from bad to worse, not for the boy, but rather Lieza's Grandfather, who jumps willingly into harm's way to save his Granddaughter's life. As the Archmonk is about to make the situation go all to hell by summoning the rest of the people of Ramul to kill you, Iga steps forth, and with a tremendous display of power, uses his Taima-kodan ability to destroy the bell. Enraged, the Archmonk transforms both himself and the sisters, swearing vengeance all the while. After choosing the last four members of a battle party to accompany Lieza, it's crazy-ass-kickin' time!

Once you succeed in taking out the Archmonk and his blind followers, the very temple itself begins to collapse. Without a moment to spare, you need to gather the villagers together and get out of there.

STORYCHECK THE CLAIRE WITCH PROJECT

Of course, this discriminatory cave filtering magic will be sued out of existence by the ACLU. Really.

After leaving Holn, journey northeast to Mother Claire's Cave which is located just north of Calmio Hill. Inside, a voice calls out... "Only one bearing the sacred proof can proceed. Do you bear it?" Upon hearing this, answer Yes, as the proof in question is the Nol's Crystal which you received from Lieza's Grandfather so very long ago. Sensing that you speak the truth, the large rock at the rear of the cave moves aside, revealing a hidden mining passage leading into the mountain. Heeding the warning in the next words the voice speaks, you must now choose a battle party consisting only of beasts. The reason...the following caverns are apparently far too dangerous for humans—chosen or not.

In the house on the other side of the cave sits an elderly woman. In front of her is a blue crystal ball. Could this be the legendary Mother Claire? The words she speaks confirm Lieza's suspicions. Along with some very good advice, Mother Claire tells you that she will be here to help you should you ever need her. This help comes in the form of three new options available via Mother Claire's menu (prompted by speaking to her). These options are:

Class Change

Upgrade any of the beasts in your party. Requirements for each upgrade include having an adequate amount of Nol Skill as well as the beast you wish to change being at the proper level for the transformation (both are noted beside the classes currently available for selection).

Add Ability

Add up to two new Magic Abilities to each of the characters in your current character pool. Abilities can be chosen from any of the highlighted selections within a pre-determined group of six per character. Placing the cursor over a previously selected ability and pressing the Ⓢ button will return the selection to the pool of six, thus allowing you to change these extra abilities as you see fit.

Sell Monster

Exactly what it sounds like. Pick one of the beasts from your character pool and sell it for the price shown at the top of the screen.

Once you've left Mother Claire's for the first time, if you attempt to enter "Mother Claire's Cave" again, you will be given the choice of proceeding into the cave or going directly to Mother Claire's House.

MOTHER CLAIRE'S CAVE

After forming your party (composed of Paundit and any other monsters Lieza has captured using her Ravish ability), enter the passage previously blocked by the boulder.

Not far from the start, you'll come to a broken section of ground which you cannot cross. To pass this obstacle, shift the switch next to the hole in order to trigger the mine cart at the beginning of the tracks to roll forward and create a makeshift bridge. Upon coming to the next room, you'll find a two-position lever. Pull this lever to the right to move a mine cart which was blocking a switch in the room to the southwest. Pulling it to the left calls forth a rather large group of enemies, so you may want to avoid doing that. Once you've moved it to the right, head to the room where the now-accessible third switch is and flip it (after working your way past/through the creatures who inhabit this area). This will move the cart that was blocking the entrance to a passage leading north in the previous room. Finally, return to the room with the two-position lever and enter the now-open northern passage.

After a brief jaunt through this last passage, Lieza thanks you for a job well done. Everyone then travels through the nearby exit.

Ruwaga

Once you've touched down, make your way to the village of Ruwaga which is nestled on the cliffs between the Brakia Skyport and the volcano to the north. As soon as Gruga steps foot inside the village he called home before the uprising, he sees his fellow villagers being interrogated by the Romalian Patrol Corps. The Romalian military is looking for King Ginba, and they'll stop at nothing to find him—including harming the citizens of Brakia. When Gruga hears these threats being directed towards his old neighbors, he comes forth and challenges the soldiers. Not only is he recognized by the villagers, but by the troops as well, who having heard of his great strength, transform into more of the vicious Chimera beasts that you've come to know and love—KILLING!!!

TIME TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE

After putting the Romalians in their place, seek out King Ginba, who's hiding in the hut at the northwest corner of the village. King Ginba tells you that Rygar, a man Gruga knows only too well from the War for Independence, has returned—and is now siding with Romalia! By joining forces with Romalia, he hopes to use their army of Chimera monsters to take over Brakia. Any and all attempts to call a truce with Rygar and his newfound Romalian brethren have met with nothing but injury and pain. Where everyone else has failed, Gruga feels he may be able to make a difference—and if nothing else, determine if Andel has his hand in any of this.

Ruwaga

After fighting your way through the Manor, you'll find Rygar seated at his desk in the back room. Amidst boasts that he will soon rule over Brakia, Rygar lets slip that Romalia, with which he now aligns himself, plans to take over the world. He then leads you into the Manor kitchen, where you come face-to-face with someone near and dear to Gruga's heart—Elena! With her vision now restored, the little girl fears Gruga because of his fearsome appearance. That bastard Rygar has stooped lower than Gruga could have ever imagined... using but a child to exact his revenge on the Brakian hero... filling her head full of malicious lies... telling her that Gruga had stolen her away from him, her true father... to use as a tool to get what HE wanted. Rygar then claims victory as he and Elena leave you. Gruga, with his feelings crushed, returns to Ruwaga.

Wanting to be by himself, Gruga returns home and asks that you leave him be. While controlling Shante, enter Gruga's room to see him drinking away his sorrow (in case you're wondering, it's peppermint schnapps with a twist). The scene then cuts to the Ruwaga Inn where the rest of your party has gathered. As they discuss the possible reasons for Romalia's interest in such a remote country, King Ginba arrives to tell them some disturbing news—in an attempt to get rid of the Brakian Resistance for good, Rygar may be planning to cause the dormant volcano, Mt. Banza, to erupt! As frightening as that sounds, Ele suggests that what King Ginba fears is a detonator may actually be another mind-control device under construction at the volcano. The others agree it would serve no purpose to destroy the countryside just to snuff out a few rebels—not when they can control the masses instead! It's settled! The time for talking has ended... It's now time to send a message to Rygar, and Gruga is just the Brakian to do it. Leave the Inn and head to Gruga's House to enlist the aid of the once and future hero of this land. It only takes a little reasoning and one hell of a bitch slap to make him see the light.

With Gruga once again by your side, leave the village of Ruwaga.

Rygar stoops really low to pull this one off.

That will still sting...next week.

A LITTLE SIGHTSEEING

Can't we just call ass-busters?

Before taking the hike north to Banza Mountain, you may be interested in stopping at a few other choice locations in Gruga's homeland, including the town of Gooz, just slightly south of the Lord's Manor. Along with the usual Inn and Shop, its Guild has several wanted criminals for you to apprehend once you've checked out the posters on its rear wall.

Other locations in Brakia worth investigating are the Smith to the north-east, where you can upgrade your equipment in various manners, the Zanag Plain to the east, which promises a battle with every visit, and the Sealed Ruins—the latest in the long line of ruins that you've hopefully been seeking out and plundering.

Once you've gotten the exploring bug out of your system, make your way north to Banza Mountain so you can rain on Rygar's parade—and hopefully win back Elena's love!

Ah, yes, Banza Mountain. Soon to be your most-hated section of this awesome game.

THE SEALED RUINS

Located at the southeast corner of Brakia, these Sealed Ruins will open for you if you've first conquered the Sealed Ruins in Alatos. These ruins are like the ones in Alatos, but with a slight twist. They have multiple separated sections on various floors, but more than one stairway leading up or down to the next levels. Due to these nuances you'll have to pay closer attention to the paths you take in order to prevent getting lost in this maze-like dungeon. A Guardian's Force Fountain appears on the western section of Ruins B1 once you've rid it of renegade robots. As always, once you've cleared a floor of enemies it will remain that way for as long as you remain in the ruins.

STORYCHECK GRUGA VERSUS THE VOLCANO

A little something Gruga picked up that helped out in the showers during a short stint in jail.

As you pass through Mt. Banza's entrance, Gruga warns you to stay alert. Inside the volcano, lava flows block your progress in several directions. In order for you to delve deeper into Banza Mountain, you'll need to use the mine carts (choose Yes to get on, when prompted after inspecting each) located at various spots throughout the magma-ridden caverns—the first being up and around the corner from where you came in. Unfortunately, trouble begins as soon as you reach the end of your initial ride.

GHERKIN IN AN OLD MINE

When you've disposed of the dirt dwellers, continue on by taking the second cart (found at the northern end of this area) for a spin. Once it comes to a stop in the next area, you'll see another mine cart as well as a switch, which shifts the track placement. Currently the track is set so the cart will travel to the southwest, but since you need to head northwest, flip the switch before hopping onto the mine cart. If you take the mine cart for a spin before shifting the placement of the tracks, you will be brought to an area where Dabano, a creature wanted by the Gooz Hunters' Guild, can be found (see page 390). If you do find him, quickly make him an ex-Peirrot, and then get back to the task at hand.

After you've traveled northwest in the mine cart, you'll come to a small set of stairs. Another joyous cart ride to danger awaits you just beyond...

Gruga entertains his fantasies of being an all-powerful Genie.

PLAYING WITH LAVA

From this point, take the next cart west to the small switch on the wall. Flipping this switch causes the lava to the south and east to recede. Take the eastern passage and use the cart you'll find in the area. It leads down the tracks to another wall switch. Press this switch to cause the lava to the south to recede even further than it did when you activated the last one. Next, return to the passage towards the south which you just cleared, but before pressing on in your journey through the volcano, check the newly opened dead-end passage just below it, near the stairs, to find a treasure chest containing a Feather Staff.

Gruga contemplates a switch.

Check 3 ➡

RIDDLE ME PISSED

After acquiring the staff, make your way east through the passage above you, where the lava was previously. At the end of it is a surprise. A mine cart! Aren't you taken aback? Ride this cart far to the north, where you'll come to another set of stairs.

At the top of the stairs there is yet another mine cart. If you take the cart without first repositioning the tracks by way of the switches along the passage leading north, you will be ambushed once your ride comes to an end in the area furthest north.

To prevent this encounter, begin by walking up the tracks to the second turnoff on the right. Here you'll find a switch. Flip it to shift the tracks so that upon riding the cart, it heads down that passage. A treasure chest awaits you once you do.

While the urge is to just break the $ switch by this time, it's probably best to just play it cool.

Check4 ➡

Once you've taken the weapon from the chest, ride the mine cart back to the stairs. Now, walk up the tracks to the north, flipping the switch for a second time as you walk by it so that the cart won't take the detour to the right again. Upon reaching the open area past the switch, you're ambushed by a gang of Mud Stalkers.

AMBUSHED

Gruga decides to bust out the chorus from the SEGA CD LUNAR intro song.

Check5 ➡

VISIT THE GUARDIAN FORCE FOUNTAIN

In the area north of where you were ambushed, flip the switch at the track branch-off point so that the cart will be able to snake a turn to the left when it reaches this point. Once this has been accomplished, return to the mine cart and ride it as far as it will take you. If you're low on Hit or Magic Points, you're in for a treat, because in addition to another set of stairs, the cart lets you off right in front of a Guardian's Force Fountain.

After a fabulous frolic in the fountain, take the stairs and in the passage you come to flip the switch to reposition the track. Once that's done, hop on the mine cart and ride it to the north where you'll see another wall switch. Flip this switch to rid a passage to the northwest of the lava that was covering its floor. Next, return to the south via the mine cart and reposition the track so that you can take the turnoff leading west. Ride the cart as far west as it will take you, then continue on in that direction on foot. You don't get far before a monster appears on the broken section of track you just crossed and triggers the switch on the wall at its center, which in turn releases a flow of lava that traps you in this western area with several of his friends.

"I feel so...clean, so...fresh."

Check6 ➡

Once you're through playing in the mud, ride the next cart to the area to the north. Here you can go even further north, where you'll find the stairs leading to the next section of the volcano (a mine cart which brings you back to the start of this section is available for you to use next to the stairs, should you desire to return to the Guardian's Force Fountain at the end of the previous section), or you can head east where you'll stumble onto another group of creatures, the leader of which is another wanted criminal from the Gooz Hunters' Guild. If you choose to check the eastern passage before taking the stairs, know that Gigas, the one with the bounty on his head, is hiding in the passages to the north, out of the main chamber of the battlefield (see page 390).

ONWARD!

Gruga hesitates this time, because the eighth dwarf, Spunky, has left his cart a mess.

Check 7 ➡

YES OR NO? YES OR NO?

When you're ready, climb the stairs to the northwest and proceed down the passage they lead to. As you reach the bend, you spot a Weretiger attempting to steal a mine cart. You're then asked whether you'd like to Allow him to take the cart, Yes or No. If you allow him to take it, he'll ride away to the east. However, if you attempt to stop him, you'll end up battling the creature and five of his friends a short distance down the track.

A scene from COPS! live in Banza Mountain...

Check 8 ➡

TIME TO HEAD NORTH

Since the mine cart on the track leading to the east was destroyed at the start of the battle (or if it's not there due to your allowing the Weretiger to leave with it previously), your only choice to proceed is now to take the next cart north. Up the stairs you'll find another cart...who'd have guessed? Ride this cart to the east where you'll face a pack of Weretigers who are on the prowl for you, due to the fact that you recently killed members of their den.

After railroading these thugs, if you're in a feisty mood, take the cart furthest south to another area where you'll be able to face more surly Weretigers.

A lonely mine cart on a lonely stretch of track in the loneliest part of the mountain.

Check 9 ➡

WERETIGERS, OH MY!

If you'd rather just get on with the more important task of stopping Rygar, instead ride the mine cart positioned by itself to the north and...oh look! More Weretigers!

From the line of carts gathered near where you were let off, ride the third from the bottom to the west, where you'll find a treasure chest.

Once you've snagged the free equipment, return to the east and ride the lone cart at the bottom right to the next set of stairs.

These stairs lead to a final Guardian's Force Fountain before the stairs that will take you to the very top of Banza Mountain. Use the fountain to regain your strength, then take the stairs to the north.

It looks like the party's about to be crashed.

STORYCHECK

Shante conveniently leaves out the part where he abandoned her in the night...

Once the pleasantries are out of the way, Rygar pats himself on the back whilst showing off his handiwork—the device that will aid Romalia in its Martyr Plan to control the entire world!!! Gruga's words, as strong and heartfelt as they are, are not enough to sway Rygar into stopping his part in this madness. It is during this moment of weakness on Gruga's part that Rygar strikes out—knocking the Brakian warrior into a crevice brimming with lava. Though his speech fell on deaf ears as far as Rygar was concerned, they do not get past Elena as easily. As Shante reminds the little girl of all Gruga has done for her—unconditionally—the child rushes to his aid...only to meet what seems like a cruel end at the hands of the monster that brought life to her so few years ago!!! As Rygar transforms into the Chimera beast Romalia has now genetically engineered him to be, a voice calls out from behind him. Gruga and Elena are safe! Whether it was a ledge or Gruga's strength that may have allowed him to hold onto the side of the crevice...either way, they're alive. The battle starts as soon as Elena is out of harm's way.

RYGAR—ONE COLD BASTARD

High atop Banza Mountain is the man who makes your blood boil more vigorously than the molten rock all around you—Rygar! Along with him is the object of your affection—Elena, standing beside her father...if you can call him that. Wouldn't this be a good time to break out the Mentos? The fresh-maker always smooths out the rough spots in a confrontation...

During this battle, be wary of the Death spell Rygar is capable of casting, as well as the Petro Wind attacks from the Gas Clouds, as they can turn your party to stone pretty quickly, especially if you tend to fight as a group.

A HAPPY ENDING?

Elena gets a totally different confession than the one she is expecting.

At the foot of Banza Mountain, with everyone safe, Gruga chooses this time to confide in Elena the truth—that he was the one who caused the conflict which took her real parents from her. It was out of guilt that he took on the responsibility of raising her, but as time passed he knew that he loved the child as if she were his own. He goes on to explain that it was fear that made him leave her in Clenia, for he knew that once she could see, he would no longer be able to hide the truth. She would know he was not the man he claimed to be. Rather than chance heartbreak, he opted to run away. When all is said and done, Elena opens her arms and runs to the man she'll forever think of as "Daddy!"

The family reunion is cut short, however, as Elena must remain in Ruwaga while Gruga and the others press on in their quest to stop Romalia. The Brakian warrior, and newly proud father, will return though—nothing will stop him from getting back to his Elena once the threat of the Martyr Plan has ended!

If you re-enter Ruwaga Village, the townsfolk will tell you that Elena and King Ginba have gone to the Lord's Manor, and would like for you to come see them there before you leave. The trip isn't really necessary, but if you do head over there, Ginba and Elena will just tell you that they'll be waiting at the Manor for your return (in case you're wondering why Elena says that she knows you have to go to Forress, it's a hint for you to go to Forles in case you hadn't done so prior to arriving in Brakia. The mispronunciation is due to a swollen lip she incurred when Rygar pushed her over the edge of the volcano—uh, yeah, that's it). When you're ready, and have said all your good-byes, make your way to the Brakia Skyport.

Upon trying to leave Brakia, you're called to an emergency meeting inside the Operations Room of the Silver Noah. Using a new technology, Chongara has pinpointed the location of the next tower. Himself baffled, Chongara tells you that the "sensor" readings say that this tower cannot be found in any known country per say, but rather in the middle of the ocean—the ocean off the coast of Millmana to be exact. With that, plot a course for Millmana once you are given the option to do so via the World Map.

Gruga vows not to give up until every feminine protection pad has the magic of "wings."

5 DESCRIPTION:

Client has requested a Hunter to clear the mine tracks of rocks on Mt. Banza. Client is waiting in the mountain.

Due to the location of this job, it will not become available until you have beaten Rygar and destroyed the mind-control device atop Banza Mountain. Once the contract has been taken, return to Banza Mountain so that you can meet up with the client. After forming a battle party, you'll notice that the lava flow that is normally to the left in the initial room has receded, allowing you to enter a new section to the west. In the first area of this new section you may run into Garop, a feathered felon wanted by the Gooz Guild.

After clipping Garop's wings, walk north and use the waiting mine cart to bring you to another set of creatures.

Just north of this second batch of undesirables is the man you've come to help. Once you're recognized as being from the Guild, the client fills you in on what needs to be done. In numerous places along the tracks that are scattered about this area, there sit large rocks. It's up to you to move and get rid of them, so quit yer lollygagging and get to work! You'll need to push the rocks in order to move them, then, once they're off the tracks, push them into the large hole to the south. Since you cannot push something unless you can get to the side of the object opposite from the direction you wish to move it in, do not allow any of the rocks to be pushed into walls or corners. In other words—don't paint yourself into a corner. If for any reason you do just that, feel free to speak to the client, as he will offer you the opportunity to Start Over. After you've done the job to the best of your ability, and at the very least cleared the tracks of the rocks, talk to the client and tell him you're through by choosing Finish Job from his selection menu. Your reward from the Guild will not only be based upon how many rocks you cleared from the tracks, but how many you disposed of down the hole as well.

Collect Minerals

4 TIME FRAME: Gooz Guild—After defeating Rygar.

5 DESCRIPTION:

Client requests that a Hunter retrieve minerals he excavated, but dropped. Client is waiting at Mt. Banza.

As with "Clear the Tracks!", this job appears at the Gooz Guild as soon as you've rid Banza Mountain of the Romalian mind-control device. Take the walk back up the cliffs to Banza Mountain once you've been given this assignment. Inside you'll hear from the client that he dropped twenty mineral rocks in an attempt to escape from a troop of monsters who attacked him. Unfortunately the monsters are still milling about in the volcano, thus making it impossible for the client to retrieve them himself. That's what you're here for. At this point start wandering through the sections of Mount Banza collecting as many of the dropped minerals as you can find.

Once you're done gathering the minerals, return to the client who is still waiting by the Banza Mountain Entrance and give them to him via the Finish this job selection on his menu (appears when you talk to him). Your reward from the Guild will be based upon how many of the twenty minerals you were able to locate.

JOB/CHECK Deliver Meat to Gourmet

4 TIME FRAME: Gooz Guild—After defeating Rygar.

5 DESCRIPTION:

This job becomes available to you once you have saved Brakia from the mind-control device that Rygar built at the top of Banza Mountain. As the description states, head next door to the Gooz Inn after taking on this assignment and speak to the overweight gourmet in the room to the right of the counter. He tells you that he'd like to sample some of the meats from the Lord's Manor, so would you please go and get some for him? At this point, leave the Inn and take a stroll over to the Lord's Manor to do as he asked. Inside the Manor, pass through Rygar's old office, which is now Ginba's, to the room off it to the east. On a table at the rear left in this room you'll find a large shoulder of meat. Take this hopefully non-spoiled meat back to the rotund gourmet at the Inn to fulfill this job's requirements.

4 TIME FRAME: Gooz Guild—After completing the job "Clear the Tracks?"

5 DESCRIPTION:

This contract appears in the Gooz Guild once you've completed the job "Clear the Tracks!", and have re-entered the Guild after having collected your reward for it. Once you're on the job, leave Gooz for Banza Mountain and seek out the client deep within the volcano. The client for this job can be found to the northwest of the man you previously moved the rocks for. Along the way to meeting the client, you'll face three groups of enemies, the last of which has the possibility of a wanted monster, Dreyper, from the Gooz Guild being among them.

When you finally reach him, the client asks that you eliminate a group of monsters who have been threatening him for hours. Answer Yes to begin the encounter.

Once the foul fowl have flown the coop, you'll have completed this job to the satisfaction of the client. Before returning to the Guild and claiming quite the hefty reward for such an easy assignment, you spot a lone Fire Bird in the far corner. Moments later it runs away. Closer inspection reveals that it was protecting an egg.

PRINCESS? WHAT PRINCESS?

What's a vacuum cleaner salesman doing in a bar?

After touching down behind enemy lines in the country of Millmana, enter the city of Ajarl to the southeast. From talking to the citizens on the street you hear mumblings that Yagun is building something in the ocean. Over in the Ajarl Bar, the man with the vacuum apparatus tells you that everything went to pot when the King of Millmana was killed by a monster on a rampage. He then goes on to say that Princess Sania's body was never found. Hopefully she managed to escape, but if she did, no one knows where she is. Hmmm...you know a Sania. At this point, switch your lead character to Sania via the "L2" or "R2" buttons, so that the man with the vacuum can see her. When he does, he breaks down from joy and relief. The man's name is Roan, and Sania knows him well. After exclaiming how grateful they are that each other can still draw breath, Roan tells Sania that he's been collecting information regarding General Yagun and the King's death. His facts on the latter brings him to the conclusion that Yagun had a hand in it, but before going into too much detail on the subject, he reveals that the Forest Spirit is near death because of the state Millmana is currently in. Due to Yagun's desire for power, destroying Millmana is of no concern to him. He'll just use it up and move on to the next country.

Blended in? Well, maybe...

Of course, Yagun has blatantly ignored the ban on offshore drilling to make this thing.

A further nugget of knowledge that Roan has dug up proves to be most valuable. An offshore oil platform, in the ocean east of Millmana, is Yagun's latest project. Roan only suspects that its purpose is twofold, but you on the other hand know exactly what the true function of the rig will be, and it ain't Black Gold or Texas Tea—it's the Martyr Plan! Holding her feelings for revenge in check—for the time being—Sania and the others decide that they must first concentrate on taking out the oil rig before it becomes fully operational.

Before continuing, take a few moments to look around the city. The shop stocks several new items, and while the dispatcher at the Hunters' Guild may not have any jobs for you at this time, there are four wanted posters on the rear wall there.

When you're ready, leave Ajarl and return to the Silver Noah so that you can start your mission. Once you've lifted off from Millmana, choose the Oil Rig from the World Map.

TRAIN KEPT A ROLLIN'...

Yagun's quite confident. Of course, that will soon change. Oh, come on! You KNOW he's going down!

have to wait for you have no choice but to retreat to Millmana—staying here would only bring about the certain destruction of the Silver Noah!!!

Back in Millmana, re-enter the city of Ajarl. Elsewhere, General Yagun receives an update informing him of your current whereabouts. From this, he deduces that you have returned to put an end to his precious train cannon. Be it overconfidence or sheer stupidity, Yagun commands that the Graunoln be left right where it is.

When the action returns to your troop, seek out Roan in the Ajarl Bar and ask him for information on the Graunoln Train Cannon. Along with the bit of trivia that the name Graunoln was chosen for it being the name of the Goddess of Destruction, Roan tells you that General Yagun is currently housing the Train Cannon in the Nien Forest. He goes on to say that because of the magic being used in its shielding, the only way to stop the cannon is by destroying the Train Control Room from within.

Now that you know what you must do, and the risk it entails, leave Ajarl and head over to the Nien Forest—you've got a train to catch!

Once you're in the Nien Forest (located just northwest of the Millmana Skyport), make your way to the far north, where you'll find Yagun's pride and joy, the Graunoln Train Cannon.

1 LOCATION: Ajarl Guild—Nien Forest 2 WEALTH: 2800 G 3 MERITS: 8

4 TIME FRAME: Ajarl Guild—After Nien Forest is accessible from the World Map.

5 DESCRIPTION:

Our client is researching ancient ruins by examining runes on ancient stones. He wishes protection while doing so. Client is waiting in bar.

This job appears in the Ajarl Hunters' Guild once the Nien Forest location becomes accessible on the Millmana World Map (this occurs after you've received information on the Graunoln Train Cannon from Roan). To begin it, speak to the Archaeologist in the Ajarl Bar, then escort him out of Ajarl to the Nien Forest. If you accept this job before you've gone into the Nien Forest through normal game progression to destroy the Graunoln Train Cannon, upon entering the forest the client will ask if you'd like to Proceed to the research area? Answering Yes will allow you to continue on with this job, while choosing No will enable you to instead advance the plot of the game, skipping this job! After each portion of this job is completed successfully, you will be sent back out to the Millmana World Map. Re-entering the Nien Forest will bring up the Proceed to the research area? option again so you can complete the job or progress as you need/want to. During each stop at a ruin, the client will attempt to decipher the runes on the accompanying stones. While he does this, it'll be your job to hold off any advancing monsters for a set amount of time/turns so that he may complete his work properly.

If all the enemies are killed before the requisite amount of time/turns has passed, merely skip your characters' turns to proceed, as the foes will not re-appear. As soon as the third and final rune has been correctly deciphered, the job will be completed to the satisfaction of the Ajarl Guild, not to mention the delight of the client.

I THINK I CAN'T! I THINK I CAN'T!

Poco's idea to infiltrate the train was to smear his body with marshmallow cream and butter, making him too slippery to grab.

Upon reaching the clearing where the train is entrenched, Sania devises a possible method for getting aboard. If you can somehow avoid the guns atop the train, the lack of shielding there should make it the perfect point of entry. To go about this, you'll need to attack from above via airship, and herein lies the problem—since the Silver Noah is far too large to get close enough, how do you do so with the smaller Hien without being overwhelmed? The answer: simple—create a distraction so the Hien can slip in unnoticed. With the plan now set, you'll break into two teams... Elc and Sania leading the air assault, while Arc heads up the ground team who'll stay behind to handle the diversion. Arc then asks if you're ready, Yes or No.

If you choose No at this point, you'll be sent back out to the Millmana World Map, from which you can then take care of any preparations you feel are necessary. When you're ready to return and begin your raid on the Graunoln, you can avoid hiking back through the Nien Forest by choosing the newly-accessible Train Cannon Base location from the Millmana World Map.

Telling Arc Yes will bring up the character selection screens for each group, beginning with the air-attack team, which, if successful, will enter the Train itself. If you're feeling a bit iffy about your choices, don't worry, you'll have the chance to alter the members of the two teams by way of the prompt asking Are you sure?, which will appear when you're done. When you're finally ready to get on with it, and have answered Yes to both prompts, Shu hands Elc several bombs, advising him to use them on large groups of enemies during his run on the train.

Cut to General Yagun's office. When he's told that you've reached the Graunoln, it dawns on the General that Arc and company may be smarter than he thought—too bad for him he came to this realization a little late. As a last-ditch effort, Yagun orders more monsters to be sent into the forest to stop you.

The Romalian soldiers are falling right into the trap!

A little last-minute instruction on the use of the pyro devices isn't a bad idea...

With the others heading back to the Millmana Skyport, Arc and his group make a not-so-subtle appearance at the Graunoln. Hopefully Yagun's men don't figure out that you're here to stall for time so that the Hien can make its move. As the battle begins, four King Dragons fly in to help the transformed Chimera soldiers. When Commander Giones inside the Graunoln hears that his men have been defeated, he sends the troops guarding the top of the train down to the front-line to try and put a stop to Arc...bonus! Everything is going according to plan!

While Arc and the others take on the next wave of Millmana's finest, Chopin flies the others in on the Hien. As they approach the target, Giones is made aware of their presence, but it's now too late to do anything about it. The cannon can't be aimed fast enough, and the troops are tied up with Arc. The only thing left is to call General Yagun—maybe he'll have some idea of what to do! Unfortunately for Giones, the only thing Yagun does is threaten. Seeing no other alternative, Giones decides to place inexperienced men at the anti-aircraft guns atop the train.

With the sky above the Graunoln now ablaze with mortar fire, Chopin brings the Hien in low so that Elc and his team can drop aboard the train.

After knocking out the anti-aircraft turrets single-handedly, Elc comes to find that the hatch leading to the interior of the train is locked. A tiny bit of thought drums up the solution—the bombs Shu gave him! KABOOM!! You're in!

Elc demonstrates why he didn't end up a comedian.

Seeing that Ele has accomplished the task of getting inside the Graunoln, Arc and his party retreat to the safety of the Silver Noah. It's now up to Ele and the rest of his assault squad to finish what must be done.

Obviously upset by the news of what's happening aboard his special little choo-choo, General Yagun loses his temper—scaring his monkey in the process. A scared monkey is never good.

Meanwhile, Ele's team races through the rooms and corridors of the Graunoln in an attempt to find the control room.

QUICK! FLIP THE SWITCH!

At the end of the corridor in the first compartment (Map 2) there is a switch on the wall; flip it "on" to disable a sensor beam in the room to the far west (Map 3). This needs to be off because hitting a beam activates the security system, making your life miserable.

On the rear wall of the room whose sensor beam you just disabled is another switch. Flip this one "on" to open a door in the hallway of Map 4 (through the door at the end of the outer corridor) so you can continue on through the train.

The next wall switch you come to will be found in the corridor of Map 5, just above the sensor beam which blocks you from progressing. Turn this switch "on", then enter the doorway directly to the west. The switch redirected one of the two sensor beams in this room, allowing you to reach the treasure chest in Map 7.

Once you've raided the treasure, turn "on" the switch next to the door in the room you're in. Next, return to the switch in the hallway and turn it back "off". Doing this will allow you to reach the switch at the southeast corner of the room where you just found the WindGrizzle Fang by redirecting the two sensor beams. Turning this new switch "on" deactivates the sensor beam in the room to the west, gaining you safe access to yet another wall switch.

After turning this last switch "on" (in Map 6), the sensor beam in the outer corridor will be deactivated, enabling you to continue your journey through this compartment of the train.

Yes, flip the switch. It's the first of many.

Where's Catherine Zeta-Jones when you need her? Ele in a cat suit just wouldn't be the same...

Check2 ➡

BEAM A LITTLE BEAM FOR ME!

Inside the room around the bend in the corridor just past the sensor beam (Map 8), you'll see four beams projected, two at a time, at specific intervals. If you're careful, you can walk through the room to the door at the top right without being detected.

Unfortunately that top room (Map 9) is brimming with baddies.

Once you've cleared a path through the foes, flip the switch on the rear wall to activate the power supply for the lift in the room at the end of the outer corridor (Map 10). With the switch thrown, return to the corridor and make your way east where you'll not only find the lift, but a Guardian's Force Fountain as well.

After replenishing your health and magic points, ride the lift (inspect the power unit on the wall beside it) to the level below, heading west once you arrive.

It's like a high-tech version of jump rope, where death (or at least serious inconvenience) is on the line.

Check3 ➡

TAKE THE LOW ROAD

In Map 12, take the lower route, avoiding the sensor beams, until you come to the hallway leading up. Along either side of this hall is a doorway. The door to the east leads to the wall switch that lowers the sensor beams in the central hall and eastern section of the upper corridor.

If you enter the room to the west (Map 14) you'll find another switch. Turning this "on" will reposition a sliding wall so that you can access another wall switch in a room you'll come to later.

Notice the nice markers to tip you off that there's something to see here?

Check4 ➡

DON'T TRIP THE SENSOR

The next room you can reach, the northern entrance to Map 13 found off the upper corridor, contains a wall switch that shuts down the sensor beam blocking the two exit doors at the western side of the lower corridor. To reach it, you must make your way past three alternating sensor beams in a similar fashion to how you crossed through the room to reach the switch that controlled the lift. The difference here, and on the rest of this level, is that instead of enemies appearing if you trip any of the beams, you're teleported to the start of the room, or in the case of the sensors in the outer corridor, the start of the compartment. Damn! Wait...double damn!

Go ahead...you know you want to!

With the western doors in the lower corridor now accessible, pass through them and enter the next room you come to, the west section of Map 14.

Check 5 ➡

PLAYING IN THE FOUNTAIN

When you've made short work of the local foes, turn the switch at the back corner of the room "on", to shut down the two remaining sensor beams in the upper corridor. Before leaving this area through the door to the west in the outer corridor, enter the room at the northwest (north section of Map 14). Here you'll find the switch that powers up the lift you'll need to use to proceed. In order to reach this switch, you must have previously moved the sliding wall. This was done by flipping the switch in the room to the west of the central hallway to the "on" position. After kicking on the juice, leave this compartment by the door to the west to find the lift.

Such a sci-fi fountain in such a low-tech world...

In Map 16, you'll see a second Guardian's Force Fountain. Once you've used the fountain, pass by the lift you recently powered up and enter the hidden room to the west to find a new weapon for one of your more metallic friends.

After taking the weapon from the chest, return to the lift and ride it to the room below where you'll find another treasure chest.

Check 6 ➡

GOING DOWN?

Once again, after you've taken possession of the weapon, step back onto the lift and ride it to the floor below. Do this by pressing the switch that controls the lift to the "down" position.

The first corridor (Map 19) in this new compartment is riddled with sensor beams that turn on and off intermittently. Slowly make your way to the center of the corridor, and from there enter the room to the north (Map 20). Here you'll encounter another batch of the opposition.

You can go on strike and keep pressing "Quit" here, but it's only gonna delay the inevitable.

Check 7 ➡

SLOW, MEDIUM, OR FAST?

After dealing with the enemy, head through the door at the northeast to find a room containing not one but three wall switches. These switches determine the speed at which the mirrors controlling the trajectory of the sensor beams rotate in the room to the south of the outer corridor. The switch closest to the door causes a slow rotation; the central switch turns them at a medium speed, while the switch to the far right causes them to spin rather fast. Since you'll soon need to get past them, your best bet would be to flip the first switch near the door. After doing so, return to the outer corridor and enter the room to the south.

Choose wisely...

Check 8 ➡

MIRROR, MIRROR...

In this room (Map 22), as mentioned earlier, there are six mirrors—four of which rotate according to a timed pattern. This rotation causes the three sensor beams in the room to reposition themselves at the same timed intervals. The object of this room is to make your way through it to the door at the southeast. Do this by walking directly south when it's safe to do so, past each contact point of the central beam, until you reach the bottom of the room. Once that's accomplished, head to the right past the next two alternating beams which stand between you and the door. If you didn't slow down the mirrors by way of the switch in the northeastern room, passing these last two beams to reach the exit will involve running just after the central beam bounces off the top two mirrors. As before, tripping any of the sensor beams on this level will cause you to be teleported to the start of the room/corridor.

Your timing has to be just right or you'll be in trouble here.

In the room following is a switch that when turned "on" lowers a wall at the end of the outer corridor. With the remainder of the outer corridor now available to you, return to it and make your way further east.

Check 9 ➡

ON OR OFF?

In the room to the south off the eastern section of the corridor (Map 24), you'll face a few more foes before being able to proceed through the door at the south-east corner.

After passing through the door to the southeast, you'll need to position the first four wall switches you see in this room in this manner (from left to right): Switch 1 - "On", Switch 2 - "On", Switch 3 - "Off", Switch 4 - "On". With all four switches thrown properly, you'll be able to access the fifth switch, which when turned "on" powers up the next lift you'll need to use.

So many switches, so little time...

With the lift now online, return to the outer corridor. Within the series of rooms to the northeast (Map 26 and Map 27), you'll find a long hall booby-trapped by another sensor beam. In order to get past this trap, make use of the two alcoves in the hall so as not to be caught when the beam is emitted. Up and around the corner is a treasure chest containing a weapon for any of your characters that are magically inclined.

Check 10 ➡

TAKE THE TIME TO SAVE YOUR GAME

With everything now taken care of on this floor, return to the outer corridor and head through both the door at the far east and the stairway that follows. In Map 29 you'll come to the lift, along with a special bonus—a save journal and cots to rest in. After taking advantage of these conveniences, ride the lift to the level below.

Once off the lift, enter the next compartment (Map 31) and make your way down the stairs to the lower section so that you may draw the enemy out of hiding.

Saving at this point is really a good idea. And so is brushing your teeth at regular intervals...

Check 11 ➡

DON'T FORGET THE TREASURE CHESTS

When the skirmish is over, head through the door at the southwest and follow the long passage on the other side to a waiting treasure chest in Map 33.

With the treasure safely packed away in your inventory, return to the compartment where your last fight occurred and take the stairs to the exit at the northwest. In this next compartment (Map 32), take the stairs to the lower section as you did before, but instead of battling, head down the winding passage to the west where you'll find a room with yet another chest.

What happens if you forget where you put this?

Check 12 ➡

IT ALL COMES TO A HEAD

Now that you've fought your way past everything Commander Giones has thrown at you, and have explored the train to the best of your ability, it's time to get on with your primary goal—finding the Train Control Room. To do this, return to the east and take the stairs to the upper passage. From there, work your way west until you reach the final lift in Map 36. Take the lift to the level above, and then follow the numerous short hallways until you reach the Train Control Room. Along the way you'll come to an east branch in Map 40 that will lead you to a treasure chest or two.

Waiting for you in the Train Control Room is Commander Giones, who after praising your efforts, shows you that he too has taken part in the Chimera program. Of course he has! The surprise would be finding a Romalian who hasn't!

Promises, promises.

STORYCHECK

Yagun is still reeling from the realization that he's surrounded himself with idiots.

Upon the defeat of Commander Giones and his crew, nothing stands in the way of your destroying the Graunoln from the inside—but before you do, Sania comes up with an idea. Keeping the details a secret, she places the coordinates to General Yagun's Headquarters into the Train Cannon's targeting computer and lets fly an explosive volley of revenge.

Unaware that the Graunoln has been commandeered by his rivals, Yagun, standing in the flaming rubble which was once his office, curses his troops one final time before the "you know what" hits the fan! Or should that be the other way around? Let that be a lesson to you kids! Be nice to people or it might come back and bite you on the ass. Luckily, no real animals were harmed in the destruction of the Romalian stronghold.

Back in the Train Control Room, Elc and the others set the explosives that will decimate the Graunoln, then hightail it off the train and out of the Nien Forest.

POISONED... RIGHT DOWN TO THE ROOTS

Roan is just jealous he didn't think of it first!

Once you've safely emerged on the Millmana World Map, return to Ajarl and speak to Roan in the Bar. Sania's old friend tells you that with the Headquarters now a smoldering ruin, the remaining Romalian soldiers have evacuated Millmana for the Oil Rig off its coast. Nice, you can kill two birds with one stone, as you were meaning to go there anyway. Something seems wrong though, as even with the rumored death of General Yagun, the Forest Spirit continues to grow ever weaker. You've got to get out to that Oil Rig soon and discover what's going on—then stop it! Before leaving for the rig, it may be a good idea to seek out the Forest Spirit in Toyoke Forest to get some further information—if she's strong enough to reveal herself, that is.

DEATH OF THE FOREST

When you're ready, head into the Toyoke Forest. What you find there shocks you. The grass, the plants and foliage—even the mighty tree to which the Forest Spirit calls home—all dead or dying! If Toyoke Forest is lost, the Forest Spirit will disappear with it, and if that happens, Millmana will be but a memory. Though you've driven out the evil, the real damage may have already been done. As the fear of this harrowing realization begins to set in, the Forest Spirit shows herself. All is not lost—yet!

The Forest Spirit, using some of what little energy she has left, speaks to you of deeds that demand your immediate attention. You must complete the job you started so long ago...letting the world know, through your actions, that the evil spreading across the lands in the form of the Martyr Plan will one day soon demand that all living things pay the ultimate price for their ignorance. It's not confined to mere mortals and the Forest Spirit either, for as the Martyr Plan gains more and more momentum, each of the Guardians feel the effect, and as a result, grows weaker. If the balance of nature is skewed to a point from which it cannot return, the spark will fade and die within the Guardians and Spirits, and so too will the essence of life throughout every corner of the entire planet. On this day, nothing will be able to stop Anel and his cohorts from resurrecting the Dark One, thus eternally damning the world (as if everything being dead wasn't damning enough!)! Before the Forest Spirit can explain anything further, her power begins to flicker. Seconds later she vanishes.

Taking her words to heart, and knowing that you have little time to reverse what Anel and the others have put in motion, leave Toyoke Forest and make your way to the Millmana Skyport, boarding the Silver Noah for your trip to the Oil Rig. Know that once you've chosen the Oil Rig from the World Map, there's no turning back until your job there is done!

Even though she's weak, the Forest Spirit still manages to...entertain.

STORYCHECK

As the Silver Noah pulls up alongside the Deep Sea Oil Rig to let you disembark, you realize that Chopin, great pilot that he is, could still use a little help in the parallel parking department. Luckily, in the process of jumping down to the deck, no one ends up a la John Savage in The Deer Hunter—though for a moment there it looked as if Tosh just might.

After a rousing pep-talk by Arc, in which he explains that the reason you're here is to destroy another of Romalia's mind-control devices, select the remaining four members of Sania's infiltration team and head inside the Oil Rig.

Unlike the Graunoln, the Deep Sea Oil Rig is very straightforward in its layout, and as such there is really only one way you can go in order to progress. Before long, you'll find that the Oil Rig isn't as deserted as you may have initially thought.

When it seems as if you've run into a dead end in Map 5 after doorway number 8 (where the first treasure chest is located), inspect the large open pipe at the southeast by pressing the  button while standing in front of it. As a result, you'll climb through the pipe, emerging in a new area to the east. You'll need to climb through more than just the one pipe if you hope to work your way through the drilling complex, so keep this method of travel fresh in your mind. In areas where you encounter more than a single possible exit, one will lead further into the rig, while the other will bring you to items worthy of adding to your inventory.

YOU DIRTY RAT!

Ugh! What IS this stuff in here?!

Check 2 ➡

Next to entrance 35, before you battle with the eight Mysterious Fires in Map 8, turn "on" the wall switch that controls the power supply to the crane a short distance away.

Aw, what the hell?

LEARN TO FIGHT FIRE!

This little congregation definitely isn't looking to make friends.

Check 3 ➡

SUBMARINE? THAT MIGHT BE USEFUL!

Once you reach the crane in Map 9, inspect it and choose Yes to move the large pipe to the left, next to the power supply wall switch, revealing the next passage you'll need to take. After backtracking a bit and climbing through the pipe, you'll come to an area that contains a wall switch, a doorway, and an ever-popular Guardian's Force Fountain. Since the doorway leads towards a submarine hangar, something you have no need for at this time, instead take the path dictated by the wall switch. Flip the switch "on" to extend a bridge back at number 37, and then follow the new passages that it allows you to access.

Actually, it's used for barbecues, birthday parties, and special occasions, too. Contact management for details.

PIPE NIGHTMARE

By continuing on the path to the south after crossing the extended bridge, you'll eventually arrive at an area whereby you have the choice of passing through one of three pipes (Map 13). Begin by climbing into Pipe 1 (numbered 1, 2 and 3 from left to right), number 45, which will lead you through a series of areas/pipes containing more treasure chests, before eventually dropping you back at the opening three-pipe hub.

Entering Pipe 2 (number 52) brings you to a wall switch. Flipping this switch moves the drop shaft that was previously tied to Pipe 1 over one space to the right so that it connects with Pipe 2. After triggering this, continue on through the nearby pipe to return to the pipe hub.

Along the way, Sania has invented a new extreme sport: Pipe Diving!

Check 5 ➡

THE LAST SET OF PIPES

Next, take Pipe 2 a second time to access the new route created by the drop shaft. While you work your way back to the main pipe hub, trigger the next wall switch you find after door number 60, so that the drop shaft will once again move to the right, locking in place with Pipe 3.

Back at the pipe hub, hop into Pipe 3. This final access way will eventually bring you to one last wall switch after dropping out of number 67. Turn this switch "on" to connect the drop shaft to the pipe you initially entered to get to the three-pipe hub. Pass through the pipe in front of you to be taken back to said pipe.

And, there's a surprise. Not.

Check 6 ➡

SWEET REVENGE

Now that you're out of the maze of pipes, enter the one in front of you that you just recently connected the drop shaft to, number 70. After a short crawl through the pipe and a brief walk down the following stairs to Map 14, you'll find a steel door and an elevator claiming it requires Yagun Alpha Level Clearance to use. Behind the door is a room where you can rest on one of several cots, or make use of the save journal lying atop one of them. After making use of this room, all that stands between you and the mind-control device is a sign on an elevator telling you it's off-limits. Are you going to let a little sign stop you? We thought not.

Clearance-shmearence! After choosing to board the elevator, you're brought deep beneath the surface of the ocean to the chamber which houses the latest of the Romalian mind-control devices. As you step out from the elevator you see not only the mind-control device, but also a rather unexpected foe—Yagun! Somehow he managed to survive the destruction of the Romalian Headquarters in Millmana, and you're about to find out how!

When Yagun shows his true self, he can't help but gloat about how easily he slaughtered Sania's parents. Sania isn't impressed. Yagun's about to find out firsthand that payback's a bitch, and today her name is Sania!

Once you've gathered your troops in the nearby rest and save room, Map 15, head back out into the undersea drilling complex and battle your way back to the submarine hangar (Map 17) that you found earlier (located to the north of the Guardian's Force Fountain at door number 80). Since it's a race against time, with the structure getting weaker by the moment, if the clock begins to run low, remember that bringing up the menu pauses time, and that you can skip battles by heading through an exit. You have twenty minutes to prevent yourself from being forever entombed in this watery grave. The quickest route to the hangar is back across the extending bridge and through door 17, then head for the pipe opening you created when you used the crane (entrance 35).

4 TIME FRAME: Ajarl Guild—After the Deep Sea Oil Rig is destroyed.
5 DESCRIPTION:

A cave-in has occurred at Grassel Coal Mine. Save the miners before they run out of oxygen.

This job appears at the Ajarl Guild after you've destroyed the Deep Sea Oil Rig off the coast of Millmana. Once you've accepted the contract for this job, you're automatically sent to the Grassel Coal Mine.

Upon talking to the Foreman, he gives you the details on what needs to be done. You must rescue ten miners who are either injured or stuck in various tunnels throughout the mine before they collapse. After explaining this to you, he hands you an ax called the Mattock. This ax will break up any large piles of rock that impede your access through the numerous tunnels, but use it sparingly, as the vibrations it produces upon impact may compromise the structural integrity of the mine.

In order to get credit for rescuing the miners, you'll need to bring each of them back to the Foreman. Apparently miners weigh quite a bit, as even the strongest of your characters can only carry one back to safety at a time. Be careful how you explore. Each hit from the Mattock destabilizes the mine, making it shake more and more violently, until finally you deem it no longer safe to stay within the tunnels. When this occurs, you're automatically sent out to the Millmana World Map. Any miners not brought all the way back to the Foreman when this happens will unfortunately not count towards your final rescued miner tally.

The amount of the reward given to you by the Ajarl Guild is based upon the number of miners you were able to rescue before the mine collapsed. Just in case you're wondering...no, you do not get to keep the Mattock.

THE SEALED RUINS

If you really want a challenge, try your hand at the Sealed Ruins along the coast to the northeast. The only thing that may stop you from passing through the dense patch of trees that compose its entrance would be if you had not previously completed the Sealed Ruins in Brakia. If you do gain entrance, you'll soon see that the layout used in these Sealed Ruins is very similar to the lower floors of those in Brakia in that they're riddled with large gaps. These gaps will pose some slight issues in the way of reaching treasure chests or surrounding enemies when roaming or battling within these dark corridors. To solve the problem of opening the treasure chests, choose a captured monster who has the ability of flight to join your battle party. If you have none that fit that criteria, Gogen with his Teleport spell will have to do (make sure you reach any chests you wish to open during the battles, as flying monsters cannot cross gaps while in free-roaming mode). As in the other ruins, you'll come across a Guardian's Force Fountain just about the time you really need it—in this case it appears on Ruins B2 once you've cleared it. While not as large as any of the other Sealed Ruins, the gaps in the floors, combined with the multi-target attacks each of the enemies is capable of, can make it go really wrong really fast—especially if you're not properly attired. Who knows though? If all goes well, you may come out with a few more Power Units with which to vamp Diekbeck.

From talking to the rest of the locals, you soon learn of a landmark called the God Tower. Tower, huh? Sounds like just the place you're looking for. If you make your way to the end of town at this point, you'll run into a border guard who informs you that to pass through the gate to the southern portion of Amigue, you must first get permission from Señor Generale.

Señor Generale's house is just to the right, but upon speaking to the man at the front door you're told that Señor Generale is attending to business currently and as such cannot see you. Hmmmm... there must be some way to get past that rear gate... then it dawns on you—Gomez and Antonio! Now would be the perfect time for you to mosey on over to the Morea Bar.

Inside the Morea Bar's wine cellar (located downstairs, of course), Gomez and Antonio are quick to recognize Arc as a wanted man. As such, when you ask them for some information about the God Tower, they assume you're after the treasure which is rumored to be kept there. Though you assure them that this is not the case, the two decide that it may be in their best interests to help you get to the tower. At this time choose Thanks when Gomez asks you if you'd like them to take you to see Señor Generale. If you choose I don't trust you..., you'll have the ability to leave the wine cellar on your own to continue exploring the town at your own pace.

When you're ready, speak to either of the brothers to prompt them to ask whether you'd like to be shown to the Señor Generale's house or not (if you didn't accept the offer before). After being escorted to Señor Generale's and giving the guard at the front door an autograph, you're in!

You tell him that won't be necessary—as you'd much rather just receive permission to enter the God Tower. As soon as the Generale hears where you wish to go, he begins to tell you of the danger you may face there. Egotist that he is (aren't all dictators?), the Generale inevitably slips into a long-winded story of how he was much like you when he was younger. When this happens, you break into the conversation, thereby cutting his tale short. Not one to be interrupted, Señor Generale asks if you'd like him to finish. Answer Of course to get on his good side—otherwise you'll need to do a bit of sucking up to get him to consider your request. Thinking you as poor as those around him, in a half-hearted attempt to keep you from entering the tower, the Generale demands a fee of ten thousand goz for his approval of passage beyond Morea's southern gate. Imagine his surprise when you choose Here you go, and pay off the bribe without so much as batting an eye (if you have the funds, that is. If you don't, head back out of town to Amigue's battlefields or do a few side jobs until you do. Speaking to the Generale will prompt the question again once you have adequate funds). Oh well, you can't say he didn't try. Keeping to his word, Señor Generale orders the guard at the rear gate to let you pass into southern Amigue so that you may try your luck at the God Tower.

4 TIME FRAME: Morea Guild—After paying Señor Generale's fee of 10,000 G.

5 DESCRIPTION:

A boorish bandito is bothering patrons of the bar. Our client wishes to have him ousted.

This job shows up in the Morea Hunters' Guild after you have been given permission to enter the God Tower by the Señor Generale. Once you've accepted it, head over to the Morea Bar and talk to the bartender, followed by the old man hiding in its wine cellar. Having done this, upon your return upstairs to the bar, you will have triggered an appearance by the Bandito. It doesn't take him long to show that he's a nuisance, and there's only so much you can take before you have to put a stop to it. When you interrupt him as he's taunting the patrons of the bar, he challenges you to a gunfight on the streets of Morea. Outside you go. Since Shu is the only party member you have that uses a firearm for a weapon (aside from Diekbeck, but then using a robot wouldn't exactly be fair, now would it?), he offers to be the one to go through with the duel. The rules are simple—take five paces, then turn and shoot. Firing your gun is performed by pressing and holding the R1 Button; do this as soon as the crowd counts five. If you outdraw the Bandito, you win the shoot out, the reward money and the merit points.

After the duel, upon entering and exiting the Morea Bar, the Bandito can be found standing to the right of the building, next to the barrels and trash cans. Speaking to the Bandito with Shu prompts him to ask if you'd like a rematch. Though you can duel as many times as you'd like, keep in mind that only the initial match counts towards completing the job successfully.

Your first stop on this job is the Señor Generale's office on the second floor of his home. After telling you about the stolen items, the Generale mentions the possibility that a thief may be hiding somewhere within the house. To look for clues, head outside so you can talk to the townsfolk—maybe someone has seen something. The woman in front of the Morea Shop tells you of a suspicious looking man at the Hunters' Guild, so take a stroll over there. When you don't see the man in the main area, go behind the counter (to do this, walk to the left of the wanted posters) and inspect the bookcase in the corner. From the book you're able to browse through, you learn that the Señor Generale's house has several areas hidden throughout it, and that the lights are there for more than just lighting—but for what exactly you don't know, as the revealing page is missing. When you're finished reading, pass through the back room on your way to the Guild's basement storage area. Here you'll find a man who fills you in on the fact that there's a rooftop loft atop the Generale's house. Talk to this man a second time to get him to confirm what the book already mentioned regarding the lights. Next, return to the Señor Generale's house and turn on seven of the nine lights you can access, the last one of which must be the light at the end of the second floor balcony, to trigger a hidden staircase to lower. Upstairs on the roof you'll find a boy who claims that he was just playing with the missing object in question, and that he'll return it to the Generale. This job will be deemed a success as soon as you report your findings to Señor Generale.

2 WEALTH: 4000 G

4 TIME FRAME: Morea Guild—After you've successfully completed the job "Find the Missing Burro".

5 DESCRIPTION:

This fowl assignment appears at the Morea Guild once you've successfully completed the job "Find the Missing Burro". To begin this job, make your way to the Morea Bar and talk to the man at the table to the right. At first he only tells you that the feathers of the Amigue Roc are quite valuable—but, if you speak to him a second time, he realizes you're a Hunter from the Guild and lets you know that the Amigue Roc can sometimes be found at Madeta Hill. With this new information, leave Morea for Madeta Hill so that you may retrieve five Amigue Roc feathers for this client. If you're lucky, once on the battlefield at Madeta Hill, you may see that one of your foes is the bird you need to get the feathers of—an Amigue Roc. Upon the Roc's defeat (if it appeared) you will acquire a single feather...so in order to gather the five feathers the client wants, you'll need to fight a minimum of five separate encounters at Madeta Hill. Keep in mind that you can return to Morea for supplies or a night's rest at the Inn between battles if need be, or that you can single out the Amigue Roc to get its feather, then leave the battlefield without defeating the standard enemies (or even leave a battlefield without fighting if it does not contain an Amigue Roc). Once you've accumulated five Amigue Roc feathers, return to the Morea Bar and deliver them to the client whom you spoke with earlier at the right-hand table. With that accomplished, you may then collect your reward at the Morea Hunters' Guild for a job well done.

GOD TOWER

Tosh only WISHES he'd hit Dickbeck that hard...

to spit out the facts, he goes on to explain that these "twitches" he's having are merely a side-effect caused by the energy field surrounding the tower. It's this energy field which keeps the God Tower from breaking apart from its own weight.

No sooner have you entered the God Tower than Gomez and Antonio emerge from the bushes nearby. You were being followed—and the reason wasn't to make sure you were safe. No, these two rat-bastards plan on letting you take the heat from the creatures within the God Tower while they steal everything they can get their thievin' little hands on.

PICK A PAD, ANY PAD

Check1 ➔

After forming your battle party, step onto either of the two pulsating circular teleporter plates at the rear of the entry way to be brought to the second floor of the tower. From there, battling as necessary, make your way around Map 2 in a clockwise fashion by stepping onto the purple triangular teleporter plates.

With limited choices comes limited responsibility.

Are notices no one's in the room and lets one fly, then quickly departs.

Check2 ➔

When you reach the room at the far left, you'll find another circular plate like the ones you found in the entry way. Use it. For those of you who haven't figured it out yet, the circular teleporter plates carry you up (gold in color) or down (blue in color) a floor within the God Tower, while the triangular ones (purple in color) move you through the rooms within each level. Also, unlike most other dungeons where you can use the stairs to leave a floor during a battle if it gets too heated, once one of the triangular teleporter plates has been used to enter a room, all others like it will remain inactive until the room has been cleared. Sucks, eh? Those game designers must have studied under the Marquis de Sade!

TELEPORTER TIPS

Beam me up, Chongara.

Once you've overcome your shock and fear at the task before you, you're probably on the third floor (Map 3). Make your way to the gold teleporter by stepping onto the triangular one to the east (F). Take the west teleporter if you feel like fighting some baddies.

Check3 ➔ YOU CAN NEVER HAVE TOO MUCH HELP!

Continue on through the God Tower using the teleporters until you reach the fifth floor (Map 5). Using your amazing power to see through walls and floors, you'll notice good ol' Gomez and Antonio in a room to the southwest. In an attempt to progress, they trigger a floor panel. Unfortunately for you, the panel opens a trapdoor beneath your feet. It's not so bad though...you only fall one floor, and now you're aware of another possible danger within the tower. Well, actually it was just for comic relief, you can't really fall through trapdoors on your own. The game designers are just messin' with you again.

As you're about to step onto either of the teleporters in the first room of the sixth floor, the scene cuts to show the terrible twosome of Gomez and Antonio pulling a wall switch. Once again, this does not bode well for your party, as you are then teleported back down to the second floor. Upon returning to the floor from which you were just evicted (Map 6), a group of androids will have taken the place of the greedy brothers.

Thank goodness they brought their pointy shoes! The God Tower has roaches! Ewww...

Dickbeek fills you in on your enemies once you're out of harm's way—after he stops wiggling out. The Machine Soldiers were created along with Grolgalde in the Ancient Era. Their purpose—to kill your ancestors, the Seven Braves. Someone must have reactivated them... just who that someone was shouldn't be that difficult to figure out. One question remains unanswered—what of Grolgalde? Was he...or it...reactivated, too? Continue on to the seventh floor when you've heard all that Dickbeek has to say.

Check4 ➔ YOU SPIN MIE RIGHT ROUND...

Here you'll need to cross a section of floor composed of rotating tiles. The way this obstacle works is that you're allowed to step on only the tiles that are rotated to a degree where they're lying flat—then upon stepping on any of these tiles, all those around it will spin, stopping opposite to how they began. If at any point while you're making your way across the room, you happen to get stuck, bring up the in-game menu by pressing the  button and choose Restart. This will return you to the top of the room as well as reset the tiles to their original positions. Generally speaking, look at the tiles surrounding where you're going to step. Try to step on tiles surrounded by CLOSED tiles, because as soon as you make your move, the closed tiles will be open. Looking one or two steps ahead makes this puzzle pretty simple. But, if you need a hand figuring out a pattern to get your party across this tricky section of the floor, the following directions are one of many possible solutions:

YOU SPIN ME RIGHT ROUND... (CONTINUED)

On the opposite side of the room you find not only the teleporter to the next floor, but also a Guardian's Force Fountain.

Check 5 ➡

ANTONIO AND GOMEZ...

The eighth floor (Map 8) reveals a row of six triangular teleporters, five of which lead to a confrontation.

The second from the left (O), brings you to the golden teleporter and, in turn, the ninth floor. As you approach the central area on the ninth floor, the scene once again cuts to Gomez and Antonio on a floor somewhere above you. Through no fault of their own, these two idiots narrowly escape certain death at the mechanical hands of the Machine Soldiers. By accidentally bumping into a wall switch, Antonio lowers the gate to the room they're in, thus keeping the riff-raff at bay...but what may save them has the reverse effect on your party. While the gate lowers two floors above, each of the ones on the floor you're currently on raise, and those gates were all that were separating you from more than a few of the SA series Machine Soldiers. Poop.

Exchanges like these make it seem like these two have taken more than a few hits to the head in their time.

Check 6 ➡

CHOOSE OR LOSE

Up on the tenth floor (Map 10) you have three possible choices as far as teleporters go.

Here's a hint: unless you want to leave the God Tower in a hurry, don't walk onto the triangular pad. Here's another hint, if you take the gold circular one nearest where you arrived, you'll soon face Gomez and Antonio's worst nightmare.

So if you take our hints into account that leaves but one teleporter—the circular pad to the northeast (W). Use it, and the following one to reach the twelfth floor (and another Guardian's Force Fountain).

This tower just goes on and on and on...

Check 7 ➡

The switch to the west on the northern wall of the twelfth floor (Map 12) will turn the teleporter you just arrived via from blue to gold, thus allowing you to reach the thirteenth floor. Hopefully you're not too superstitious, because that's where you'll be fighting. If you feel that your weapons are in need of a little workout, trip the switch to the east on the northern wall to call forth another squad of Machine Soldiers.

Do SA-100's dream of electric Ares?

You totally know you want to. Go ahead, flip it! Flip it real good.

Check 8 ➡

ROCK 'EM SOCK 'EM ROBOTS

No sooner do you appear atop the God Tower than you're met by an android that Diekbeck knows all too well—Grolgalde. There's no love lost between these two, but when Grolgalde threatens to make up for his past mistake of not stopping the previous Seven Braves by killing the current Seven Braves—it's time to knock some blocks off!

At the start of the battle, Grolgalde increases the gravity in the room, so much so that you cannot move. With this accomplished, the android and his cohorts begin pummeling your party—claiming victory all the while. Little does Grolgalde know that the boasts may be somewhat premature...for in a room nearby on this very floor, Gomez and Antonio are eyeing the jewel that powers the device, which controls both the gravity and energy fields surrounding the God Tower. YOINK!!! After doing what they do best (otherwise known as "stealing"), the device shuts down, returning the gravity to normal, thus allowing you to open up a fresh can of anti-gravity whup-ass in the next room.

As you ponder the reason Grolgalde and others like him act the way they do, the God Tower begins to tremble. In shutting down the gravity device, Gomez and Antonio have also disabled the energy field surrounding the God Tower... and without that, it's bye-bye tower!

I think Grolgalde's calling you FAT!

Antonio has mistaken the gravity machine for some kind of far-out organismatron. Oops!

Well, this is different! Upon entering the Sealed Ruins in Balbalard (if you've completely searched the Sealed Ruins in Amigue prior to coming here, that is) you run smack dab into a dead end. A large terminal with three switches on it is all you see. Turning each switch on opens a corresponding passage... the first switch opens a passage to the north, the second opens one to the east and the last opens... any guesses? Yup, a passage to the west. It won't take long before you're familiar with these terminals, as you'll need to use quite a few of them if you expect to trek deeper into these ruins. Be forewarned...once you enter a room containing enemies, the passage will shut behind you—and it won't open until they're all toast! Also, the foes you face have the ability to cast Silence, and should that happen to those who you're using to heal, things could get rather ugly. When you reach Ruins B2, you'll find six treasure chests—all empty. However, if you inspect them a second time, you'll notice a switch beneath each one. All but one of these switches will summon a group of monsters into the room when flipped. The switch you're looking for is on the bottom-left treasure chest. This switch will turn each chest into a staircase leading to one of several sections of the floor below. A Guardian's Force Fountain will appear above the staircases at this point as well. One final note—at the far end of Ruins B5 West, you'll run into a terminal which stops the repeating pattern from occurring when you try heading down the stairs on Ruins B3 East, thus allowing you to actually reach Ruins B4 East.

The Arch Mage Guadiras can be found hiding amongst the normal scourge in the room to the north of the 1st terminal on the Ruins B1 level of the Balbalard Sealed Ruins. A small battlefield, numerous enemies, and a door which won't open once it shuts behind you can make this a tricky encounter, especially if you don't have a party member familiar with the ways of healing. If you want to collect the bounty on this foe, but you haven't yet passed Rata's test, you'll either need to travel to a Hunters' Guild other than the one in Muhad, or advance the game's plot to a point where the Dispatcher of said Guild will allow you to do business there.

Upon arriving, you'll need to select one member of your party with which you wish to sift through the hot sand for the lost jewelry. To look for the article of jewelry, first select a spot where you believe the ring to be, then while facing that spot, press the "X" Button to search. Finding the lost ring can be made easier by standing in the center of the area and keeping your eyes peeled for a small glint of sunlight which will periodically reflect off the object you seek. If you can't spot the ring shimmering in the sunlight, try searching five paces east of the dinosaur skeleton's neck (directly to the right of the small pile of bones). Keep in mind that you must "face" the spot you wish to search, and not stand directly on it. After uncovering the ring, a pair of Barbarians arrive. Apparently attracted by the gleaming precious metal, they try telling you that the ring belongs to them, and that they must have dropped it. When that approach fails they try a more barbaric method. (What'd you expect? They're Barbarians!) Return to the Muhad Hunters' Guild to collect your reward once you've bested the wannabe thieves.

4 TIME FRAME: Muhad Guild—After passing Rata's test.

5 DESCRIPTION:

Our client has lost her mother. Find the lost girl's mother and reunite her with her daughter.

Like the job "Find the Ring", the contract for this assignment shows up in the Muhad Guild once you've performed the test involving the Rayburn for Rata. Mia, the little girl whose mother you're trying to locate, is staying at the Muhad Inn. Head over to her room to dig up some clues on where you can start your search. From Mia you learn that her mother's name is Milia, and that she last saw her in Prodias... good thing you've got an airship at your disposal. Take the Silver Noah to East Aldia and from there return to Prodias—the city Ele now calls home. The woman in front of Ele's apartment building mentions that Zena, the new tenant who moved into the empty apartment, may know more. Unfortunately that "more" doesn't come in the form of good news. Upon talking to Zena, who is in the far right apartment of Ele's building, you're told that Milia perished in an accident. She then gives you Milia's ribbon. When you question her about Milia's daughter, you receive some very curious information—that Milia was only nine years old when the accident occurred! Thinking you're playing a cruel game, Zena sends you away. At this point, return to the Muhad Inn in Balbalard to talk to Mia. After you confront Mia with the truth, she throws a fit, in the process summoning several Will 'o Wisps.

After defeating the products of Mia's bad temper, Lieza drops the ribbon that was given to you by Zena. As it floats across the room, the spirit of the dead child slowly materializes beneath it. Seeing this, Mia calls out to the spirit—then reverts back to her true form, that of a child's doll. The two then vanish. When you've calmed down, take a walk over to the Hunters' Guild to collect your reward. It may not have had the ending you expected, but you still completed the job successfully.

REVENGE—ONLY BRINGS PAIN

Rata expounds the benefits of Smiletology, but his brother will have none of it.

In the desert, the best you can hope for is to serve the revenge luke-warm. Cold is out of the question.

On the outskirts of town, Rata tells you that the one who controls the sandstorms is none other than the current Chief of the Saryu Tribe. According to Rata, the Saryu Tribe migrated here from Zariban, but the reasons why must remain a mystery for now. He then leads you out of Muhad to the Saryu Tribe Camp, which is located to the east of the Kanara Desert.

When you reach the Saryu Tribe Camp, Rata enters the Chief's tent. You soon learn that the Chief is none other than his brother. Though some friction between the two is hinted at, once again you'll have to wait to find out why, as the discussion stops when you're ushered into the Chief's tent by Rata. What's this? Some bad blood between the Zariban and the Saryu? Apparently that friction you overheard moments ago has something to do with the Saryu having been done wrong by the Zariban, and Chief Nam thinks you've been sent to sway his mind on the matter. Rata wants to leave the past behind, while his brother, Nam, dwells on nothing but the day that the tribe will exact its revenge. This terrible wrong that the Chief is so stuck on has to do with the destruction of their village and most of their tribe by General Kasadoll and the Zariban military. Oops.

Rata can't go with you on this mission though, for if it doesn't go as planned, the King would surely know that the Saryu Tribe had crossed him—and that would put his mother, and the rest of the Saryu, at risk.

Tukae Cave to the south is where Rata's mother is being held, so that should be your next destination. If you need to rest before taking on this latest challenge, talk to Rata and he'll set you up with a couple of sleeping mats and a nice soft pile of sand.

Once out on the Balbalar World Map you'll notice that the Saryu Tribe Camp has now become an accessible location. At this point leave the Aldia Bridge to begin your hunt for the winged serpent. Begin your search by sailing the Silver Noah to the far away land of Balbalard. It's here in the northwest chamber off the northwest tunnels deep within the Tukae Cave (Map 7, Pg. 455) that you'll find Elvie, as well as your old friend Piers Beronica. Piers tells you that he found the dragon injured on a beach, and took him into the cave to rest. When Lieza uses her Beasttalker ability to talk with Elvie, the dragon tells her to let Ash know that he'll return to him in East Aldia as soon as his wounds have healed enough to let him make the journey. PYRAMID SCHEMIE

...high-ranking military official's drunken, diseased, hairy-pitted, stinking concubine. Kasadoll is all those things and so much more.

After Ele convinces Nam that blindly rushing into such an obvious trap would only serve to get him killed, General Kasadoll gloats that the Fire Golem defeated at the Water Shrine (as seen in Arc the Lad), which you thought to be him all this time, was actually nothing more than a Chimera clone. He then goes on to say that he plans to declare an all-out war against Balbalard and Zariban—the resulting fear, pain and suffering enabling him to gather more dark energy for the Martyr Plan in the process. Hearing this, Nam finally collapses from the shame of knowing he had been tricked into aiding those who have done him the most harm.

Of course Ele made this observation without the benefit of watching any James Bond movies, making this call all the more impressive.

After defeating the Golems, Arc tells Nam that the Saryu have relocated to the forest east of the Pyramid, and that he should return to them. Your party then enters the Pyramid to track down General Kasadoll.

Over at the Pyramid, Nam breaks the seal which was keeping the sandstorms blowing and all onlookers out. This draws the attention of General Kasadoll, who emerges from the shadows at the entrance to the Pyramid. What the General has to say makes Nam realize that he's been taken for a fool...causing the pain and anger to intensify a thousand-fold. When Kasadoll reveals the horrible truth that he personally was the one who did "the Johnny Appleseed deed" to Nam's mother, it infuriates the leader of the Saryu to no end. Just as he's about to lose control and rush up the stairs to take revenge on the General, your party makes its appearance.

EVENT CHECK!

As you're telling Kasadoll just where he can stick his plans, a massive Romalian Battleship rises from its construction bay within the Pyramid. Miffed at being upstaged by Arc, General Kasadoll retreats inside the Pyramid, but not before calling out a small army of Chimera clones to keep you company.

RIDDLE ME THIS...

Begin your journey through the first level by ignoring the stairs to the right, and passing through the doorway to the northeast. It's here where you'll receive your first question. What animal walks on 4 legs in the morning, 2 legs at noon, and 3 in the evening? This first riddle pertains to age, and the three choices you're given for a possible answer include:

Human
Injured Hamadryad
Evolved Goat

Ahh, it's good to win!

The correct answer here is Human. Of course, 4 "legs" refers to a baby crawling, 2 legs is an adult walking, and 3 "legs" implies an elderly person with a cane. Choosing either of the other two selections results in your having to battle these foes.

SARCOPHAGI—EXCELLENT!

From this room, take the exit to the north, as the one to the east brings you to an area in the central room where your only options will be to ride the hieroglyphic floor tiles until you fall through the sand into the basement. If you choose to do this now, or at any other point while on the first level of the Pyramid, know that the basement is filled with Sarcophagi. Upon your arrival, these upright tombs will then open, and release a bevy of bandaged baddies. Just how many depends on the area of the basement you actually fall into.

Try to avoid spending time in this hellish basement!

Enemies (if you fall into the various sections of the basement):

ENEMIES:
MUM MUMMY x7	MUM MUMMY x7	MUM MUMMY x7	MUM MUMMY x6

NORTHWEST SECTION	SOUTHWEST SECTION	NORTHEAST SECTION	SOUTHEAST SECTION

Assuming you skipped the doorway to the east (or have returned to the room where you were first tested by the Sphinxes if you had an overwhelming urge to check out the basement), pass through the northern door. In this next room you'll need to reach the doorway at the northeast. To do this, you'll need to ride two of the flowing rivers of sand. The first one you should walk onto is the one flowing west to east across the center of the room, followed by the one against the eastern wall which flows from south to north and lets you off just below the door.

Swing low, sand chariot, comin' for ta carry me...oh, my god! It's heading to the basement again! Ahhh!

Check 3 →

ANOTHER POSER

In the following room, you're stopped by the Sphinxes for a second time. Their question this time is on geography... What is the name of the cave to the east? Your selections this go-round:

- Tukea Cave
- Tuke Cave
- Tukae Cave

The correct answer is Tukae Cave. If you picked a misspelled version, get ready for a fight.

From this room, exit through the doorway to the east to continue on your way to the stairs to level two (taking the southern doorway only leads to hieroglyphic floor tiles and more trips to the basement, so skip that unless you need to build your characters up).

Elc wasn't paying attention to the question. Never think about what's for dinner when being questioned by Sphinxes.

Check 4 ➡

WAS ANYONE PAYING ATTENTION?

In the next room, push the northeast and southeast blocks two spaces to the east in order to create a path so you can reach the doorway to the south. Once through it, your good friends the Sphinxes test your trivia knowledge once again by asking you, What does the "G" in your monetary system stand for? Possible answers include:

- Gold
- G-Craft
- Goz

Goz makes the world of Arc the Lad go round. Though you may have wanted to pick the obvious choice of Gold, it, along with G-Craft (the original Japanese team that helped create Arc the Lad Collection), would only show the Sphinxes that you aren't as smart as you look. Trivia bit: "Goz" was originally going to be "Gaud" in the US version because it was originally translated "God", and well, it seemed silly to have money called "God", whether or not it is the root of all evil. Fortunately, it was clearly "Goz" in Arc III, so the translation was fixed for the previous games so they all matched.

Once you've answered question three correctly, head through the doorway to the west to reach the central room. Then, of the four floor tiles you can reach, step onto the tile which will seemingly lead you directly west (the bottom left tile...if numbered from lowest to highest you'd want the second). This takes you directly to the stairs to level two.

Elc, bored with his physical prowess, decides to see how many blocks he can push with his nose.

Check 5 ➡

OPPOSITES DON'T ATTRACT

If you had instead taken the door to the south from the previous room, you would have ended up in another "Riddle of the Sphinx" room. The question this time being rather simple. Light and Dark are of opposite powers, and never work together. What is the opposite of Wind power? Hmmm... wonder which of these three it could be?

- Earth
- Water
- Fire

Common knowledge of the elements tells you that the answer is Earth. Any RPG fan who got this one wrong deserves far more shame than the battle against the Sphinxes that they get.

After impressing the Sphinxes with your intelligence, pass through the doorway to the southwest to find a Guardian's Force Fountain. Once you've topped off your Hit and Magic Points, head through the exit to the north to reach the central room. Here you'll need to walk onto the top-right floor tile to reach a hole further on in the conveyor belt of tiles. This hole drops you onto the raised area in the center of the basement, where you'll find two treasure chests. Taking any of the other tiles drops you into the normal sarcophagi-filled sections of the basement.

An Egyptian-inspired version of "the finger".

Okay, that kinda makes it worth the trip.

Check 6 ➡

Once you've pilfered the goods from the chests, hop off the raised area and return to the first level. From there, make your way back around to the stairs to level two.

From the first room on level two, head through the door to the south for yet another fascinating question by the Sphinxes...this one alphabetical in nature. Death Hound, Dolid, Dragon Fly. What comes next? Choose one of the following:

Dickbeck
Death Knight
Evil Eye

The only answer that could alphabetically come after Dragon Fly is Evil Eye. The other two get you the anal raspberry from the Sphinxes.

In the northwest corner of this room is the first of the two possible stairways to level three.

Check 7 ➡

Upon climbing the stairs, you're given the Restart is now active message. This is referring to the puzzle in the area just to the north, where your objective is to move the blocks in such a fashion that you're able to reach and turn on two switches. If you need help doing this, here is one of the many patterns you can push the blocks in...

Activate the second switch to extend the wall beside it to the left, which in turn causes the river of sand in the area above to be diverted from a north-to-south flow to one of west-to-east. If at any point you dead-ended yourself while pushing the blocks, go into the menu screen and choose Restart to be brought back to the point where you just arrived on level three. After successfully triggering the second switch, return via the stairs to the second level. If you choose to instead drop down the hole at the end of the sand flow beside the second switch, the loud thud you make when you land will wake up the Mummies sleeping in the golden sarcophagi.

Pushing blocks sure does build up a healthy thirst.

Check 8 ➡

IS THAT YOUR FINAL QUESTION?

From the room with the golden sarcophagi (which is to the west of the opening room on level two), take the southern door into a room half-filled with hieroglyphic tiles. Step onto the far left tile to ride to an empty one to the south-east, then from there, step onto the tile to the right to be brought to the eastern side of the room and your next Sphinxes question. Relating to the area each can access under its own power, you're asked: What animal is released from the ground? The creatures you can choose from are as follows:

Bird
Human
Snake

With its wings, a Bird can soar through the skies, which is something neither a human or snake can do. Choosing either of those land lubbers upsets the Sphinxes.

After answering correctly (or fighting your way past the Sphinxes), take this second set of stairs (at the top of the room) to level three, then from there continue north until you reach the stairs to level 4.

Sliding your way to an unknown fate.

Check 9 ➡

TIME TO FIGHT KASADOLL!

Kasadoll welcomes you once you arrive. What a guy! Beware his ability to cast Death. The two treasure chests in the entryway on this level can be reached by Gogen's level 3 Teleport spell. Teleporting onto any of the symbols along the floor next to the stairs will cause the closed section of wall to re-open, giving you more room to fight if you need it.

After defeating Kasadoll and his underlings, you quickly identify the statue at the top of the room to be a mind-control device. As Ele destroys it, he and his companions begin to realize what it is the Romalians have been trying to do with these evil devices. Like most of the Martyr Towers before this, once the mind-control device is no longer, the complex begins shaking off its foundation. You make it out the door just as the walls come tumblin' down.

MEMORY MALFUNCTION

A constant problem with Arc II, especially, was memory. For the English version, we were constantly tight or over on memory. In early builds of the game, after the Pyramid went down, you got a touching scene with Nam and Rata that went kinda like this:

"Nam and Rata are there to meet you once you've made it outside to safety. They thank you for what you've done... you've insured that the Saryu Tribe will live on. With all that's gone on recently, Nam sees the error in his ways and tries to pass the crown of Tribe Chief over to Rata—who, along with the rest of the Saryu Tribe, couldn't disagree more. They feel that learning from his mistakes will make Nam a stronger and wiser Chief, which is exactly what the Saryu needs at this crucial time, and with that, you take your leave."

Unfortunately, toward the end, this particular module got too big, and wouldn't build and run reliably, so the part was just not built into the final game. Instead of the tribal make-up session, you go straight back to the (empty) village. Game doesn't run out of memory and crash. Problem solved, right? Well, sorta.

The unfortunate side effect of this last-minute fix that wasn't caught before the game was approved was that when you return to camp, those dust devils blowing in the sand are actually where PEOPLE should be. And, what's funnier/more distressing is that you can TALK to the dust clouds and they actually talk like the people are there. Oops.

Leaving and re-entering tells you there was an "Error" (duh!) and repopulates the whole place. Everything's fine again, but this is one big "oops" that came from the U.S. localization!

A touching round of kiss and make-up with the tribe and Nam's brother that isn't in the final game.

An invisible woman on an impossible mission that's a side effect of a boo-boo in the final build.

VOICES

KEN INNES IV—PROGRAMMER, WORKING DESIGNS, INC.

What is it like localizing a game the size of Arc Collection?

Localizing the four games that make up Arc the Lad Collection presented a unique set of challenges from that of "normal" game development. The first task to accomplish is to get all of the data files and source code to build so that they match their equivalent files of the Japanese production discs. This was, as it tends to be with most localization projects, the most difficult part of the project. All four games were plagued by various degrees of multiple file versions, missing files, scarce documentation, memory problems, and bugs found in the original Japanese games.

Having different versions of the same file scattered in various directories made it difficult to determine which should be used. There would often be files in one directory that had a later timestamp from files in another directory, yet the older files would be the ones that match what was on the original production disc. Then we would see that the older directory would be missing files, while the new directory had them all, plus extras. And on top of that, we would end up with even another version of these files when we tried to build them ourselves. It was, at times, quite frustrating.

Files that were missing completely was another challenge to overcome. Requests for these files would be sent off as soon as we realized that they were needed, but in many cases the files were lost forever, or difficult to track down. In the end, it was usually quicker just to go to the original Japanese production disc and rip what we needed off of there. Although we had to use this technique on each of the four games, we relied on it most heavily for building Arc the Lad II. Obtaining missing files this way is one of the main reasons we had to get our build to match exactly what was on the Japanese game discs.

BUILDING A BETTER 'BOT

Are takes time out to play charades with Chongara...or, is it a normal conversation?

With your visit to the hot sands of Balbalar having reached its end, make your way to the Balbalar Skyport, where upon choosing to leave the country, you'll meet with Chongara in the Operations Room of the Silver Noah.

It comes as no surprise to you that your next destination is Seiryu—having spent some considerable time in Palencia Tower before you knew of the Martyr Plan, rescuing the people of Touvil as well as Poco and Diekbeck, it doesn't take you long to guess the exact location. The Palencia Tower now shifts from a matter of if you'll need to return there, to one of when. The answer to this question is "now", but if you'd like to find more Power Units to upgrade Diekbeck, change that to "very soon".

EVENT CHECK!

Zariban

If you decided to take the side trip to search for the Power Units, steer the Silver Noah towards Zariban once you have access to the World Map. It's here that you'll find the last of the seven Sealed Ruins, hiding place of both Power Unit 17 and 18.

THE SEALED RUINS

After you've ransacked the Sealed Ruins at Balbalar for all they're worth, the seal on the entrance to the ruins in Zariban will be lifted. These final ruins are located due west from the Zariban Skyport. Inside, you'll find that, like the Balbalar Ruins before, there are wall switches and floor panels (identified by the broken circular patterns in their center). You'll need to trigger these in order to open new passages so that you may progress. Some of these floor panels will perform different functions, such as restoring the Hit and Magic Points of your characters. As always, any areas cleared of enemies will remain as such throughout the duration of your visit to the ruins. Finally, a Guardian's Force Fountain is waiting for you on Ruins B4 should you need it.

When you're through rummaging through the ruins, return to the Zariban Skyport, and from there make your way to Seiryu to tackle the next Martyr Tower.

ALL IN THE FAMILY

SEIRYA

It's never too late to pull a rotting corpse from the ground, dust it off, and reanimate it.

While the Silver Noah enters Seirya's airspace, the scene shifts to Palencia Hill, where you witness the resurrection of Tosh's father, Monji, at the hands of one of Andel's Necromancers.

Upon landing at the Touvil Quarry, head to the Sabatigo Shrine to see Kukurū. After talking to her for the second time, she asks if you'd like to be teleported to Palencia. Make sure you're polite and say the magic word (please) when you agree to go.

Something must be wrong—your father is dead! No sooner do you step outside, than you see that the bartender spoke the truth. Your father, looking very much alive, is accosting a woman and her child for no apparent reason. When you try to put a stop to Monji's brutality, you only succeed in making it worse! What manner of beast has Monji become?! Your mind still reeling from witnessing his evil deeds—you never see the attack coming. A moment later you're face-down on the ground, bleeding, with the wind completely knocked out of you. As he walks away, Monji calls to you—When you are ready, we will battle at Palencia Tower. While it is both frightening and confusing to see a man who was once so focused on protecting the innocent to turn this dark, in his desire to test his skills against his own flesh and blood, Monji has unknowingly done something in your favor...he's given you a way into Palencia Tower—not only do you not have to sneak in, you've been invited!

Back aboard the Silver Noah, Tosh decides to go on ahead and face his father alone—even though he knows it to be a trap.

We've secretly switched Tosh's usual brand of tea with LSD. Let's see if he notices...

After the "what" question comes the more prudent "why" question. Let's watch what happens next!

"I see you shiver with anticipation."

Concern for Tosh's safety is expressed by all, but it's Arc who suggests another possible target to Andel's treachery—Touvil. Due to this possibility, Ele chooses to stay behind while the rest of your party follows after Tosh.

After Kukuru sends Tosh on his way, leave the Silver Noah and proceed to Sabatenco Shrine, so that you, too, may seek help in returning to Palencia. With your comrade in grave danger going it alone, Kukuru asks you to create a team of four, led by Arc, who will ally with Tosh when they've caught up to him at the tower. Meanwhile, many floors below on the entry level of the tower, Arc and the others arrive just in time to save Tosh, who's somehow managed to get himself surrounded and hopelessly outnumbered by Andel's forces.

Humbled by his inability to fend off the attackers himself, Tosh apologizes for his stubbornness. After this moment of bonding between friends, pass through the opening at the northern end of the level and ride the elevator to the Thirtieth floor. Shortly after stepping out of the elevator into the hall, you're ambushed once again.

When you're through playing with your new friends, head into the room to the east, and from there make your way up the stairs to the Thirty-First floor.

TOSH MOSH

"It's okay. You're good, enough, smart enough, beefy enough, and doggone it, people like you."

Check 2 ➡ UP AND DOWN, BACK AND FORTH

The next set of stairs can be found out in the hall. Once you've climbed them, trigger the switch on the wall across from where you emerged. Turning this switch on will open a locked door on another section of FLOOR 32 (HALL). Since partitions block you from getting to the door from this section of the tower, you'll need to return to the Thirtieth floor. From there, restart your journey upwards by climbing the stairs you previously skipped at the top of the hall, then proceed up the staircases you come to along the western side of the tower until you reach the door you unlocked via the switch.

Go ahead...no one's looking.

Check 3 ➡

ACCESS: ELEVATOR

After passing through the now-open door on the Thirty-Second floor, turn on the switch on the device along the northern wall. Activating this switch will give the elevator access to the Thirty-Third floor. Back down you go to the Thirtieth floor, where you'll need to board the elevator and ride to the Thirty-Third floor. A Guardian's Force Fountain awaits once you disembark the elevator in this new section of Palencia Tower.

With your characters now refreshed by way of the fountain (if you wisely used it, that is), take the escalator at the eastern side of the hall to the Thirty-Fourth floor.

"Say, Tosh, why don't we push all the buttons and really screw this elevator up?"

Check4 ➡

After clearing the room on FLOOR 34 (HALL), trigger the switch on the wall at the southwest side of the room. Doing this will open a locked door on the same floor, but on the west wing of the tower. Ignore the room to the south for now and make your way back down the escalator to the Thirty-Third floor (flip the switch next to the escalator to reverse its direction of travel)—then from there, head up the escalator at the western side of the hall to find the door you just unlocked.

One belt closer to doom.

Check5 ➡

At the back of the room to the north, after passing through the door, you'll find a staircase. Take these stairs to the Thirty-Fifth floor, then head south to the hall on said floor.

Master the stairs.

What lies ahead? Go ahead, find out. We'll wait.

Check6 ➡

Scattered throughout the hall on the Thirty-Fifth floor are seven teleport pads. Stepping onto any of them after the battle will instantly warp you to the staircase in the walled off section to the south (if you use them during the battle, you'll be warped between them at random). Disregard these for now, as the stairs lead to an escalator on the floor above which is presently shut down. Instead, head through the door to the west, and trigger the switch you find on the wall to open the door which connects the other two rooms on this the Thirty-Fifth floor's west wing. With that accomplished, you can head to FLOOR 34 (SOUTH ROOM). From there, step onto the teleport pad at the bottom of the room to be whisked to the west wing of the same floor. Next, take the stairs at the opposite end of the room up to the the Thirty-Fifth floor, and pass through the door you recently opened, continuing upwards to the Thirty-Sixth floor via the staircase in the lower room.

Andel is one crazy architect...

Check 7 ➔

The switch on the wall of the West Room of the Thirty-Sixth floor activates the escalator in the hall of the same floor. So, after turning the switch on, make your way back to the hall on the Thirty-Fifth floor, and then step onto any of the seven teleport pads to reach the walled off area at the bottom. From there, you're just a nearby staircase away from the escalator to floor Thirty-Seven.

BWOOP!

Surprising that Arc hasn't suffered from warp sickness yet. He's doing a lot of it lately...

Check 8 ➔

On FLOOR 37 (HALL), you'll find another elevator—unfortunately, it's currently out of commission. If you feel the need to return to a lower floor, there are a series of escalators starting in the East Room, which lead you to the Thirty-Fifth floor. Otherwise, climb the stairs at the lower portion of the hall and flip the switch at the top of the hall on floor Thirty-Eight. This switch will restore the power to the elevator downstairs, which you can then use to reach the Ninety-Ninth floor.

If you don't know what to do here by now, you never will.

Unfortunately, Arc doesn't have the penthouse key.

Little does he know that Ele and his squad are lying in wait for him to make just such a move.

The first step in Anadel's evil ploy is to initiate the Chimera control program—the effect of which turns most of the citizens of Touvil into monsters. As one of the unaffected villagers rushes to the cockpit of the Silver Noah to inform you that the Chimera beasts are on their way to the Sabatico Shrine, Ele realizes the obvious a little too late—that more went on with the townsfolk before you rescued them from Palencia Tower than he guessed! From her bed in the Sabatico Shrine, Polta calls out in her sleep for Yoshua. As Arc enters the main chamber of the shrine, he sees that everyone has gathered to discuss what must be done to stop Andel once and for all. Seeing the hurt in Arc, Kuku suggests that he get some rest. Perhaps some time alone will help calm his mind to the harrowing loss of his father, who like Tosh's before, returned to his life just to be snatched away as quickly as he arrived.

Unable to sleep, Arc wanders out of the shrine towards Touvil Quarry. As he is about to enter the Silver Noah, Kuku catches up to him. The pain of not being able to save his father is weighing heavily on Arc, causing his emotions to run wild, as well as massive self-doubt. If only he could control them as Tosh does... but then, he was brought up differently.

In an attempt to comfort him, Kuku reminds Arc that she and the others are, and will be, behind him every step of the way. He must continue on... if not for himself, or his friends, then to bring his father's final wish to fruition... that Arc fulfill Yoshua's destiny and finish what both he and the original Seven Braves began so many years ago! That does it. It's those words that make Arc realize that he cannot stop now, not when they're all so close to winning.

Unsurprisingly, it doesn't work! The darkness is far too strong, and she is knocked to the ground! It'll take the help of a power the likes of which the Ark can bestow in order to prevent the seal from breaking. Since the Ark is now in Adel's possession, Gogen suggests Kuku's Mirror...if the Mirror were somehow to be energized with the power of the five Guardians, it may be enough to revitalize the seal. Alas, the sad reality is that the Mirror was shattered when Kuku fell. However, there may be another way...it's then that Arc pulls the charm his father gave him from his pocket, Yoshua's Memento enabled Arc's father to travel through time, so it should allow you to do the same. It's decided someone will return to visit the Kuku of the past and collect the power of the five Guardians within her Mirror. Due to the dangers that you'll face in attempting this, you're prompted to save your game at this point.

When you've returned to the point in time just prior to the end of the first Arc the Lad, seek out Kuku at the edge of the cliffs at Touvil Quarry. At first she doesn't know what to think when you mention you're from the future, and that the Dark Seal has almost been breached. Is Kikuri coming onto the Fire Guardian? Seems like a strange kinda high-speak come-hither...

Greyshinne, Alatos, Nidel, and Zariban... those are the lands where the four remaining Guardians dwell. Since Kikuri's magic isn't strong enough to teleport you intercontinentally, you'll need the aid of an airship—but how to get one? Hmmm...

Back out on the Sciryan World Map, make your way to the Seirya Skyport.

It's deja vu all over again as Kikuri, her identity concealed beneath an all-encompassing coat, sneaks you, hidden inside a large crate, past the patrolling guards and into the storage hold of a Romalian Battleship destined for Greyshinne.

Eleven herbs and spices later and you're on your way north to the Bio Research Lab, where you'll find the Fire Guardian resting in the containment unit at the back of the room.

Sensing the urgency of the situation, the Fire Guardian asks what has become of the Ark (the box, not the lad). You tell him of its theft by Aniel, and that due to this you'll need to combine HIS powers, along with those of the other four Guardians, within Kikuri's Mirror. Hopefully then, you will have the strength to replenish the seal holding the Dark One. The Fire Guardian informs you that doing such a thing will come at a very high price for Kikuri. The young member of the Sacred White Clan must make a choice—would she dedicate herself for as long as it takes, once the Mirror has been invoked, to keep the seal intact? If that is her destiny, then so be it—a cause as important as the salvation of the entire world is certainly worth giving up one person's freedom for! Kikuri accepts her fate—to stay behind at the shrine once the Mirror has collected the power of all five Guardians, while the others then attempt to accomplish what needs to be done. With that, it's one down, four to go in the “visit the Guardians and get their power” department. On your way out, the Fire Guardian reminds you that the Mirror will only be a temporary fix—you'll need the Ark itself to seal the Dark One away permanently.

To learn more about this matter, and whether or not there is a way to break the seal, proceed to the Amaidar Temple to speak with the rest of the monks: Amidst your discussions with those in charge, you come to find that the reason for the seal is that intruders, namely the ghosts of the monks who were killed within the walls of this place of worship during the time of the evil Archmonk, have come back seeking revenge.

After the battle, down in the Archmonk's Chamber, you discover that the place of origin for these spirits is the very area you need to visit—Amaidar Mountain! A deal is soon struck...you'll attempt to quell the souls of those turned evil by Andel, if the monks break the seal.

Leave the temple and climb the long stairs to the top of the mountain. With the seal broken, you're able to enter the altar grounds. You don't get far before you're surrounded by those who would bring death upon anyone who they think betrayed them. It falls on deaf ears when you try to explain to the spirits that it was not their brethren who conspired to do them ill. Their minds are made up—anything containing the spark of life is now their enemy.

SECOND BATTLE

Unfortunately, since the ghosts of the Amaidar Monks would not listen to reason, you are left with no choice but to destroy them. When you approach the altar, Kuku senses something... evil. At this point, the being commanding the spirits of the deceased monks shows itself—and it's not alone! This new foe claims he was the one sent to destroy Amaidar, and that the evil Archmonk was merely an underling of his, one of considerably less power! It's now time to put up or shut up!

STORYCHECK

"And yet, we still like to give them powers that they can use to screw things up royally..."

On your way down the mountain, you stop to relate recent events to the monks of the Amaidar Temple. Once you've finished there, you're free to leave the country. Before heading back to the Skyport, if the desire strikes to raise your or Kuku's level, know that along with the Greyshinne Sealed Ruins (which at this point do not contain any treasures; Diekbeck's Power Units are embedded in the walls of the proper floors within the Ruins, but you cannot wrench them free), the usual battlefields riddle the countryside.

When you're ready, enter the Greyshinne Skyport and jump on an airship heading for Nidel.

IT'S THE EARTH GUARDIAN

Once the Death Priest has been done away with, and the restless souls of the remaining monks have been put at ease, the Earth Guardian appears. For your help in showing the monks the error of their ways, he is most grateful. NIEDEL

It only gets stranger as it becomes obvious that EVERYONE in the town is a statue!

Head south from the Niedel Skyport to Misro (not exactly a hard decision to make since there's nowhere else to go). Once inside this quaint little town, you find that its inhabitants have all been turned to stone. You must now do your best to return them to flesh and blood. The Restart option (located on the Menu screen) will now become available to you, in case you accidentally push any of the citizens into a spot which you wish you hadn't.

While looking for a way to help the people of Misro, a locked chest can be found in front of the houses at the northeast corner of town. Inscribed on the chest is a clue which mentions something about "people circling the Arena". It seems that the chest will open only if you push eight of the ten stone citizens into specific positions around the Arena. The positions you must place them in are just in front of all but two of the numerous pillars supporting the Arena. Don't forget to push each of them against their proper pillar, or they won't "click" into place! In front of each pillar is a clue about which statue needs to go there.

Search in front of each pillar to read the clues about who goes where.

All that work for a Mask?

After what you went through with the locked chest, opening the next chest, found between the shop and the house to the northwest, should be a piece of cake. To do so, begin by pushing the solidified townsfolk in such a way that you can reach the house to the northwest, then enter it. Upon coming back out of the house, the statues will have reset to their original positions, so all you need to do is push the old man to the east so he ends up against the little girl, thus allowing you passage to the chest.

(Statues will have reset here.)

A little girl is crying inside the first house of the two at the northeast corner of town. She says that a monster hiding in the Arena has turned everyone to stone. In order to stop her tears, you allow her to come along while you search the Arena.

In Gazalla, from the man in front of the tent to the south of the Inn, you learn that an old magician controls the Golem. Though the magician is staying just across the way at the Inn, it will take more than simply asking him to get what you want—or so you're told.

Inside the room to the far right at the Inn you'll find a bedridden old man. This is the magician who controls the Golem. Unfortunately, he isn't exactly receptive to your request of moving his pet so you can get by. Maybe it's because he's hurt, or perhaps he is as stubborn as the merchant outside told you... either way, your task is now to find a way to sway his not-so-feeble mind to your way of thinking.

Over at the Gazalla Bar, a patron tells you that when the old man's wife passed, he seemed to give up all hope. It wasn't long after that he sustained his life-threatening injury. To this, another mentions that if you'd like to know more about the old man's condition, you should talk to the doctor in the house to the southeast.

When you pay the doctor a visit, he gives you some medicine to bring to the old man. Upon bringing it to him at the Inn, you come to find that his wife is buried at the Azenda Highland. That is why he wishes to keep the Golem there—so no one can disturb her final resting place. He strikes a deal with you...if you can retrieve the necklace which was stolen from his wife just before she passed, the Golem shall be moved. The best clue towards reaching your goal can be had by talking to the man standing just outside the old man's room, who directs you towards the shop when you ask where one might find "stolen goods". Leave the Inn to begin your search for the necklace.

Make your way to the Gazalla Shop and speak to the man with the green napsack dressed in tattered clothing near the shelves at the top-left. After dropping some obvious hints that you're in the "market" for a necklace, the man finally catches on. He then shows you the only necklace he has on him—luckily, as you can tell by the name etched into the beads, it's the one you're looking for! The price is a little too high, though. Through Kukuru's superior skills, you're able to knock the price down exactly zero Goz—okay, so her haggling skills need a little work. After choosing to Buy the necklace from the wandering merchant (and secretly resolving to teach Kukuru to haggle), return to the old man at the Inn so you can give him the jewelry.

After putting the old man to rest next to his wife, with the Golem standing guard next to the grave to forever watch over the sanctity of those entombed, Kukuru places the necklace on the site.

At the nearby cliff's edge, the Light Guardian appears. As was the case with the Wind Guardian before, it takes but a second to convince the Light Guardian to charge Kukuru's Mirror with his powers. With a warning that if the Dark One is revived, the whole of humanity will come to an end, you take your leave.

Four down, one to go! If you crave the excitement of further bloodshed, both the Sealed and Forbidden Ruins await. If not, return to the Alatos Skyport so you can depart for the final stop on your whirlwind tour of the lands of the five Guardians—Zariban.

SECRET CHECK

You should leave it a sacred place, but will you?

Yes, it's giving you the opportunity to do what you think it is! If you choose Dig it up, Kuku will dig up the necklace you buried with the old fart's sweet wife. Choose to do this and the Engraved Necklace will be added to your inventory. After the fact, and maybe a little too late, Kuku mentions that she may have crossed the line into bad taste. Uh, yeah.

This necklace is one of the few cursed items in the whole game—it should be after what you've done to get it! Whoever tries to equip this item will feel really dirty and unwholesome for some time to come.

NO REST FOR THE WICKED

After meeting with the Light Guardian, Kuku and her companion will be positioned just outside of Azenda Highland. To take a really sick detour in the story, you can re-enter Azenda Highland and traipse back to the grave you just patted down with the old magician, and his wife's precious necklace and do something clearly in bad taste.

If you choose to enter the Azenda Highland again, you'll have to fight your way past Super Hemo-jis and Sword Eaters. Once this is done, exit this area and go to the grave. Now, for the really creepy part, walk up to the grave and press the search button. You'll be given the following options: Dig it up and Leave it.

Think? No, you definitely crossed a line here. Why not just urinate on the grave while you're at it?

VOTES X

IKEN INNES IV—PROGRAMMER, WORKING DESIGNS, INC.

What else kept you busy during Arc's localization?

While sorting out all the files, we would send out any documentation files we found to be translated, but none were that helpful. There was never any file that gave an entire overview of the build process or project structure. For the comments found in the source code, we would write a script to extract them, translate them using a program called Atlas, and then write another script to put them back. The translations were nowhere near as good as they would have been with a human translation, but they got the job done.

Once each game was up and running, altering them to run in English was a simple process. The next major hurdle was reducing the amount of memory the game currently required, so that we could write full-length sentences and add new features. Many techniques were used to reduce memory, including text compression, source code optimization, and reducing statically defined buffer sizes. After getting back as much memory as we could, we were able to add a lot of nice changes, such as analog support, DUALSHOCK® support, and 24-bit (as opposed to 16-bit) full motion video playback.

By this point in each of the games, there weren't too many problems. Bugs would be introduced by changes that were made, but they were taken care of fairly easily. We did occasionally encounter bugs that also happened on the original Japanese discs, however, and those took a lot of time and effort to track down and correct. The worst bug we had was a lockup that only occurred on a certain model of PlayStation. That took several weeks and a lot of headaches before we got it ironed out, since it wouldn't happen on the development system where we could take a snapshot of what was happening inside the machine. We had to burn a CD every time we wanted to test another theory as to how to fix it. Really, really annoying, but we got it fixed in the end.

It's decided that Arc will lead the team heading to the North Tower, while Elc takes the reins and leads the team covering the tower to the south. At this point, you're asked to choose the remaining four members of Arc's team, followed by the four who shall go with Elc. When you're through making your selections, Arc will ask Are you certain? Answer Yes if you're sure the teams you've chosen are appropriate. If you feel uncomfortable with any of the choices you made in selecting the teams, instead tell Arc "No", to be given the opportunity to select both teams over again. Once the teams are finalized, it's off to the Martyr Towers!

Out in the field, Arc and his band of merry men arrive at the North Tower. Shortly thereafter, Elc and the others hit the South Tower.

The towers can be a little tricky, so be careful. Passages and triggers can be found in unlikely places.

Maybe the fact that it's floating should be a tip-off that it does something special.

After overcoming a small obstacle, which demonstrates the theory, "for every action there is an equal, yet opposite, reaction", both teams are able to begin their advance through the Martyr Towers (when leaving either tower at this point, and attempting to join the two teams up, a prompt will appear that sends you to Kukuru at the Sabatigo Shrine... from there you'll be asked to create two new teams).

SOUTH TOWER

First, the South—Elc's squad has no choice but to proceed up the lone set of stairs at the rear. These lead to the second floor, where towards the center you'll find an area so slippery that as soon as you hit it, you begin sliding across it in whichever direction you were walking, until you reach a normal patch of floor or bump into something solid. To open the treasure chest on this floor you'll have to do a bit of skating between the various stalagmites and walls of the center area. Start by standing as far east as you can in the upper portion of the room (next to the two stalagmites), then walk south so you slide into a stalagmite, then east into the wall, north to hit another stalagmite, followed by west to slide into the chest.

After getting the Fang weapon from the chest, skate over to the southern portion of the room and take the stairs to the third floor. Upon finding your way blocked by one hell of an enormous chunk of translucent ice, return to the second floor and check out the gray ball floating towards the western side of the slippery patch (to reach it, position yourself against the northernmost edge of the western wall within the icy section, then slide east). Inspecting these large floating balls, which you will encounter every so often, causes the action to shift to that of your other team—so in this case, you now take control of Arc and his crew over in the North Tower.

After taking control of Arc, head this new team up the stairs to the second floor. When you can, flip the switch on the second floor to the on position to drop several ice stalactites beneath the large floating ball at the north-east. This makes it so that you can reach the ball once you have access to the area with the treasure chest. With that accomplished, take the stairs at the southeast to the third floor.

Turning the switch on the third floor on also drops several stalactites—this set falling just behind you into the large gap in the center of the area. The landing place for these stalactites just happens to be next to the northern ledge of the floor below, and due to this, a makeshift bridge is created which allows you to reach the previously inaccessible treasure chest area. Since a large block of ice prevents you from progressing past the third floor at this time, you may as well head back downstairs to see what's in the chest.

After getting the item from the chest on the second floor, inspect the nearby floating ball to switch back to Elc's team.

This place is beautiful. Too bad it's a monument to Andel's greed and ambition...

The large ice block, which previously impeded Elc's progress on the third floor of the South Tower, vanishes once you rejoin them. Hmm...now that the ice has been dealt with, a new dilemma arises... which staircase to climb?

The bottom staircase ("D") against the western wall will take you to a section of the floor above where you can reach the treasure chest to the southwest. To do this, after you appear on the fourth floor and are automatically sent sliding to the east, walk south to slide into the southern wall, then west to hit a stalagmite, north to another stalagmite, then finally west to the area with the chest.

Once you've gotten the weapon from the chest, slide east to take the stairs back down, then climb the second set of stairs ("E") from the bottom along the western wall to an encounter in another section of the fourth floor.

After the battle, push the block of ice found at the head of the passage to the east until you can reach the bend and proceed north. Next to the spot where the light hits the floor, you'll find another of the floating balls—inspect it to trade off with the team in the North Tower (you can advance floors with Elc's team instead of switching teams here, but since you'll be blocked soon anyway, you may want to keep both groups even).

Sliding toward a date with destiny!

A thirsty Elc makes the mistake of trying to lick ice with painful and embarrassing results.

NORTH TOWER

As happened previously when you switched to Elc's team, the block of ice on the third floor vanishes, allowing you to continue your trek to the higher floors of the North Tower. Upon taking the stairs at the end of the ledge past where the ice was, you arrive on the fourth floor.

Here, pushing the top ice block to the west causes it to react like a pinball, sliding and bumping off several obstacles before crashing into one of the floating balls and triggering a team switch. Pushing the central or bottom ice blocks, however, will cause them to slide across the floor, ricochet off a Frost Giant, then come flying back at you to trigger an encounter (these battles will reoccur if you push either block again after you've bested your initial foes).

Before pushing the top block, you may want to take the stairs to the next floor, where you'll find two treasure chests—and another encounter!

The stairs to the sixth floor are encased in ice, so after you've raided the chests, return to the fourth floor and push the top block to the west. Hopefully Elc and his cohorts can find a way to dissolve the problem at hand.

This means "We crush your skulls!" in Frost Giant-speak.

The foes are not happy campers in this place.

Over in the South Tower, there's a staircase leading up towards the south-eastern corner of the slippery area on the fourth floor. To reach it, head downstairs to the third floor, then take the bottom flight of stairs ("D") along the western wall (the same ones you took to get to the area with the treasure chest). Once you arrive on the fourth floor you'll slide east and bump into a stalagmite; from there, skate south to the wall, east into the corner, north to another stalagmite, and finally east to where you can access the stairs.

On the fifth floor, sliding into the area at the southwest triggers an encounter.

To get to the treasure chest at the northeast, you must start your slide from the northern edge of the slippery floor near the chest so that you run into a stalagmite, and then head east.

If you choose to ignore the floating ball for now, and instead climb the stairs to the north that you recently thawed out, you'll find that the sixth floor isn't at all friendly—what with an encounter breaking out the moment you set foot on it.

This means "We spill your guts." Notice the subtle spacing differences that make all the difference in translation.

When you reach the eighth floor, your progress is hindered by another of the large ice blocks. With no way to go forward, your only alternative is to go back to the floating ball next to the stairs on the fifth floor. Before you do, though, try walking west into the wall slightly below the staircase. Wheeeeee!!! Would you look at that—you've skated your way to more treasure!

NORTH TOWER

After Elc uses the ball on the fifth floor to tag out to Arc's team in the North Tower, they're delighted to find that the block of ice on the fifth floor is now a thing of the past. Going up...

The sixth floor is pretty uneventful, with but a treasure chest and the stairs to the next floor for you to see. However, the seventh floor makes up for it, as it starts out with a bang.

Once the thrill of the fight has died down, take the stairs to the eighth floor (see Page 507). To reach the treasure chest in the southwest corner, begin by sliding west through a hidden passage two steps south of the stairs. Once you're in the central chamber, proceed south into a hidden passage. Follow the hidden passage to the west, then south for a bit, until you can walk to the west again and reach the chest.

Seeing as how there's another of the large ice blocks that you've no doubt grown to love by now blocking the stairs to the next floor (as well as a Guardian's Force Fountain), give the floating ball a good whack to throw the action over to the South Tower.

Since physical attacks usually prove more damaging against Andel in this battle, have your stronger characters attack him with their weapons, while the others keep the Giant Lizards at bay with magic. Be sure to keep up your assault on Andel until he goes down, as given time, he'll cast "Cure". This ability regains him over three hundred hit points every time he uses it, so try to take him out of the fight fast before he can cast it.

Once you've felled Andel and his reptilian pets, and are in the process of giving him the old standby speech on how good always triumphs over evil, the Minister bursts into an eerie laughter. While his main intent during the battle may have been to kill you, he had a fallback plan...to stall you until the Ark was ready. Plan 'B' apparently worked, and now nothing can stop the resurrection of his master, the Dark One!

You watch in horror as Andel casts the magic spell that may damn the world! A mere thunderbolt is all it takes to destroy the Ark—and without the Ark to contain the darkness, it's only a matter of time before the seal on the Dark One once again weakens enough so that he may escape his prison and make his grand appearance.

The suit was a little tighter than Super Andel expected. A...ahem, personal adjustment was in order.

This is usually an invitation to witness some kind of disaster.

Before the dust at either of the Poles even settles, the scene shifts to Romalia, where in the Meeting Room of the castle, a very important messenger seeks an audience with King Gaidel.

News of Andel's death, and Arc's imminent arrival, is relayed to the Romalian King by General Zalbad, the last remaining General of the initial four. Hearing this, the King realizes that Arc has grown into a formidable adversary, and as such orders Zalbad to kill him and his friends!

When the King looks to the Dark One for answers as to just how this task may be carried out, he is reminded of the "trump card" he holds. This option, if called upon, could very well bring about the destruction of the entire world! Hopefully it won't come to that—hopefully once Arc sees what's at risk, he, and the rest of humanity will give up of their own free will! Silly Romalians, tricks are for kids!

BECOME A SUPER HUNTER

Now that you've destroyed the North and South Towers, a new Hunter's Job may be available to you—if you've got what it takes, that is! The following is a brief description of how you too can become a "Super Hunter".

ITEM!

God Hunter Crest
Boar Spear
DarkLong Sword

Once you have accumulated a minimum of 250 Merit Points by way of successfully completing jobs, both normal and bounty-based, you'll be able to enter the secret back room of the Prodius Hunters' Guild. Inside this room you'll find three chests containing two weapons and an item called the God Hunter Crest. The God Hunter Crest is an emblem which shows that you are a Hunter of the highest magnitude, and thus will allow you certain privileges above those of normal Hunters.

These privileges include entering the Secret Hunter Referral Service Room at the Indigos Guild. From there you can contract yourself out for work which is unavailable through the regular Guild referral services. Under no circumstances should you sell the Crest, or you'll forfeit the ability to enter the Secret Hunter Referral Service Room.

Now that the little "how to" on the God Hunter Crest is finished, with the Crest in your inventory, head over to the Secret Hunter Referral Service Room at the Guild in Indigos. Due to the point at which you're now at in the game (the North and South Towers destroyed), and if Choko is in your party, the dispatcher tells you of a new job which has just shown up at the Ajarl Hunters' Guild in Millmana. Off you go to Millmana to get the job and prove that you're worthy of the title "Super Hunter" (cue loud booming echo effect)...

JOB CHECK Return the Sea Dragon's Egg

- 1 LOCATION: Ajarl Guild—Deep Sea Shrine 2 WEALTH: 4000 G 3 MERITS: 30
- 4 TIME FRAME: Ajarl Guild—After earning 250 merit points, and the North and South Towers have been destroyed.
- 5 DESCRIPTION:

After accepting this job from the Ajarl Hunters' Guild in Millmana, head across town to the Ajarl Inn. Standing next to the front desk is a biologist who wants you to return an egg to its home in the Nest Room of the Deep Sea Shrine. He warns you about the possibility of attack by those who wish to use its DNA for EEEEE-vil, then hands you the "Sea Dragon's Egg". With the egg now safely in your possession, leave Ajarl for the Millmana Skyport and the Silver Noah—but don't show the egg to Chongara or it may end up on a plate with toast and a side of hash browns. Set a course for Yagos Isle once you've boarded the airship—if there's anyone who can help you out of this predicament, it's Doctor Vilmer. After being greeted by the Doctor upon entering his Research Laboratory, you explain to him your need for a submarine so you can complete the job you're currently working on. Vilmer says he'll take a shot at repairing the one you used to escape the Deep Sea Oil Rig, but it'll take a bit of time, so check back periodically. To pass the time needed to make the repairs quickly, leave Yagos Isle and return (choose Yagos Isle as your destination upon leaving). Upon your arrival, you'll find the repaired sub docked in the bay outside Yudo Village, just as Doctor Vilmer said. Hop aboard the submarine and have Ele take control by walking him over to the control panel and inspecting it. This brings up the Start submarine prompt. After answering Yes, your crew mans their positions, and it's time to go. While looking for the Deep Sea Shrine, you'll be asked which directions you wish Ele to command the sub to take. The following are the choices (and subsequent results) you'll need to give to reach the Shrine. If at any point during your little jaunt beneath the waves you're attacked and shot out of the water, it'll be Faux Game Over. Should this happen, you'll automatically restart from the point at which you entered the submarine.

Directions to the Deep Sea Shrine (Part 1):

Dive—Dive (there's something dead ahead)—Dive (you're being followed)—Dive (the hull integrity may be compromised)—I Don't Care (an enemy passes overhead)—Prepare For Attack—Dive, Dammit (Ele attacks the enemy and is victorious, but there is a power failure)

At this point, you regain control of Ele so he can attempt to fix the engine. Begin by climbing down the ladder to the right to reach the Engine Room, and from there, inspect the engine (located to the left of the door to the Crew's Quarters). Once it's fixed, return to the bridge and restart the submarine.

Directions to the Deep Sea Shrine (Part 2):

Dive—Dive (the hull integrity is being compromised again)—I Don't Care (there's something dead ahead... It's the entrance to the Deep Sea Shrine!)

Hmm...interesting. How big of an omelette would that make?

When you're a Hunter, it's one big job after another. Vilmer doesn't get that yet.

Poco is embarrassed because he threw up and made a mess, but Sania offers an eco-friendly solution.

Return the Sea Dragon's Egg

As soon as you've passed through the entrance to the Deep Sea Shrine, you're asked to form a battle party. From here on in during your trip through the Shrine, if you wish to return to the submarine, you may do so by climbing through the air lock (the circular pool of water in the opening room). Upon passing through the door to the north and the entry hall beyond it, you're greeted by a voice which reveals the route you must travel to reach the Guardian of the Sea. With that, the gate on the door in front of you rises, allowing passage through it. In the next room, a man dressed in scientific garb demands that you hand over the egg. When prompted, Ask for a reason. That gives him away, for he slips and lets you know he's working for the Romalians. It's a no-brainer what your answer is after that—Keep the egg!

Take the stairs at the northwest after defeating this first batch of thugs to find a few of their friends who were late to the party.

The stairs leading to the Nest Room and your final adversaries appear to the west once you've cleared this room. Answer No when they demand the egg to begin the encounter.

With the Shrine now apparently safe, you place the Sea Dragon Egg in its nest and start to leave the room. As you're about to climb the stairs, three more Romalians teleport into the room, surrounding the nest—but just as they're about to snatch it, the egg hatches! When they decide to take it anyway, the voice which directed you towards the Nest Room calls out in rage. Thunderbolts and lightning! Very, very frightening...for the Romalians! They're laid low right where they stand. Afterwards, the baby Dragon swims over, thanking you for your help. Since there's nothing more you can do here now, head back to the submarine so you can return topside and collect your reward.

Once you've collected the bounty for the job "Return the Sea Dragon's Egg", you'll be able to use the submarine to return to the Shrine at your leisure. As an added bonus, since you already know the way there, you won't even have to give directions while making the trip. Instead, you just choose whether you wish to go to the entrance at the Shrine Front or the one at the East Shrine after starting the sub.

Aside from extra experience, a great reason to make the return trip to the Shrine is to get the last, and most powerful, of Dieckbeck's twenty Power Units. Due to the location of the Power Unit, you must enter the Deep Sea Shrine by choosing the East Shrine once you get the sub out in the water. It might be a good idea to bring a few healing items along with you if you're planning on trying for the Power Unit—trust us, there's a good chance that you'll need them.

Know that since the item in question is for your mechanical pal Dickbeek, he'll be a necessary addition when you're asked to form your battle party. Any attempts to progress without him will be met with failure—as in, you won't even get out of the first room.

After stepping from the air lock in the “East Shrine” section of the Deep Sea Shrine, rotate your characters so that Diekbeck is in the lead, and have him inspect the steel gate to the west. A booming voice lets you know that there’s a grand prize awaiting the ‘bot somewhere within the Shrine, but to earn it he’ll have to pass several tests of strength. The gate then opens. Pass through it to begin the first test.

A TIME OF TESTING

When you reach the center of the following room, the voice directs Diekbeck to step forward alone for the next wave of testing. Once you've chosen to Submit to it, the tin man disappears.

During these next few encounters, due to Diekbeck's lack of a healing spell, you may do well to have the Diek Gun equipped rather than one of his fist weapons. The reason—you can use it to attack from a distance without fear of counterattack. Also, try to group his foes together so that you can attack with magic (can you say, "Divine Judgment"?), and therefore damage more than one or two at a time. Oh yeah, it doesn't help much that the enemies in the first encounter can cast a Mesmerize spell which puts you to sleep. Hope you brought those healing items we advised you to.

After surviving round three, you're allowed to use the stairs to the south in the room you're teleported to. Downstairs, continue on by passing through the open doors in the rooms you come to, until you reach a room with a large pool of water. Head to the south around the outer rim of this room, and from there proceed down the stairs at its center.

Before your next and final test, use the Guardian's Force Fountain to return your party's Hit and Magic Points to their maximum levels. Once you have, step through the door to the north... Judgment (a fitting name, don't you think?), the Guardian of the Final Power Unit, asks Diekbeck the same questions that were asked of him during his solo encounters—only this time, Diekbeck knows the answers. Satisfied by what he hears, Judgment agrees to proceed with the final test of your worthiness, and with that he asks to see the strength of your companions—during which time, Diekbeck may not assist. You're then asked to form a battle party consisting of Arc, Ele, and any three others aside from Diekbeck. If you'd like a little insider information, some magics that kick ass in this battle are: Divide, Arc's Meteor Shower, Ele's Explosion, Sania's Shuffle Shot, Poco's Atrophy Horn and Gogen's Thunder Storm, to name just a few.

Once you've passed Judgment, Power Unit 19 is yours for the taking—you've earned it! Diekbeck is then asked what he'll do once the world is saved, and no, the answer isn't that he's going to go to Disneyworld. Now that the testing is complete, you're sent back to the East Shrine area air lock, where you can board the sub and return to Yagos Isle.

Once Choko has achieved level Sixty-Five or higher, and the towers to the north and south are nothing more than shards of broken crystals scattered across the tips of the world, if you're in the mood for a side-quest rich with character background, return to Clenia Isle.

After searching Choko's house for her father, head back outside to come face-to-face with the girl you met long ago in Choko's subconscious. A chase ensues as the entity runs off towards the church.

The truth is laid bare inside the house of worship... The mystery girl is Akura, the daughter of Sezec, and the evil doppelfragment of the "complete" Choko! After a brief refresher course to jog Choko's memory—which also explains why the villagers had appeared as slimes when you battled them during your last visit here—the scene then shifts to the village's entrance where your other team members have been surrounded by Fleshflickers!

Choko instantly regrets cheating at Candyland.

CHOKO LIKE YUMMY MEATLOAF

Oh yes, and Gogen only knows a fraction of how evil this girl is!

Things only get worse from here on out...

Wouldn't it be nice if it was?

Fortunately. Who knows what she'd do if she was!

As soon as the last of the undead has been defeated, you rush to the church to help Choko. Here Gogen identifies Akura as the evil from the large gravestone at the cemetery. Now that you've figured out WHAT she is, Akura dives back into the darkness of Choko's subconscious, where she continues with the little girl's stroll down memory lane.

The vision that Akura now guides Choko through is of the night Tokoko Village was attacked by creatures looking for her... the same day Silva, the wolf pup she found in the forest, died. The painful memories come flooding back. The intolerance... the hatred... the fear... the villagers... the monsters... the attack... the blame. At a crucial moment, Silva takes an axe meant for her... It all proves too much for the little girl! Unable to control herself any longer—she lashes out! It was then that the power within her emerges in its full glory! Tokoko Village and everyone in it is destroyed in a flash! The villagers and loved ones in it from that very moment forward have all been illusions created by Choko.

At this point, Choko tries to pretend it was all a bad dream by projecting a new illusion. Upon awakening in Choko's bed, walk her to the main room of the house where her father Ralgo is about to serve dinner (Choko must be nocturnal). This evening's dinner conversation includes a story which recounts how Ralgo found the young red-haired child after killing her biological father—the Beast Lord Sezec—and of his sealing away her powers so that she may live out her life as a replacement for the daughter he had previously lost. When his tale is finished, and he tells you he must go, choose Don't go Dad! from the selection prompt (If you choose Give me more food, Dad! a total of ten times, Ralgo will make the correct selection for you) to break Choko free of the new illusion. As a final note, the image of Ralgo tells Choko that her new friends will watch over her now, and that if she wishes to get her real memory back, seek out Akura in the Secret Lair beneath the throne at the bottom of the Forbidden Ruins in Alatos—where Ralgo found her all those centuries ago.

Over at the Clenia Inn, Choko awakens from her dream state surrounded by her new companions. Her father was right, they will look after her now that he's gone. Though she's made a full recovery, the desire to know the truth nags at her. A trip to the neighboring country of Alatos is now in order!

Descending towards the Secret Lair of the Beast Lord is all it takes for you to be asked to create a battle party. As we mentioned previously, due to the amount of encounters and the strength of the opponents you'll face during them, your best hope for survival lies in equipping the Romancing Stone on a battle party member who has the ability to heal. This allows you to cast "Cure" as often as you'd like without fear of depleting your Magic Points. Another thing worth mentioning is that on floors sixty and seventy, there are goddess and cherub statues whereby you can return you party's Hit and Magic Points to their maximum levels, or leave the dungeon if you choose to...but be warned, due to the chicanery of Sezec, the cherub statues work in reverse! To leave, you must answer them as if you wish to stay. As if that weren't enough, per the Beast Lord's instructions, they may also decide you aren't worth the effort of teleporting all the way up to ground level, and instead only deliver you to the start of this sub-dungeon on Ruins B50 (isn't Sezec swell?). One last thing—don't forget to open any chests found within walled areas before the battle ends, or you won't be able to hop the wall and get back to them (without restarting the battle by way of leaving the current floor and returning). All set? Okay, good. Now let's get going...

Get the treasure chests before leaving each level. If you do this right, you won't be back this way.

FORBIDDEN RUINS — FLOOR 71

Once you reach Basement Floor Seventy-One of the Forbidden Ruins, Choko once again runs ahead of the party to find Akura. Evil personified is found standing in the center of an illusion created by the dreams of a sensitive little girl cast out from the world above. After a brief explanation as to why you were driven underground, Akura claims that she'll soon be reviving her father Sezec, whom you may remember as the stinking pile of rot on the throne at Basement Fifty. He'll be revived to wreak havoc on humanity, or so Akura says. When Choko cries out that she wants her memory back, Akura teleports the two of them to a section of walkway cut off from everyone else. This would be a good time for Beetlejuice to pop up and say, "It's showtime!"

FORBIDDEN RUINS — FLOOR 71

Once this encounter begins, Choko (who's a mandatory battle-party member) will be the lone combatant against Akura on the small island at the center of the running streams. Aside from long-range magic attacks, which do very little damage to Akura, the rest of your party must be content with holding off the other foes. Though Choko may knock Akura's Hit Points down to one, she cannot be defeated this go-round. Damn!

Upon destroying the six underlings, the attention shifts to the stone pedestal towards the top of the room. It's here that Akura has laid down the decomposed body of her father in the hopes of bringing Sezeek back to life. When the Beast Lord sits up, the truth comes out, and it's not exactly what Akura wanted to hear—Choko's is the form he recognizes to be that of his daughter, not hers! Feeling betrayed and hurt, Akura next does something that definitely would cost her some allowance and probably get her extra chores. Well, if Sezeek survived, but he doesn't, so that's probably moot. Anyway, at this point you're in for a fight against one very pissed off little demon!

During this second round, Akura starts with full Hit and Magic Points. Since the bridge now connects the central island to the rest of the area, your other party members can now help Choko, so it kind of evens out.

Fortunately, Gogen explains all to Choko once the battle is over. Will she choose to absorb the darkness within the Memory Stone? Is regaining her memory worth the risk? Choko chooses YES and asks Gogen to wake her up before he go-goes! Soon after, Choko regains her memory. Thanks in part to the help you've given Choko along the way, she's grown enough to control the spark of darkness that comes with returning to her former self.

When you're ready, stand atop the black stone pedestal where Sezeek was char-broiled to be given the option of leaving the Forbidden Ruins instantly, instead of walking back up the seventy-one flights of stairs. Rurirururapapa!!! (And no, that's not a relative of a certain floppy-eared rapper.)

But...we just GOT here!

Gogen tries to pawn off a mood ring on Choko.

STORYCHECK FROM HOUFION WITH LOVE

ROMALIA

When he's not piloting the Silver Noah or offering limited choices, Chopin enjoys sailboarding and water polo. He's a Virgo, and looking for the right woman to bring out the beast in him!

Never address mirrors that talk to you. They're always up to no good.

Once you've tied up any loose ends and are sure your party members are all well-prepared, have Chopin pilot the Silver Noah to Romalia. From the Skyport, take the walk north to Houfion.

As you make your way into the town where Tosh and Shu became fast friends, the scene cuts to General Zalbad's Chamber. Away from the ears of Gaidel, Zalbad revels at knowing he's taking the King for one hell of a ride—quite possibly the last he'll ever take!

Amidst cheerful musings, a messenger enters the room to report that Arc and the others have arrived at Houfion. After ordering them stopped, the General turns to the Dark One for guidance. Due to your strengthening of Kukuru's Mirror, the seal at the Sabatiko Shrine will need a little help...to get it to break. This is where they hope King Gaidel will come in handy...

Meanwhile, over in Houfion, it doesn't take long for the Romalian Patrol Corps to react to Zalbad's orders.

Now that you know the Romalians are on to you, you'd better find a way over the wall fast, before you're overwhelmed.

Unfortunately, while snooping around the entrance to the Houfion Bar for anything that may help you find a way to slip into Romalia, you're spotted by yet another military unit, and they're not selling tickets to their annual fundraiser!

STORYCHECK

There's a joke here, but Danny's technically a minor, so it would be wrong.

Arc still can't believe that this kid is heading up the Resistance.

THE RESISTANCE IS ALIVE!

Once Tosh is finished making pudding out of the troops, enter the Bar. Standing at the bar is a familiar looking redheaded squirt. Approach him with either Tosh or Shu and initiate a conversation. It's exactly who you thought it was, Danny—and he's obviously made a full recovery from the wounds you assumed to be fatal. After a lecture on the dangers of underage drinking, Danny tells you he has a surprise for you, then asks you to follow him. At this point he makes his way to the back room of the Houfion Bar and triggers the lever that opens the hidden doorway. After passing through the door, Danny leads you downstairs to the Resistance Base. Surprise! Just like him, the Resistance is alive! Once your shock wears off, Danny fills you in on the details of how they regrouped, and of how he is now their new leader. Now that you have friends in the right places, the possibility of getting inside Romalia seems within your grasp.

Back at the Resistance Base, a plausible strategy for the penetration of Romalia is decided upon. The Romalia Tunnel will be taken by Arc and the rest of your party as a diversion, so that Danny and the members of the Resistance can scale the wall and break down Romalia's defenses from the inside. Just as the final details have been hammered out, another of Zalbad's goon squads storms the room! Danny and the rest of the Resistance hightail it out the back. The mission to infiltrate Romalia has begun sooner than expected, and to get to the tunnel, you'll need to fight your way past these intruders!

Gaidel's beginning to lose his cool here. Maybe the Dark One can calm his nerves...yeah. that's it...

Once past your opponents, quickly leave Houfion and enter the Romalia Tunnel—hopefully you're not too late to take the heat off the Resistance.

As we look in on Gaidel, we see that the King is not particularly pleased with the way things are developing. Fearful that Arc may in fact enter the city, he falls right into your trap and orders most of his forces to the tunnel, leaving Danny and the others with a "Get Into Romalia Free" card. To put his mind at ease, King Gaidel seeks the wisdom of the Dark One. Unfortunately for him, the Dark One doesn't have his best interests at heart, and instead merely strokes his ego.

Cut to Zalbad. As the General and the Dark One conspire against the King, yet another messenger enters to deliver news of Arc's current whereabouts. Like the King before him, Zalbad plays right along with your plan by ordering all of Romalia's military to the tunnel.

When the action shifts back to Arc and the others at the Romalia Tunnel, you see that the King and Zalbad weren't kidding when they decided to throw everything but the kitchen sink at you—for when Danny and his team leave the area, you're assaulted by wave after neverending wave of Romalian troops turned Chimera beasts. The object of this encounter is not necessarily to defeat them all, but rather to keep the fight going for ten complete battle turns, so that the Resistance will have adequate time to breach the wall. Due to the length and intensity of this encounter, it would be beneficial for you to bring a character who has the ability to heal and is also equipped with the Romancing Stone. Whoohoo! No cost healin'! Just like at the free clinic, 'cept no winos.

Gaidel has no idea he's about to get spanked hard, and the safe word's powerless to stop the onslaught!

It's then that he commands the remaining Chimera soldiers to retreat in the hopes that they can intercept the Resistance. With the tunnel now pretty much unguarded, it's a short stroll down the tracks to where you can practically walk right through the front door. Unbeknownst to you, that's exactly what Zalbad wants! - 5 DESCRIPTION:

Our client is the mother of a member of the Resistance. She wishes her son to receive a special charm safely. She's waiting in the shop.

This job appears at the Houfion Hunters' Guild once you've successfully stalled the Romalians at the tunnel for ten full battle turns, thus allowing Danny and the rest of the Resistance to breach the wall of the city. After accepting it, head over to the Houfion Shop to meet with the concerned parent. You'll find her to the right of the door. Hmmm...judging by the color of her hair and the description of her son you'd think she was Danny's mother—but she's not. The woman wishes for you to find her son and give him a lucky charm (not the magically delicious kind).

Once the charm is in your possession, leave Houfion and enter Romalia via the Romalia Tunnel, then proceed with the infiltration of the city as planned. During your romp around Romalia, when you reach the point where you've just thrown the third switch, you'll be able to find the Resistance member you're looking for just north of Relay Point Two, between security walls three and four. Upon talking with him, he takes the charm from you and regains his confidence. After delivering the charm, the job is deemed a success. Your reward will be waiting for you when you return to the Hunters' Guild.

This job must be completed before your party reaches the Romalia Castle Square, otherwise another Hunter will finish it for you.

Shu thinks about saying no and walking away, but decides to score the cash.

"Yeah. She said if the battle goes on too long, she'd send your wubby over next."

Not too far away, over at the Romalian Castle, we can see who the invite WASN'T from. Obviously upset that the one man standing between him and the intruders has dropped the ball, the King gives Zalbad a serious tongue-lashing before retreating to the briefing chamber where he makes contact with the Dark One. As before, the entity strokes Gaidel's ego, filling his head with disinformation in the process. Stupid mortals...once Gaidel pushes the button, it's all over for humanity.

Romalia Castle

As we return to our heroes, you're asked to form a new party for the remainder of your trip to the castle, after which you enter the city proper. Once on the streets of Romalia, if you decide to leave by exiting to the south (careful, it doesn't ask if you'd like to "leave the area" before sending you out), you'll be taken directly to the Map of Romalia. The same holds true for your return trip, whereupon choosing the Romalia Tunnel, you're brought back to the same spot you left the city from—no hiking all the way through the tunnel and over the wall. Anyway, now that you've made your character selections, head north towards the castle, killing anyone or anything that gets in your way. A word to the wise—when fighting the Arch Mages, DO NOT group your characters together. These particular foes have a nasty penchant for casting spells that can severely poison your entire party, or worse, put them to sleep! Be careful of your strategy around them!

WELCOME TO THE SAFEHOUSE

Upon defeating the guards at the first intersection (otherwise known as Relay Point One), your advance hits a wall. Actually several at once. To prevent your party from progressing any further north, the Romalian Patrol Corps raises a series of immense security barrier walls. A quick scan of the surroundings turns up Danny coming out of a house to the east. After approaching him, Danny leads you inside (Map 21) to meet up with the other members of the Resistance and discuss your options.

Within the confines of the safehouse, Danny tells you of the five barrier walls that lie between you and the castle. Each of these barrier walls is wired into the master system, which in turn can be overridden on a wall-by-wall basis if you locate the corresponding switch. In other words, flip a switch and you get past a wall. Not a new concept. Though Danny says that you'll need to lower a minimum of four walls, if you cut through houses and use a certain "Underpass" (see Check 6, on page 537) which you will come to later, your objective can be reached without lowering even a single wall.

When you're ready, leave the safehouse and head east across the bridge to begin the task of lowering the walls. The safehouse can be used at any point before you reach the castle if you feel the need to rest or save your progress. If you decide to leave Romalia from this point on, upon your return, you'll be given an overhead map of the city from which you can access any of the Relay Points you passed through previously.

Now that he's grown up a bit, he prefers to be called "Dan".

Fairly obvious statement here.

THE FIRST DOOR TO THE LEFT

When you hit the eastern border of the city, head north until you reach the next intersection (Map 11). From there, walk slightly west and enter the first available house on the northern side of the street.

Upstairs on the wall at the northwest you'll find the switch that controls the first security wall. After turning this switch on and lowering the wall at Relay Point One, head back outside and start walking west. A short distance from the house, you'll come to a bridge blocked by what looks like several large stones (Map 14). Upon taking a second look, you see that they aren't stones at all! Yikes!

You know the drill by now.

Wait a minute! This is just surplus licensed product from The Phantom Menace!

Check3 ➡

TAKIN' CARE OF BUSINESS

Across the bridge at Relay Point Two you'll find security wall three. To its left is the switch that lowers wall number two (found to the south of your current position, between walls one and three). From the switch, continue to the west and enter the next house you can (Map 16).

You'll find the third switch across the street from the back door of this house, in Map 25. Turn this switch on to put security wall three out of commission. If you accepted the job "Deliver the Cham" from the Houfion Guild before starting the raid on Romalia, now would be a good time to wrap it up. If you didn't, you may want to consider returning to the Guild to take on the assignment before going on any further.

Once you've wrapped up the job (one way or the other), enter the house to the west of switch three. If you'd like the items on the second floor, attempt to talk to the Resistance member blocking your access at the foot of the stairs not once, not twice, but three times. Doing this will alert the Romalians to your position, thereby triggering him to leave.

This is how a mime talks in a video game. He's miming "Hey!"

Check4 ➡

PIECE DE RESISTANCE

As you did before, exit this house by the back door, then head east once you're back out on the street. You don't get very far past Relay Point Three before coming across a group of Romalian troops bullying a member of the Resistance (Map 30). Repeatedly attempt to communicate with the troops to draw their attention to you instead.

Once you've saved the Resistance member, he thanks you and walks away, thus allowing you to enter the house entrance he was blocking. It's in the rear right room of this house (Map 33) that you'll find the next switch you'll need to turn on. After doing so, the fourth security wall falls.

Leave the house and continue east, entering the house in the alcove at the end of the street. On the third floor (Map 37) is an open window, which leads onto the surrounding rooftops.

Confront the gang of Romalians playing tag-team atomic wedge dispenser.

Actually, after wedge number 6, he WISHED he was dead.

LOOKS GOOD ENOUGH TO EAT

Far to the northwest is another open window (labeled "G"). Make your way through it.

By exiting this new house at street level (Map 42) and heading west, you'll come across more of the Romalian Special Corps (Map 43), this troop "hungry" for action.

Just as you've fixed it so their tummies never growl again, the gate to the west opens and another guard passes through it. After he leaves in such a hurry that he forgets to close the gate, proceed through it to find the final switch on the wall nearby. After turning it "on" and lowering the security wall at Relay Point Three (the one closest to Romalia Castle), if you feel like tormenting the guard, he's hiding in the corner to the southwest. Once you've had your fun, check inside the building next to the switch. Here you can pick up a few belongings that the guards won't be needing anymore.

Once you're through raiding the chests, return across the rooftops to the area to the south, and from there head north up the city's main street to announce your arrival at Romalia Castle Square.

Check 6 ➡

BACKDOOR HEROES

If you'd rather sneak in the back way (and pick up a little more experience in the process), after defeating the guards just prior to the fifth switch, instead of heading north from Relay Point Three, return to the street outside the first house you cut through—the one just west of Relay Point Two. Once there, head further west to reach the Underpass Entrance area (Map 18), where Danny fills you in on an alternate route to the castle.

After the boy leaves, duck inside the Underpass (Maps 46 - 61) and follow its many twists and turns towards the castle. Along the way you'll need to turn off any steam jets that impede your progress by way of the switches on the walls. When you finally reach the opposite end you'll emerge from the exit tunnel in a small back alley (Map 61). A quick jog to the east gets you to the Castle Square—and Zalbad!

Check 7 ➡

WHAT TIME IS IT?

Regardless of which path you took to get there, General Zalbad will be waiting for you once you arrive at the Castle Square. High above, from the safety of the front balcony, the General sics his royal guard on you. Hey boys and girls, what time is it? BATTLE TIME!!!

Emphasis on "bad"!

If they just had some dipping sauce, it would taste fine.

Danny is unfortunately about to reenact the "zipper scene" from There's Something About Mary.

Zalbad isn't kidding. His troops are all business here, but he's a coward.

Deep inside the castle, King Gaidel whines to the Dark One of how Zalbad has failed yet again. Blah, blah, blah. The Dark One has got to be sick of him by now. After a smidge more whining, Gaidel continues his streak of mistakes by launching the Sky Castle...

Should you instead choose to Go now! when initially asked, fasten your seatbelt—'cause it's gonna be a bumpy ride!

SILVER NOAH DOWN

Inside the Romalia Skyport, Chongara stops you at the terminal to let you know an extremely important detail—due to prior damage to the Silver Noah, if you use it to reach the Sky Castle, it's likely to be a one-way trip. You must now make a decision. Do you Go now!, and take your best shot at stopping King Gaidel, the Dark One, and General Zalbad? Or, would you rather Go later, thus giving yourself the opportunity to rest, buy more supplies and do any side quests or jobs that you may not have gotten around to doing yet? Choose wisely, as there's no backing out once you've made the decision to leave for the Sky Castle.

Sure, why not?!

WELCOME TO THE SKY CASTLE

Chopin makes some nervous pilot small-talk.

Inside the cockpit of the newly decommissioned Silver Noah, you take control of Arc. After a few words from Chongara and Chopin, make your way through the hole in the left wall of the cockpit to whatever fate awaits you during your fun-filled trip through the Sky Castle.

Upon selecting the members of your boarding party, you hop from the wreckage of the airship. You don't get very far before the welcome wagon shows up!

BEFORE GOING FORWARD...

Arc is hoping to run into team cha-cha-cha. He needs cologne badly at this point.

Once you've sent these latest foes back to the boneyard, it may be in your best interests to return to the Silver Noah and take a look around the interior of the airship. In the compartment just behind the cockpit you'll find both a Journal to save your game's progress (a word of warning, though: your game is now at a point where you will not be able to return to the world below, so don't paint yourself into a corner by saving over your old files) and a cot that you can use to rest on and replenish your Hit and Magic Points. In the northern room upstairs on the second floor, you'll find a cornucopia of shops, useful devices and sources of information. These include...

INSIDE THE SILVER NOAH

Diekbeck's Experience Allocation Device:

Just what it sounds like. Step onto the scale-like device to distribute between the party members of your choice any experience Diekbeck has collected.

Chongara:

Ask Chongara nicely and he'll show you the Monster Book. This book contains the character portraits and detailed stat listing for your entire party, as well as each of the enemies Lieza has performed a "Search" on.

Smith:

By talking with the Smith, you'll gain access to the full assortment of services found in both the Aldia and Brakia Smith Shops, which include judging an item's use, raising an item's level—normal and maximum—adding an effect to an item, raising the offense or defense of an item, and last but not least (okay, maybe it is the least), item personalizing. As if all that wasn't exciting enough, you'll also be able to access those services of the Combine Shop on Yagos Isle.

Mother Claire:

Speak to this seer to sell or change the class of any of your captured monsters, as well as add an extra ability or two to your characters' magic roster. For more specific details on Mother Claire, see The Claire Witch Project (Page 372).

Silver Noah Shop:

It's a shop—you should know how it works by now.

SOME FRIENDLY ADVICE.....

A bit of advice that might come in handy... Save your Goz and don't raise the levels of any weapons you buy onboard or may have that still need a tweak or two until just before the final boss encounters (at which point you'll wish you'd saved your money to raise those instead... Goz can go quickly when raising levels on some of the more powerful weapons). If nothing else, you'll at least be able to raise your existing ones somewhat through normal use in battle.

When you're done shopping, return through the hole in the cockpit and re-enter the Sky Palace to begin the final steps of your journey into the history books.

PLAY TIP FOR CHECK 5

As you successfully pass each test, and are subsequently returned to the main chamber to take control of another character, the door to the trial room you just left shuts forever. Once you've passed any six trials of your choosing, and as such have closed all six of the lit doors, the true exit will be revealed—directly above the door where you entered the chamber initially. Through this door is a linear series of rooms, at the end of which you'll find another warp.

Keep in mind that the door where you entered the chamber initially, also reopens after the six soul-searching episodes, giving you the opportunity to heal and save.

Also, the first two rooms of each trial are not shown in the walkthrough since there is no fighting (except for Gruga's test). The final room of each trial will be shown next to each character's text.

Check1 ➡ A QUICK NOTE BEFORE PROCEEDING

While making your way through the Sky Castle, any deviation from the route which takes you to Zalbad and the others will eventually lead you to a dead end containing either an item or a swarm of angry Chimeras. Also, due to the "Undead" nature of the foes that you'll encounter during this next leg of your adventure, characters with the "Dispel" ability make an excellent addition to your battle party.

Sister Christian, oh the time has come...and you know that you're the only one to say...okay.

Check2 ➡

BEFORE WARPING...

Whether you choose to head straight for your primary targets or search the side rooms, you'll need to use the pyramid-shaped warp points you find along the way to teleport yourself further into the Sky Castle. Once you come across one, step onto the brightly lit circular floor-panel between the two small rotating crystals. From there you'll automatically hop over to the warp point to continue on your way. The first of these warps can be found in the southwestern room (Map 5) off the second hall (Map 3).

Step into the light...

Fortunately, these have been thoroughly tested...well, at least we're pretty sure they have been.

Check3 ➡

A LITTLE SIDE TRIP...

After making the brief side trip to get the Death Needle, return through the warp to the second hall and proceed across the long bridge found through the door to the northwest (Map 8).

Long halls and evil-aligned plasma energy on the way to...destiny!

One should never trifle with Romalian treasure chests when death is on the line...

Check 4 ➡

THE CORRIDOR OF CHOICES....

Along the walls of the next hall you come to (Map 12) you'll have several choices as far as rooms to explore.

Once you've searched the extra rooms to your heart's content, pass through the door at the northwest end of the hall. One winding hall later and you'll arrive at your next encounter (Map 17). Be careful when poking around this room, as the Ghost Knights that appear have a tendency to repeatedly cast "Charge". Getting hit by an attack after they've done that gives you one hell of a boo-boo, so make sure you bring the big boo-boo better juice. If you want to open the chest on the island at the southeast corner of this room, you'll need to do so during the battle, as once it ends, you can't make the jumps it takes to reach it.

Decisions, decisions...

Beyond this, and the next room, lies the third warp point (Map 19). Hop into it to be teleported to a new area. If you decide to return to the first area at any time, you'll be asked to reform your battle party once you walk into the warp.

Check 5 ➡

MORE ROMALIANS...

A few rooms south of the warp in this new area, you'll come across two rotating, transparent, Sky Palace-shaped crystals (Map 22). The red-tinted one on the left works as a Hit and Magic Point regenerator and completely refills your party to their maximum levels when used, while the blue-tinted one to the right acts as a save spot.

Once through the door to the south, it slams shut. Six others then open—three along each side of the chamber. You've stepped into a trap, one which was designed specifically to keep you from reaching your ultimate goal. At Are's suggestion your party splits up to search through the darkness for the exit. At this point, each of the six lit archways that are now accessible to you contain an unspecified test of resolve which your characters must pass—alone—if they want to find a way past this madness! What exactly the test involves depends on which character you pass through each archway.

To start a trial, while controlling the character of your choice (if you'd like to switch characters, approach and converse with the party member you wish to use to be given the prompt that will allow you to make the swap), enter any of the six lit archways, the door to which will then shut behind you, sealing you in until the trial is over—one way or the other! Inside, make your way north until you meet up with someone—or something—from your party member's past, at which point the trial will then begin. The trials available to you include:

Hey! What happened to the "eat me" and "drink me" items that were supposed to be here?!

NO! It's a bad idea! They wouldn't try this if they'd seen ANY teen horror movie!

ARC

In his test of will, Arc finds Kukurū. The Sacred White Clan Priestess tries to tempt Arc by telling him that their struggle is over... that they were chosen to begin again in a new world, one not sullied by the ravages of man. When asked to come with Kukurū to this new world, tell her No, or Arc's spirit will be taken over by darkness. Calling her bluff leads to the Chimera behind this charade to reveal itself. The battle for Arc's soul then begins.

If you chose to Intervene when the boy originally asked for help, you'll fight one of the bullies. After defeating him, the bully asks for your forgiveness. Choose Okay or Poco's spirit will be consumed by darkness. In forgiving the bully, Poco gets the Chimera Warlock who was masquerading as his younger self to show himself.

For that, the "Braves" have given up on humans, and tempt Gogen with the offer of returning to their ranks and coming with them to start fresh without the interference of man. When this gesture is tossed out, politely decline by telling them No, or Gogen's spirit will forever be enslaved by darkness. THEY...KEEP...COMING...

After using this fourth warp (at which point you'll be asked to reconfirm your battle party selections) to reach the next area (Map 28), begin heading south.

A few rooms later you'll come to a hall (Map 31). It's important to keep these rooms in mind if you need to level-raise. Unlike the other rooms in the Sky Castle, these are the only rooms in which their occupants will regenerate each time you enter the rooms.

Stay on target...stay on target...

Check 7 ➡

LAST CHANCE TO HEAL!

Once you've passed through the door to the northeast, and have fought your way past the horde of dragons that inhabit the next room, you'll arrive at a second room (Map 40). This northern room contains an item which could be very helpful in the battles soon to come, as well as a crystal, which upon inspection will restore your party's Hit and Magic Points to their maximum levels.

After using the crystal, return to the hall and take the remaining door to the southeast. A few rooms to the south, just past the long bridge, you'll find another hall (Map 43).

This, of course, is silly unless you have Lavender around.

Check 8 ➡

FOUR TRIALS?

A few rooms north of the bridge is a large chamber (Map 46). Each of the four corners of this chamber houses a small room, and at its center is a transparent crystal. Any attempt to inspect the crystal at this time prompts the following message: The four trials must be cleared first. Hmmm... Four trials... Four rooms... Hmmm... Are you thinking what we're thinking? Hmmm... Did we mention, "Hmmm..."? After you're finished "Hmmm..."ing, begin entering the four smaller rooms within the chamber.

These are nothing compared to the battles you're gonna have once they're cleared.

With the defeat of the foes found throughout the four smaller rooms, you'll have passed the trials the crystal refers to. To claim your reward, inspect the crystal in the center of the main room. Your prize? The door to the north opens! Through this door is a bridge, and across that bridge is the next warp point (Map 52). It's now all or nothing time, for this warp will deliver you straight to General Zalbad!

Check? ➡

NOWHERE TO RUN THIS TIME!

After taking the fifth warp, you come face-to-face with the man who ran like a little girl away from the battle at Romalia Castle Square. Apparently General Zalbad has gained a bit more confidence since last he saw you, as he decides to stay the distance this time around.

Hoping to stall you while King Gaidel revives the Dark One in the room beyond this one, the General goes on and on with his lengthy speech on how smart he and the others were to have concocted such an elaborate plan in the first place. Blah, blah, blah... Yeah yeah, brilliant. And he'd have gotten away with it too (or so he thinks)—if it weren't for you meddling kids!

With words obviously not cutting it, General Zalbad seals himself inside a large pyramid-shaped crystal, around which appear six similarly shaped drones. Now that he's put his cards on the table...it's time to play your hand!

For placement during this encounter, since multi-target attacks are a favorite of your foes, keeping a little distance between your characters goes a long way towards preventing the entire party from going down to an attack from Zalbad, or to a lesser extent, the Zalbad-00 drones. As for battle advice, begin by destroying all but a few of the drones, then concentrate your efforts on General Zalbad himself. The reason: if all six drones are stopped, Zalbad will toss out six more at the start of the next round to take their place, thus getting you nowhere. With only one target point, you may want to position one of your stronger physical-attack-based characters such as Tosh, Gruga, Choko, or Iga directly in front of Zalbad. Aside from a strong physical character or two, Poco, Gogen, and Choko are your best overall choices for spellcasters during this encounter, as most, if not all, of their magic abilities will hit General Zalbad for a full third more, or, in the case of Choko, double the damage that those cast by your other characters of the same level will do. The exceptions to this rule are the "Divide" spell, attainable by Elc, Shante, Dickbeck, Sania, and Kelack, and Choko's Akura form "Vanish" spell (if it's leveled up). These take an astounding amount of Hit Points from Zalbad—so use 'em if you've got 'em! PS: Your enemies in this fight don't perform counterattacks, so don't be afraid of using physical attacks on them if they get too close.

"I've put glue on your shoes!"

A definite understatement.

NOW THAT ZALBAD'S OUT OF THE WAY...

This grueling battle comes to an end as soon as the crystal containing Zalbad is destroyed. Amidst the wreckage of the crystal, which couldn't protect even the mighty General Zalbad, lies the final warp point. You must now use it to reach King Gaidel in the Romalian Briefing Room—hopefully before it's too late! If you feel the need to rest and recuperate, or save your progress before attempting this final series of events, the warp point at the southern tip of the room, which leads back to the main sections of the Sky Palace, can be accessed before you commit to going forth.

Zalbad definitely didn't see this defeat coming!

STORYCHECK

Of course, it's far too late to try to change Gaidel's mind at this point. The Dark One has him!

DANN SIND WIR HIEDEN

As you enter the briefing chamber, Arc and Elc make one final desperate plea to King Gaidel. Doesn't he realize that he's being used? That the Dark One will surely destroy him as well—just as soon as he gets what he has desired for so long!?! No longer a rational man, now completely overcome by fear, greed, and an insatiable lust for power, Gaidel takes the unfathomable advice of the Dark One and runs with it... Unable to discern lie from truth, and thinking himself backed into a corner, the King pushes the button!!!

It all starts with a thunderbolt, and, if you don't come through big time, will soon end with the total annihilation of the planet. Through the havoc that ensues, the seal at the Sabatiko Shrine is broken! With nothing to hold it back, the Dark One escapes. When this happens, Kukuru is there to beat it back into submission!

The Dark One decides to pour some salt in the wounds before crushing Kukuru like a tin can.

The victory, however, is short-lived, for while she attempts to reinstate the seal, the Dark One proves far too strong for the feisty little Priestess of the Sacred White Clan. He quickly overpowers our heroine—assimilating her in the process.

As Kukuru calls out to Arc in terror, we rejoin Gaidel in the midst of his first and last display of supreme power—for now that the Dark One has been revived, it sees absolutely no need to keep the King around. Poor Gaidel, he never knew what hit him. Seconds later, stage one of the battle for the fate of the world, or rather what's left of it, begins!

FIGHTING THE DARK ONE

During this encounter, there are a few items you can equip to help you better budget your Magic Points to ensure you get maximum bang for the buck. From the Brave Crest (Arc only), Mystic Dress (females), and Goddess Prayer, to the Refreshing Shoes (those with a "Kick" attack), Carnelian, and of course the ever-popular Romancing Stone. These items and their ilk, over time, will go a long way towards lowering your Magic Point expenditure, and what with the amount of health your opponent has, it's not like this battle is going to be over anytime soon!

If your inventory is a little low on items of the magically delicious variety, you may instead want to consider equipping those which refresh Hit Points with each turn or attack, such as the Light Saber, Life Stealer, Scourge, Refreshing Shoes, Yellow Ribbon (Choko), Emerald (Liez only), Amethyst, Garnet, Blue Adventurine, Iolite, Sapphire or other such object, as every little bit helps.

On the off-chance that you don't have the Romancing Stone, hopefully you've kept a decent stock of the Magic Apples you found during your travels, as they'll come in very handy for restoring Magic Points. Strengthen Fruits from the Silver Noah's Shop should also be plentiful, in case your healer goes down, or runs out of Magic Points to cast Cure. Likewise, you might want to bring along a few Revival Dusts in case your character with the Resurrection spell goes down (or you just plain didn't bring one in the first place).

With the basic equipment and item advice out of the way, let's concentrate on the battle itself. For starters, a good level to have your characters at would be somewhere around one hundred and ten. This level should give you more than enough strength to do decent damage to your opponent, as well as the Hit Points you'll need to survive an attack or two. Speaking of attacks, the Dark One has two main attacks. First, its physical attack. This either singles out one specific character in your group, or targets all those in a range similar to that of Shu's Machine Gun. Second, is its ability-based magic attack—the "Moral Collapse" spell. Now this one can be a real adventure, as it delivers severe damage to any characters unfortunate enough to be in its way. Though you may be tempted to cast "Magic Shield", keep in mind that it doesn't help all that much, and you won't be able to heal injured characters via magic spells with it up.

Since physical attacks reign supreme against this enemy, you may want to position your strongest close-range character directly in front of it, then another equipped with a ranged weapon such as a Knife, Spear or Card behind them. Top that off with one at an adequate distance on either side carrying a stick, or packing automatic heat so that they too can help dish out some punishment. Unlike General Zuhad, the Dark One isn't above smacking back, and especially enjoys doing it to the ladies. Bastard. With that in mind, don't take a swipe from right in front of him if anyone within range is low on Hit Points. If you're not confident that you can keep everyone alive while dealing with counterattacks, reposition the character you would have placed in front, to the side, and arm them with a distance weapon such as a Stick. This way, no direct hit to the front of your foe equals no counter. Some of your more powerful characters would include (assuming the fantasy that all were leveled equally and ate their vegetables at dinner): Tosh, Iga, Gruga, Elc and Choko.

Arc hesitates at a crucial point in Romalian Hopscotch...

An apple a day is not a good plan to manage limited inventory space, except at the end of the game.

Like most bad guys, the Dark One smokes, too.

Might as well practice using this now. You'll be using it a LOT in the later battles.

FIGHTING THE DARK ONE (CONTINUED)

Aside from the physical aspect, you need to be concerned with abilities. The following hard-hitting spells will make this fight go a lot faster if magic is the way you wish to proceed: Tosh's Swing, Ouka-raibaku-zen, Shinku-zen and Koei-zen, Iga's Senpu-gekishu and Ryusei-baku, Gogen's Explosion, Diamond Dust, Wind Slash, Thunder Storm, Super Nova and Earthquake, along with pretty much all of Poco's attack spells. ...And on that note, Poco's Battle Drum should be one of the first things cast if the little drummer boy is one of your party members. Next, we have Gruga's Extract and most of Choko's spells, especially her Vanish and Super Nova attacks while in her Akura form. These inflict a good amount of pain to the Dark One. Also, while not as effective as it was previously against General Zalbad, the "Divide" spell does decent damage, and transposes the hurt into Hit Points for both the character casting the ability and those within range. Another ability that can prove helpful would be Sania's "Transfer", as with it cast on your most damaging character, they'd be able to deliver two attacks per battle turn.

To increase your odds of survival, keep your team spread out in such a fashion that they can't all be hit at once. That way if any do go down to an attack, there will be others left alive who can revive them through a spell or an item. A good layout would be for you to start with your healer, equipped with the Romancing Stone if possible so that they can cast their highest level Cure spell without depleting their Magic Point stock, at the top right or left hand side of the screen. Next, have your remaining four party members take their attack positions in front of the Dark One as described above. This way, if you keep at least two empty spaces between your healer and your attack party at all times, you'll make it so that one or the other (usually the healer) is out of harm's way. If you're really worried, you can swap out an attacker for a backup healer... position them at the opposite side of the screen. Good choices for healers would include: Shante, Diekbeck (equipped with Power Unit 19), Lieza and Poco.

Four-Thousand One-Hundred and Fifty-Two may seem like a lot of hit points, but if you take some of our advice to heart, and keep your healers alert and active, you shouldn't have too much trouble. It's what happens AFTER you defeat the Dark One that you may want to start panicking over! That's right, just when you thought it was safe to go back into the Sky Palace—ladies and gentleman, would you welcome please—the Dark One, STAGE TWO!!!

FIGHTING THE DARK ONE...AGAIN!

Well, the first thing you might be thinking right about now (funky soul brother), "Why Nine-Thousand Nine-Hundred and Ninety-Nine Hit Points?" Well, we'll tell you—because the counter doesn't go any higher!

Before this next battle begins, you're given the opportunity of selecting the members of your party over, if you so desire. If you were at all uncomfortable or unhappy with the performance of any of your party during Stage One, or if anyone's Magic Points have been depleted, now's the time to do something about it. So if you weren't lucky enough to have the Romancing Stone on your designated healer, you may want to swap him/her out for one with a full Magic Point stock.

When you're ready, know that most of the advice we gave for Stage One carries over to this encounter. With three to four attacking characters and one or two spread out and acting as healers you should be fine.

Like it was during Stage One, success or failure in this fight can hinge on your positioning. We can't stress enough that your healer should stay away from the pack to secure their own safety. This fight is going to take a while (35 to 60 minutes), so keep on your toes as far as the healing goes. Don't miss any opportunity to heal or it could come back and bite you on the gluteals, big time!

Aside from that, should you choose to go the magic route, the spells that get under the Dark One's skin this go-round include: Poco's Lion Drum, Cheer Trumpet and Atrophy Horn, all of Gogen's attack magics, Iga's Sempu-geki-shu, Ryusei-baku and Kijinryu-eiha, Tosh's Koei-zen, Shinku-zen and Swing (one of many abilities listed here that you can get from Mother Claire), Ele's Swing and Extract, Gruga's Extract, Rolling Sabot and Gruga Special, Shu's Random Attack and Extract, Paundit's Thunder Breath and Cold Breath, as well as most of Choko's spells—with her Akura form magic attacks doing more than her normal forms.

If you're curious about your opponent, we can tell you that Stage Two of the Dark One is capable of using physical attacks that hit one or more characters within a range similar to that of a Machine Gun, and will also counterattack if physically attacked from its direct front. As for magic attacks, Stage Two of the Dark One is rather fond of the following two magic attacks:

Massacre (Flame Tornado): This spell has the same range and targeting capability as a level 3 spell. All those in its wake will incur serious damage.

God Destroy (Dark Crush): This has the same targeting capability as a level one spell, but with a higher range. Massive damage is a given for those struck with this.

That's about it—GOOD LUCK!

Uh, I don't think we're in Patencia anymore...

Tosh can really do some damage to the Dark One when leveled up high and using the right weapons.

WHAT? MORE HELP? YES, PLEASE!

What's that? You took our advice and you still can't make any headway against the Dark One? You want us to what? Walk you through the fight? Well OK, since you asked nicely, here's a few strategies you could try.

For those of you who have Choko in your battle party, an easy winning strategy would be to position Choko (equipped with the Goddess Prayer) directly in front of the Dark One, with your healer (equipped with the Romancing Stone if you have it) three steps behind her, so that she's within range of using a healing spell, but out of range of any multi-target attacks cast by your enemy. Change Choko into her Akura form on her first turn since she does more damage that way. Then on each subsequent turn, have Choko/Akura cast a level one Super Nova (acquired from Mother Claire, in either her house in Forles or upstairs aboard the Silver Noah once you've taken the airship to the Sky Castle), while your healer heals if necessary (what did you think they were there for?). When Choko/Akura runs out of Magic Points, on the next turn, swap the Romancing Stone over to Choko/Akura so that she can continue her assault on the Dark One unabated by the constraints of Magic Point consumption. Free of this burden, Choko/Akura can now cast a level three Vanish spell each turn for some real damage. Without your healer having the aid of the Romancing Stone, move them closer to Choko/Akura when she needs healing. This way they can reach the spunky red-head with a lower-leveled healing spell, thus slowing the draw on their Magic Point reserves. Hopefully they'll have enough to keep themselves and Choko alive for the remainder of the encounter. Any other characters attacking the Dark One during all this is pure gravy.

For those of you who never found Choko, don't worry, you still shouldn't have too much trouble—but it will take a lot longer. Start out by positioning either a character with the "Divide" spell, or if you don't think counterattacks will be a problem, one with a strong physical attack directly in front of the Dark One. To the immediate sides place two characters, each equipped with a Stick weapon. Next, place someone with a ranged weapon such as a Knife, Spear, Card or Gun behind your initial character, so that you now have four characters in front of the Dark One in a "T" formation. Three spaces away in any direction (east, west, south), place your healer (your best choices would be Shante or Diekbeck equipped with the Power Unit 19, as they would have both Cure and Resurrect), hopefully equipped with the Romancing Stone, but if not the Goddess Prayer or some other Magic Point-reducing article. Once the battle gets underway, have all the characters attack with their weapons except the one directly in front of the Dark One, who should cast a level one "Divide" (disregard this last bit if you chose to go with strictly physical attacks), thus eliminating any possible counterattack by your foe. If anyone is injured, be sure to have your healer cast a high-level healing spell from out of harm's way, or if you want to conserve your Magic Points, close in and cast one of a lower level. Should your healer run out of Magic Points, either use another of your party members to cast the healing spell (several characters have a healing spell, so chances are you'll have more than one possible healer in your party), or use a Magic Apple. Tha-tha-tha-tha-tha—that's all folks.

Meteor fun with the Dark One.

Sniff, sniff...does it smell like burning embryo in here, or is it just me?

That bean burrito Iga had earlier comes in real handy here.

You can't stop rock and roll...

SEALING THE DARK ONE

Sitting in a pool of his own life is the Dark One—baffled that mere humans could have the power to do such a thing. With his existence about to be capped, the Dark One decides that if he cannot control the world, he's gonna mess it up real good—or, better yet, destroy it!

When it seems as though all is lost, a vision of Kuku appears. She tells Arc not to give up! Since she was sucked into this unholy foe, her spirit now dwells inside the Dark One—and because of this, she can grab its figurative nads from within for a time, thus buying you the time needed to reseal this monster—for good!!! “But how?” asks Arc. The answer comes from someone else very dear to Arc's heart. By channeling the combined powers of himself and the five Guardians through his sword, as the spirit of Yoshua instructs, Arc seals the Dark One away—just as his father sought to do so many years ago.

A NEW BEGINNING...

After losing two of their friends, the party's not in a laughing mood.

Over at the wreckage of the Sky Castle, Elc struggles to his feet—Lieza lying on the ground beside him. With a little prodding, Lieza shakes off the pain and rises. One by one, the rest of the ancestors of the Seven Braves and their friends show themselves—everyone but Arc and Kuku, that is. It would seem they won—But at what cost their victory? Not only did two of their own pay the ultimate price, the damage inflicted on the world by the Dark One will take quite some time to recover from. Generations of hurt and sadness are just beginning. A short walk to the nearby cliff's edge reinforces this. But all is not lost, for in the end hope springs eternal here, too...
